IT'S POTHOLE SEASON...

Pothole Season Arrives In TRF

Ron Lindberg, city engineer from Stewart and Walker, said he has recently had several people asking him and complaining to him about the large number of potholes in Thief River Falls. City and county crews are busy repairing these potholes, but the potholes seem to be popping up — or down, faster than they can be repaired.

Potholes, according to an information sheet provided by Lindberg, are caused when the pavement or the material beneath it — called the base or subbase — can't support the weight or the traffic it carries. Two factors are always present in such a failure, water and traffic.

Typically, water seeps into the subbase either through cracks in the surface or from standing water along the side. If the water is improperly drained, it can soften the subbase, much like dry, hard ground softens to mud.

Over a period of time base material can shift or ooze to the side, leaving nothing to support the pavement above it. After awhile, repeated poundings of traffic cause the pavement to weaken, seriously crack, and ultimately cave in.

In cold climates the process may be dramatically accelerated due to freeze-thaw action. The water in the subbase freezes and, like the milk on the porch in winter, expands, pushing the pavement above up.

A rigid pavement may crack. If the expansion forces are severe, a piece of the pavement may actually pop out.

Come spring, or during any warming trend for that matter, ice melts, causing the subbase to contract and soften, often leaving a void behind.

The pavement, cracked by winter's expansion, deteriorates quickly under the load of traffic and ultimately caves in. The streets seem to break out in potholes overnight.

When the opportunity presented itself, the Times staff couldn't resist poking a little fun at the situation. A local merchant donated the use of a mannequin's hand, and the rest — well it was all done in the spirit of good fun.

BEWARE . . . it's pothole season again. Only a hand remains of this unfortunate victim.

Street And Highway Departments Report Savings This Winter

Residents of Northwest Minnesota can say they have benefited from even more than what mild winter temperatures have created psychologically this year. A savings has also been realized in snow removal operations and repairs to equipment.

"Through the first week of March, Pennington county has saved on about 200 hours less in overtime," said Wayne Olson, Pennington county engineer.

Olson said the savings might have been greater had not so many of the few snowfalls we did have, fallen on Friday or Friday afternoons. But as it turned out many of the snowfalls we did have, happened on Friday, Olson said. Everytime snow fell on Friday overtime was usually accumulated.

Money was also saved on damage and replacement costs for cutting edges, fuel and tires. The cost for repairs, fuel and tires would have been higher if they would have had to use the equipment more. Olson said however, that the warmer weather allowed for the county highway department to complete needed repairs to trucks and other equipment which offset some of the savings realized from less winter road work.

The warmer than usual weather also allowed for many other projects to be completed. Many of those projects were projects the county didn't have time to complete last summer. Those projects included completing project designs for the summer, checking signs, building flood gates and other odds and ends, Olson said.

Norman Blackstad, Thief River Falls street commissioner, said the city also saved money this winter. The fewer snow removal operations this winter contributed to the savings. He said he really wasn't sure how much or where the savings were realized, but he thought that crews were out less and equipment was probably in better condition.

The warmer temperatures allowed the street department to take the initiative to complete projects not done last summer. Blackstad said quite a few trees were cut in the cemetery compared to all of last year. Usually that sort of project is done during the summer or spring. Warmer temperatures also allowed the department to make equipment repairs and do other little projects.

LYNNAE BROTEN will skate her first solo performance in the Thief River Falls recreational skating association's skating show Saturday and Sunday at the sports arena. "Rocky Mountain High" is the theme of the number.

Creamery In Goodridge Plans Meeting Mar. 18

Farmers Co-op Creamery of Goodridge will hold its annual meeting on Wednesday March 18 at the city hall. The annual statement will be reviewed, and there will be an election for three directors. The terms of Bruce Solberg, LeRoy Johnson and George Pittman expire.

State Outlines Its Transportation Needs

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) Commissioner Leonard W. Levine today said that without action, much of the state's 12,100 mile trunk highway system will begin a rapid slide into an advanced stage of deterioration.

According to Levine, "an appropriate cycle of preserving and improving Minnesota's trunk highways would require 735 miles of various highway improvements, plus bridge repair and replacement, and other safety projects.".

Such an effort would require that $825 million be spent on highway construction each year — compared against the current $350 million.

"Even at the $825 million level," said Levine, "it will still take 20 years to catch up on the backlog of identified road and bridge needs."

Levine noted other transportation issues that must be addressed:

Governor Rudy Perpich recently challenged the Minnesota departments of transportation and public safety to develop a plan and a goal for significantly reducing serious injuries due to highway accidents by 1990. Mn-DOT is looking at creating a special highway safety category — targeting improvements to intersections. Preliminary figures show that during the two period of 1983-85, there were 1,200 intersections across the state at which six or more accidents occurred. Through engineering improvements, Mn-DOT believes it could — within the next three years — help reduce that number by 10 per cent.

Under current levels, congestion — particularly in urban settings — will be worse. It's predicted that in 20 years, it will take twice as long as it does today for the average motorist in an urban setting to make the trip from home to work and back.

Under current funding levels — in 20 years — 67 per cent of state trunk highway pavements will be rated in poor condition. One per cent are in poor condition today. Increasing use is taking its toll on many Minnesota roads not designed or built to handle heavier traffic.

It costs anywhere from 23-to-28 cents per mile to own and operate an automobile. Under current highway funding levels, motorists will face higher vehicle operating costs. By the late 1990's, it will cost Minnesotans an extra 3 cents per mile to pay for repairs and other impacts caused by driving over poorer roads. By accelerating the annual state trunk highway construction program to the $825 million mark — roads and bridges would be improved, — and that 3 cent figure would be cut in half.

Levine concluded, "If Minnesota is to meet its changing economic and social needs, as well as its congestion and highway safety needs, adequate construction and funding levels are necessary to insure that Minnesota's roads and bridges are properly improved and maintained."

MARCH 16-21 IS NATIONAL AGRICULTURE WEEK

Farmers Advised To Check Stored Grain For Damage

Assistant commissioner of agriculture Anne Kanten advised farmers to inspect their stored grain and take steps to reduce chances of spoilage brought on by mild winter temperatures.

Kanten warned farmers and elevator operators that the warm weather has the potential for much damage. "Even a 10 per cent loss on corn, wheat and soybeans at current market prices and storage levels would cost the state farm economy over $160 million in lost commodities," Kanten said.

"Excessive spoilage could devastate a farmer struggling in the poor economy," she added.

State grain inspectors are finding higher temperatures are causing bins to heat, thereby raising the moisture content of the stored grain to levels that can be dangerous.

Felix McGovern, assistant director of the Minnesota department of agriculture grain inspection division, said grain stored in the center of the bin has the greatest chance to spoil. "The heat builds in the center causing moisture to thaw which induces spoilage while the heat can induce insect growth," McGovern said.

The problem can be corrected by removing the grain from the bin, airing it out to dry and then storing it again. The aim is to reduce the moisture content to around 13 or 14 per cent, a target most elevators desire.

Kanten said stored grain should be checked at least once a week to prevent spoilage and loss to the state's farm economy.

THIS TRIO OF SKATERS will be one of several small groups performing on Saturday and Sunday when the Thief River Falls recreational skating association stages its annual Fantasy on Ice skating show at the sports arena. Members of the group are (left to right) Stephanie Vigen, Jocelyn Goldesberry and Kari DeLap and their number is entitled "The War Years."

League Finds MN Tax Plan Lacking

In testimony before the House taxes committee, Donald Slater, executive director of the League of Minnesota Cities, said Friday that the governor's plan for reforming the state's property tax system will actually increase the system's unfairness and instability.

Slater, the group's executive director, told the committee his group agrees with Governor Perpich's goals of simplifying the state's property tax system. But the governor's plan to increase funding for education, end general-purpose tax credits for property owners, and cease distribution of local government aid (LGA) funds will mean many cities will have to raise local taxes to fund essential services, he said.

Such an approach would "widen the gap between the haves and the have-nots of our communities," Slater said.

The governor's plan would eliminate LGA and most other credits which help to keep homeowners' taxes down, and replace them with a general education credit.

But because the new education credit would distribute future property tax relief funds inequitably, "the most economically disadvantaged communities which are struggling for survival will be treated the most harshly under this plan," according to Slater.

Per-capita property tax wealth in Minnesota ranges from a high of $36,774 in Breezy Point to $1,313 in Strathcona, he said.

Slater said the governor's proposals will not decrease the state's reliance on property taxes, which he called "relatively regressive, not based on ability to pay." Instead, they would force cities to rely more heavily on property tax,

Retirees Should Check Amount Of Taxes Withheld

If you recently retired, or you will retire in 1987, the IRS in Minnesota says now is a very good time to check over the amount of tax withheld from your pension or annuity.

"There are many changes from the 1986 tax reform act that could affect a retiree this year. If those changes mean you will need more tax withheld from a pension or annuity, it's best to act now," says C.D. Switzer, director of the IRS in Minnesota.

A retiree should give the payer of the pension or annuity a new W-4P form, "Withholding Certificate for Pension or Annuity Payments," or a substitute form furnished by the payer. The form includes a worksheet that can be used to figure the number of withholding allowances a retiree should claim.

Many deductions and credits retirees used in the past to claim additional withholding allowances have either been reduced or eliminated by the new tax law. For example, the special deduction for persons age 65 or older and the one for blind individuals, in the form of an additional personal exemption, has been reduced. Now retirees who itemize their deductions may have to lower the number of withholding allowances on their W-4P's.

More information is available by calling the IRS. If calling from outside the Twin Cities metro area

Make the Shot
HOLY BIBLE

One day I was playing golf with a close friend who was a golf pro. After I had made great effort to hit the ball as far as I could—and it went less distance than I could have thrown it—he shook his head and said, "You surely waste a lot of money."

"What's money got to do with my bad golf shot?" I asked.

"Well," he said. "You spend all that money on golf clubs, then won't let them do their work for you. You're trying to guide the ball. That's the club's job."

I pondered the pro's words. It suddenly occurred to me that what I do with a golf club, I often do with life, especially with God's Word—the Bible.

The Bible is filled with truth and guidance; with great life-principles. Rather than accepting by faith God's Word, I often try to "make the shot" all by myself, rather than allowing His truth to guide the "shots" of my life.

NOTICE TO HAULERS

Again this year, the Pennington County Sheriff's Office has been notified to strictly enforce load limits this spring. Over $2 million (state and local funds) was spent on maintenance and construction of Pennington County roads last year.

The roads are limited to weights as posted and are based on gross axle weights which include the weight of the vehicle and load it is carrying. If the roadway is not posted, the legal limit is 10,000 pounds gross weight per axle.

Heavy loads are proven to be the major factor in road damage. Please notify the Sheriff's Office or County Engineer's Office if you know of any overloads - it will protect roads your money helped build.

League Of Cities Finds Governor's Tax Plan Lacking

which would increase tax burdens for property owners in many cities.

In addition, Slater said the governor's plan includes at least $250 million in cuts to property tax relief programs. Cities have already lost $40 million a year in federal revenue sharing funds, and the governor's recommendation to impose sales taxes on local government purchases will mean another $100 million increase in costs.

In order to maintain vital services like police and fire protection, cities will have to make up those losses somehow, Slater said, which means property taxes in many cities will have to rise.

Only in Minnesota can you attend a hockey tournament and the tem- is 71 degrees. The hockey players entered the arena barefoot, wearing shorts and T-shirts, and carrying their hockey gear and sticks. Also in Minnesota, the poor little tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and crocuses have started to grow due to the mild upper 30's, 40's and 50's degree temperatures during several days and, then a day or two later the temperature is at a cold, windy ten degrees below zero. A rural Smiley family didn't have to go far to see a moose. A cow moose walked into their yard one, stayed around for nearly two hours, and appeared to be looking for food.

The moose are becoming very brave around the St. Hilaire area. Early one morning a St. Hilaire couple observed a cow moose and her two calves near their home and the moose and her calves were walking towards the park on the outskirts of the town. Then late one afternoon a rural family had a cow moose and her two calves come right up to their building site and the animals seemed unafraid of the family's dogs. In still another incident three moose, two older ones and a calf, came into the yard at a rural home and as the people were leaving their home they had to honk the car horn to get the animals to move off of their driveway. Several crows have been spotted in the area and that does help us to be more optimistic that spring may be right around the corner. An area family returned home recently from a vacation trip to several other states and their sentiments were that it was good to be back home in Minnesota.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Good Luck, Nordics!

Next to having our own Thief River Falls teams qualify for state tournament competition, we like to see the teams from our news coverage area get the opportunity to experience the thrills of state tourney experience. This week the Marshall County Central Nordics girls basketball team will be in that position, having pulled an upset victory over a previously undefeated Win-E-Mac (Winger-Erskine-McIntosh) team in the Region 8A championship.

It is all the more exciting for the MCC girls because they are the first team ever from Newfolden to earn entry into a state tournament. And they got there by exhibiting a brand of team play and cameraderie that should be a model for high school athletic teams everywhere.

After a season-opening loss to Thief River Falls, the Newfolden girls swept through the remainder of the season without a loss, many times tested but always showing the abilities to make the plays necessary for victory. They demonstrated that graphically in the championship game of Region 8A when they saw a seven-point lead against favored Win-E-Mac dissolve into a one-point deficit. Rather than accept discouragement and defeat, they worked all the harder and saw their effort rewarded with a state tournament trip.

Coach Tom Mjelde has never had a losing season at Newfolden and he has instilled his expectations for success in his players. Despite the fact that he has only one senior on the team this year — career 1,000 point scorer Jodi Foss — his players have shown a maturity that is seldom seen on high school squads. One of the reasons, we firmly believe, is that all five starters and the first reserve off the bench are scholastic honor students. Intelligence must be ranked with quickness and athletic ability in molding a successful basketball team.

We congratulate the Nordic girls for their success to date and know they will be fine representatives of this area in the state tournament. Good luck, Nordics!

Green Lawns Or Green Water

Following comments were written by Mary C. Turck of the Land Stewardship Project based in St. Paul:

Safe drinking water is taken for granted by most United States citizens. We assume that we can open a tap and drink the water without danger to our health, and look with some pity on people in other countries who must boil, filter or otherwise purify their drinking water. Yet, according to the Minneapolis Tribune "Tons of toxic chemicals pour into the nation's water supplies every day."

In 1974 the safe drinking water act, designed to ensure pure water, became part of the federal law. In 1982 the Environmental Protection agency found very serious problems with the nation's groundwater — from which our wells draw drinking water. In May of 1986 the Senate unanimously passed a bill designed to strengthen the safe drinking water act and protect our groundwater.

Pollutants in our groundwater come from a number of sources, including leaking hazardous wastes, road salt, oil wastes — and run-off from agricultural chemicals. Agricultural chemicals are used by farmers, of course — but they are also used in enormous quantities by town and city-dwellers on lawns and gardens. Agricultural chemicals include fertilizers, herbicides (weed-killers) and pesticides (insect-killers).

One of the great dangers when chemicals are used is run-off. Chemicals may be washed into sewer systems and streams and rivers when the rain washes them from fields or front lawns. Urban run-off is particularly potent, because the green spaces are often heavily fertilized and treated with other chemicals, and because when the chemicals are washed from lawns they are washed into the storm sewer system with rainwater. Thus, even if cities have separate storm and sanitary sewer systems the lawn chemicals do not go through the monitoring and treatment designed for waste purification.

Every year 1.08 billion pounds of pesticides are used in the United States. One-fifth of these pesticides are used in populated settings such as homes, lawns, work-places and golf courses. Overall use of pesticides has doubled in the past 20 years, leading Jay Feldman of the National Campaign Against the Misuse of Pesticides to say: "It is now a close call between home and agriculture for the greatest human exposure to pesticides."

Some arguments can be made for limited use of chemicals in farming. People argue that chemicals are needed to safeguard or increase production.

Chemical lawn care lacks this justification. We do not feed the world or our own families by having the cleanest, greenest lawn in town. When the potential costs of chemical pollution are so high for all of our society, the benefits of killing dandelions and keeping a bright, green lawn are not enough to justify pouring on chemicals.

There Must Be A Lesson Here . . .

Do you know who, in 1923, was:

(1) President of the largest steel company?
(2) President of the largest gas company?
(3) President of the New York Stock Exchange?
(4) The greatest wheat speculator?
(5) President of the Bank of International Settlement?
(6) The Great Bear of Wall Street?

In their day — as in most days — these would be considered among the nation's most successful men. At least they had found a means to wealth and influence. Fifty-five years later, in 1978, this is what had become of those men:

(1) The president of the largest steel company, Charles Schwab, had died a pauper.
(2) The president of the largest gas company, Howard Hopson, was insane.
(3) The president of the New York Stock Exchange, Richard Whitney, was released from prison to die at home.
(4) The greatest wheat speculator, Arthur Cooper, died abroad insolvent.
(5) The president of the Bank of International Settlement died by suicide.
(6) The Greatest Bear of Wall Street, Cozabee Rivermore, died by suicide.

In 1923 the same man won both the U.S. Open and Professional Golfers association tournaments. He was Gene Sarazen, and 55 years later he was still solvent and still playing golf. The obvious moral is to quit worrying about business and start playing golf.

Religious Reason

It's hard to believe, but the following answers to questions of a religious nature are purported to have been given by youngsters taking religious examinations:

Noah's wife was called Joan of Ark.

The Fifth Commandment is: Humor thy father and mother.

Holy acrimony is another name for marriage.

Lot's wife was a pillar of salt by day . . . but a ball of fire by night.

The Pope lives in a vacuum.

Christians can have only one wife. This is called monotony.

Borrowed Nonsense

A northwestern Minnesota farmer received a pair of boots as a gift from his son who had moved to Texas. He noted in a letter to the son that he liked the boots even if they were too tight. The son responded that he could get them stretched, but the father wrote back as follows:

"I think I'm gonna keep the boots as they are, son. I tug those boots on in the morning when Ma is nagging me to get going. I wear 'em when I chase the cows and mend the fences they keep tearing down. I wear 'em when I check the wheat for aphids, the corn for borers and the sunflowers for midge. I keep 'em on when the elevator tells me grain prices are going down and feed prices are going up. I'll tell you, son, the only pleasure I get all day is sittin' on the edge of the bed at night and pulling off them boots!"

Why is it that when you open a window yourself you get fresh air, but when someone else opens a window you get a draft?

There's a new diet out that seems to be quite effective. You can eat all you want of anything you don't like.

"I have a kind of contempt for intelligence all by itself. Coupled with energy and willingness, it'll go. Alone, it winds up riding the rails."
— John Hersey

The different between college and real life is that in college you are taught a lesson and then take a test; and in real life, you are given a test which results in learning a lesson.

— When it was learned that Thief River Falls would be represented in the state high school basketball tournament in Minneapolis this week, a lot of local men discovered they had urgent business in the Twin Cities.

— The problem, it appears, is how to increase taxes on business and at the same time to increase employment.

Tidbits From The Times

Thief River Falls

by Sharon LaCoursiere

March 18, 1937 Times

— Congratulations abounded in the Times to Rasmus Oen on the grand opening of his new store March 20. The store was located on the site of the old one, the corner of LaBree avenue and Third street, where Bostwick's is today. The store was ready to sell furniture, ready-to-wear men's, women's and children's clothing, groceries, hardware, shoes, appliances, dry goods, farm machinery, oil products, and just about anything you could name, and featured a "completely equipped ladies' rest room for the use of the public."

— Rasmus Oen, founder of the store, began his mercantile business with a tin shop in Thief River Falls in 1889. The Times said, "coming to what was then a village of less than 200 inhabitants without a railroad, Mr. Oen established his shop, which kept abreast of the fast developing community. The town had 840 residents by 1895, 1,350 in 1900, and then, after the Soo Line came in shortly after the turn of the century, the population reached the 3,000 mark by 1905. In addition to being an important railroad center, the opening of the Indian reservation for settlement brought new residents streaming into this section."

— Rasmus Oen was born in Aadalen in central Norway Aug. 6, 1864. He came to the United States in 1880 with his older brother and cousins, and settled to work on a farm near Albert Lea. He then went to Grafton, ND, where he did farm work for two years and then secured a position in a tin shop in Park River, ND. This is where he learned the trade that brought him to become a successful entrepreneur in Thief River Falls.

Common Science

by Joe Jeffers, Ph.D.

The twentieth century might well be called the Age of Plastics. Certainly these materials have worked their way into every nook and crany of modern life. They are found in the home as kitchenware, toys, telephones, pipes, flooring, siding, electrical insulation, and appliance housings to name a few. Over 100 pounds of plastics can be found in the typical automobile. Half of the products we buy, it seems, come wrapped in plastic film.

It is no surprise that plastics are so common. After all, they can be formed into almost any shape; they are very light in weight; they are resistant to environmental wear and tear; and because such a variety of plastics exist, they can be found with a wide range of physical properties.

It all began in 1868 when a $10,000 prize was offered for the development of a material that could substitute for ivory in billiard balls. A young man by the name of John Wesley Hyatt reacted nitric acid with cotton fiber and produced the plastic material celluloid. Even before World War II Bakelite, polyvinyl chloride, acrylic, polystyrene and nylon had been developed. Polyethylene soon followed. ethylene soon followed.

What exactly are plastics? Plastics capable of being soft and moldable at some time during their manufacture. They are long chains of molecules (polymers) that are made by chemically linking numerous smaller molecules (monomers). For example, hundreds of ethylene molecules may be linked together to make polyethylene. Many other ingredients are also added. Often the plastic polymer is too brittle or hard. Smaller molecules called plasticizers may be added as softeners. Pigments and dyes can add color. Stabilizers are added to improve resistance to heat, light, weather or aging. Fillers are used to give flame resistance, to improve electrical properties or simply to reduce costs.

There are two general types of plastics — thermosetting and thermoplastic. The thermoplastic ones can be formed into the desired shapes under heat and pressure and become solid as they cool. They can be reheated and reshaped again and again. Acrylics, nylons, polyethylenes, polystyrenes and vinyls are all examples of thermoplastic plastics. Thermosetting plastics become solids under heat and pressure. Once they are solids they cannot be reformed. Examples include expoxics, phenolics and urethanes.

Plastics are initially made into pellets, powders, film, sheets, fibers or liquids. These in turn can be fashioned into finished products by a variety of methods including molding, extruding and foaming. The foams are made by adding chemicals which release a gas as the plastic is formed. The gas is trapped in the structure of the plastic as it hardens, causing it to be puffed up.

More than 35 billion pounds of plastics are produced each year in the United States alone. Since plastics are durable and resist breaking down under natural conditions, they do represent an increasing waste disposal problem. The thermoplastics could be recycled. At the present, however, there is little economic incentive to do so.

Market information provided by the Chicago Board of Trade, 141 West Jackson Blvd., Chicago, IL 60604.

The federal government in 1987 has become the single biggest influence on prices for major U.S. farm commodities. It plays so overwhelming a role as to reduce the traditional determinants, supply and demand, into supporting roles.

Farmers are not alone as they watch for the latest news from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Commercial buyers, commodity traders and market analysts watch Congress and farm policy debates just as closely.

Government policies will affect not only prices for this fall's soybean and corn crops, but also the fate of the grain trade five years hence.

Government policies and programs have built a floor for American farmers' prices, and a ceiling for world prices, with billions of dollars — dollars raised more by the issuance of U.S. debt instruments than by revenues. As hot a topic as farm policy is in Washington, the federal deficit is still out in front.

While the Reagan administration calls for a continuation of the 1985 Food Security Act, with a 10 per cent cut in target prices, two other ideas are getting legislative attention right now.

One proposal has already taken form in the Harkin-Gephardt Save-the-Family-Farm Act. It calls for higer domestic prices for farm commodities and lower export prices for the surplus. To get that surplus down to a manageable size, mandatory acreage reduction would be implemented. Such a plan is not new. Similar plans have been considered during previous slumps in U.S. agriculture, but never tried.

The other idea has become the buzz-word in current policy debates — decoupling. It grew out of last year's 50-92 plan. Farmers could get 92 per cent of their deficiency payment while planting only half their usual acres and with no restriction on how the remaining half of land was used. If it leads to the acreage reductions it is designed to get, it could become a 0-100 plan by 1988.

David Bartholomew, grain market analyst with Merrill Lynch in Chicago, sees no chance for Harken-Gephardt. "Farmers will be included to support it, but they don't yet realize (the size of) the acreage cut involved. They just see the glamorous price per bushel," he said.

Sponsors Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa) and Rep. Richard Gephardt (D-Mo.) say the bill would reduce government expenditures and hasten government's withdrawal from the marketplace.

Bartholomew thinks government would have an administrative and foreign policy nightmare. "We would need to erect huge import barriers," he said, which would prevent marketing surplus on the world market at any price. "The government would have to issue export certificates. They tried it once before for wheat. It was very complicated to manage and open to fraud."

Both Bartholomew and Gordon Linn, president of Linnco Futures, Inc., a Chicago-based commodity trading firm, feel decoupling would better accomplish the stated Congressional objectives of lower expenditures, more competitive prices in the world market, while supporting farm income. "It will force the farmer to make better economic planting decisions," said Linn, since farmers would not be tied to a level of production as the basis for their payments. "Why do we continue to encourage farmers (through government programs) to produce what we don't need?"

Bartholomew said, "I've been an advocate of (decoupling) for 10 or 15 years. The problem with past programs is that they were based on bushels, bales, etc. Farmers figure their costs per acre and they have a better handle on those costs than ever before. With decoupling, production would definitely come down. I think they would get even greater response to the program if they guaranteed 100 per cent deficiency payment."

By paying farmers with generic certificates drawn on CCC stocks, production should fall and the surplus dwindle, Linn thinks. "In the long run, it should get government out of the grain business. The sooner the better."

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District I

One of the more complicated issues we deal with at the Legislature is our workers' compensation system, and I thought it might be useful to provide some general background information on how that insurance system works.

Workers' compensation insurance has been in existence in Minnesota since 1913, when the legislature passed a law requiring employers to carry such insurance. This legislation had become necessary because, with industrialization, there was a sharp increase in job-related accidents and injuries. At that time, there was so much waste in the litigation system, that less than half the money paid by employers actually reached the injured and disabled worker. The rest was absorbed by court costs and legal fees.

Many changes in the system have been made over the years, including changes in the limits of liability by the employer, the range of compensation amounts, medical coverage, and so on. But, in all these years, the workers' compensation insurance business has always remained a competitive, free market business. That is, insurance companies can compete for workers' compensation insurance policies just like any other type of insurance business.

However, in 1982 and 1983, the Minnesota Legislature made two major additions. In 1982, we restructured the "Workers' Compensation Assigned Risk Plan" for businesses which can't find workers' compensation insurance in the private sector. And, in 1983, we created the "State Fund Mutual Insurance Company," which is a non-profit, state-run insurance company that competes for workers' compensation business with the private sector.

Because of the recent crisis in the cost and availability of liability insurance in the private sector, both plans have seen a substantial increase in their volume of business over the last couple of years. The "Gross Premium Volume" for the State Insurance Plan increased from $3.7 million in 1984 to $31.5 million in 1986, and the assigned risk plan grew 50 per cent in 1986.

The state insurance plan is growing because its premiums are below the average rates in the private sector. One of the reasons for this is that the people who administer the state plan work intensely with both employers and employees to manage and control claims. That effort is not being made in the private sector.

The risk insurance plan is growing, not so much because of increased business from high-risk companies, but rather, because small businesses in general are finding it difficult to get insurance in the private sector — even though they may have an excellent safety record. Most insurance companies don't consider it worth their while to provide workers' compensation insurance for less than $500 in yearly premiums, and so they simply refuse insurance coverage to these small businesses.

One of the problems with the increased volume for the risk pool is that its "unfunded liability" has also increased — from $24 million in 1984 to $39 million in 1985. This means that it currently does not have the money to pay for estimated future claims of $39 million.

This is not a crisis situation by any means, but the legislature will probably have to take some action in the near future to make sure that our state workers' compensation insurance system remains on sound financial footing.

I anticipate that the workers' compensation legislative package for 1987 will focus on streamlining the administration of the system. We must devise a way to cut through the bureaucracy so that we can save time and money for employers and also speed up the process for injured workers.

Because of major adjustments in the 1983 workers' compensation reform act, the legislature is just now receiving status reports on the effects of that legislation. Employers have been generally satisfied with the 1983 reform measures — and the 1987 premium rates were reduced by an average of two per cent, the first premium reduction in many years. Hopefully, the good news on lower rates this year will foreshadow a trend of decreasing workers' compensation costs.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. At a retirement seminar, I heard a social security speaker use the term "Inquire before you retire." What does that mean and why is it important?

A. "Inquire before you retire" means that social security encourages people thinking about retirement to contact us first. We use this opportunity to help you prepare for retirement by providing an estimate of what you might receive, and to tell what evidence you will need when you decide to retire. In addition, we often find individuals who can continue working but still receive at least some retirement benefits based on their expected earnings, their social security estimate, and the social security work test which involves how much a person can earn before it affects his or her social security.

"Inquire before you retire" helps us better serve you and can be done by phone or in person. Any person intending to file a social security benefit claim of any type is encouraged to contact their local office first. There is no charge.

Q. I understand that when a person earns money, his supplemental security income payment could be reduced, depending on how much is earned. Does this apply to getting food stamps?

A. No. The value of the food coupons received is not counted as income and, therefore, does not reduce a person's SSI payment.

Q. I am self-employed and in a position to show low earnings this year. What effect would a loss have on my future social security? Climax, MN

A. First, this reply is not providing tax advice and assumes that your loss is possible through use of accepted accounting procedures. There are two basic effects: To receive social security there must be enough work (quarters of coverage) on a worker's earnings record. For disability this work credit must be within specific time frames before the disability began. If enough years of loss are shown it is a possible effect that neither you nor your survivors would be eligible for social security on your wage record because of a lack of coverage. The second potential effect is that benefits payable may be lower. This is because many years of work are used to determine a benefit amount and no earnings or low earnings could be reflected in lower benefits.

Working and receiving social security? This information might be important to you.

Q. How do I know if my 1986 earnings must be reported to social security?

A. Report your earnings directly to social security if:

(a) You are under age 65 and earned at least $5,760;

(b) age 65-69 and earned at least $7,800;

(c) attained age 70 in 1986 and earned at least $7,800; and

(c) you received any social security checks druing the year or feel you should have but didn't due to your previously estimated earnings.

An annual report form should be automatically mailed to you by the end of February, 1987, if you had estimated earnings over the above amounts. Please do not request the annual earnings report form before March 1, 1987.

This earnings report is not part of your tax return and must be received by social security by April 15, 1987. If you have a question call you local office toll free in Minnesota at 1-800-462-5360.

Q. What happens if I do not file my annual report of earnings but should have?

A. There are several possibilities. You may be underpaid and not get money due you timely or you may be overpaid and be fined a month's full check in addition to refunding the overpayment. The third possibility is that your estimated earnings were exactly right and you were paid properly. Why wonder? File the annual report with social security by April 15, 1987, if you need to.

Nation Salutes America's Farmers

Agriculture Day • March 20

Farmers and their families are consumers And taxpayers as well as best producers

Like everyone else, the American farmer is a consumer and a taxpayer as well as a producer.

Farmers pay about $4.4 billion in farm real estate taxes annually, and $500 million in personal property taxes.

In 1984, farm operators spent about $139 billion for goods and services to produce crops and livestock. They had available $34.6 billion in personal income from farm sources and $40.0 billion from nonfarm sources to spend for personal taxes, investments, and for the same things that city people buy.

Farmers' 1984 purchases included:

*9.5 billion for farm tractors and other motor vehicles, machinery and equipment. About 150,000 employees are required to produce this farm equipment.

*$13.6 billion for fuel, lubricants and maintenance for machinery and motor vehicles used in the farm business. Farming uses more petroleum than any other single industry.

*$24.0 billion for feed and seed.

*$8.9 billion for fertilizer and lime.

*Products containing 360 million pounds of rubber -- about 5 percent of the total used in the United States, or enough to put tires on nearly 7 million automobiles.

*13 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity -- about 2 percent of the nation's total. That's more than the annual residential use in all New England States plus Maryland, Kentucky and Washington, D.C.

*6½ million tons of steel in the form of farm machinery, trucks, cars, fencing and building materials. Farm use of steel accounts for 40,000 jobs in the steel industry.

Like everyone else, farmers feel the pinch of inflation. In the last 10 years, wage rates for farmworkers have gone up 90 percent, tractors and self-propelled machinery cost 166 percent more, taxes are up 63 percent and feeder livestock prices are up 66 percent.

Overall, the average cost of commodities, services, interest, taxes and farm wage rates has climbed 102 percent in the last 10 years. These sharp increases in the average include the much lower rates of inflation experienced in the past few years.

The 1982 Census of Agriculture reported that of the 2,240,976 farm operators, 1,982,022 owned 603.3 million acres of the 986.8 million acres of land in farms. Of the 383.5 million acres of rented land in farms, 13 percent was owned by farm operators and 87 percent was owned by nonoperator owners. Thus nonfarmers hold about 34 percent of all land in farms.

Agriculture nation's biggest Industry, largest employer

Agriculture is the nation's biggest industry -- farm assets totaled $956 billion on December 31, 1984.

Agriculture is also the nation's largest employer. Around 21.0 million people work in some phase of agriculture, from growing food and fiber to selling it at the supermarket.

Farming itself uses 2.7 million workers -- as many as the combined work forces of transportation, the steel industry, and the automobile industry. The nation's food and fiber system accounted for 18 percent of total GNP in 1984.

Agricultural production is conducted by 2.28 million farms. Recent tabulations show that in 1983:

*1,433,000 (60.5 percent of all farms) sold less than $20,000 worth of farm products per farm.

*272,000 (11.5 percent) sold farm products worth $20,000 to $40,000.

*381,000 (16.1 percent) sold farm products worth $40,000 to $100,000.

*284,000 (12.0 percent) sold farm products worth more than $100,000. Of these farms, 177,000 had sales totaling $100,000 to $200,000; 83,000 had sales of $200,000 to $500,000; and 24,000 had sales of $500,000 and over.

Agriculture requires the services of about 18.3 million people to store, transport, process and merchandise the output of the nation's farms.

Here are a few examples of where these people work:

*Meat and poultry industry, including meatpacking, prepared meats and poultry dressing plants, employs about 362,000 people and has a payroll of $4.5 billion.

*Dairy industry, including manufacturers of such products as fluid milk, concentrated and dried milk, cheese, butter, and ice cream, employs nearly 162,000 people and has a payroll of $1.6 billion.

*Canned, cured, and frozen food plants employ nearly 271,000 people and have payrolls of $2.8 billion.

*Cotton mills and finishing plants employ nearly 143,000 people and have payrolls of $1.6 billion.

THAT ADDS UP TO APPROXIMATELY ONE OUT OF EVERY FIVE JOBS IN PRIVATE ENTERPRISE.

What the farmer receives...

As gross payment from retail food prices the farmer receives (1984 annual average):

*34 cents per $1 spent in grocery stores for U.S. farm grown food.

*58 cents per $1 spent for choice beef.

*43 cents for eggs selling for 80 cents per dozen at retail.

*4.3 cents for the wheat in a 54 cent loaf of white bread.

FOR THEIR LABOR, CAPITAL AND MANAGEMENT TO THE FARM:

*138.7 billion in gross sales of crops and livestock. Their net return for family resources was $34.6 billion.

(USDA Statistical Information)

Marketers Get food to tables

The American Farmer is linked to you by a complex food marketing system.

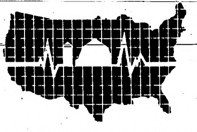
Last year consumers spent $332 billion for U.S. farm-produced foods. About $243 billion of that was to get the food from the farm to your table.

The food was assembled, inspected, graded, stored, processed, packaged, wholesaled and retailed -- more than 300 million tons of it. To reach you, this food traveled across 173,800 miles of railroads, 3.4 million miles of highways and 26,000 miles of improved waterways.

The foods that poured into your supermarket came in 10,000 to 15,000 different products — many of which did not even exist 5 years ago and may very well not exist 5 years from now. That's because Americans are attracted to newer foods with more built-in conveniences — as well as food in attractive packages that preserve the quality.

Packaging and transportation cost $43 billion last year — and might well have been considerably more except for vigorous competition among truckers and railroads, and recent innovations in packaging and handling methods.

The food "marketing" system has developed a computerized checkout, and is working on an inventory and ordering system that might further streamline food retailing and help to simplify shopping.



AGRICULTURE
America's Heartbeat
Vital to Us All

Americans get more food For their money today

Not only have food prices risen comparatively little in the past few years, family income buys considerably more food today partly because agriculture has become much more efficient and partly because consumer incomes have risen faster than food prices. For example, here's what the average U.S. worker could buy with an hour's pay in 1950 and in 1984.

| White bread | 10.1 lbs. | 15.4 lbs. |
| Frying chickens | 2.5 lbs. | 10.3 lbs. |
| Milk | 8.0 qts. | 14.6 qts. |
| Potatoes, fresh | 32.7 lbs. | 34.4 lbs. |
| Eggs | 2.4 doz. | 8.3 doz. |
| Pork | 2.7 lbs. | 5.1 lbs. |

Our diets are more varied. The American consumer is eating 35 percent more poultry but eight percent less beef per person than 10 years ago. And eating more fresh vegetables (18 percent) and more fresh fruits (13 percent).

U.S. production Up 2½ times Levels of 30's

Total agricultural production is more than 2½ times the levels of 1930, even though the agricultural resource base has not substantially changed.

The growth in farm output has come from the higher productivity of agricultural resources rather than from greater input use.

The aggregate number of breeding animals and the total inputs to agriculture in 1930 differ by less than 5 percent from the amounts used in 1984. Yet, crop production is nearly 2.5 times the 1930 level, livestock production 2.1 times the 1930 level and total farm output about 2.6 times the 1930 level.

This implies that the productivity of land is 2½ times the productivity in 1930, that breeding animals are twice as productive as in 1930 and that overall, the farm sector is 2.5 times as productive as in 1930.

The new technology which made these gains possible changed the mix of other inputs used. Fertilizer consumption is 15 times 1930 levels, feed concentrates 2.3 times 1930 levels, tractor horsepower 12 times 1930 levels and tractor numbers five times the 1930 numbers.

On balance, purchased inputs in 1983 are 2.3 times those of 1930, while the farm labor input is only 18 percent of farm employment in 1930. As a result, farms have expanded in size and become more dependent on capital and purchases from the nonfarm economy.

If the trends of the last 14 or so years continue, total farm output per unit of input should grow at about 2 percent per year. Crop production per acre should increase about 2 percent per year and the production per breeding unit should increase about 1 percent per year.

Significant changes in the prices of farm inputs relative to farm commodity prices, or changes in the mix of commodities produced, will affect the actual trends that occur.

Federal funds reaching nonmetro counties averaged $2,139 per person in 1980, up 68 percent from 1976. Funding to metro counties averaged $2,529, up 63 percent since 1976.

ON AN ACRE OF LAND. . . .

Farmers produce 80 percent more crop

American farmers today produce over 80 percent more crop output on an acre of land than did their fathers. Today, one hour of farm labor produces 16 times as much food and other crops as it did in the 1919-21 period.

One farmworker now supplies enough food and fiber for 79 people. Only 10 years ago, the farmworker was producing enough for 59. Because of the farmer's efficient output, we can enjoy a satisfying quantity and variety of food.

In 1984 for example, Americans consumed an average of 144 pounds (retail weight) of beef, veal, pork, lamb and mutton; 68 pounds of chicken and turkey; 88 pounds of fresh fruits; 75 pounds of fresh vegetables; 308 pounds of dairy products and 73 pounds of potatoes.

Farmers produce not only enough for us, but also enough to make large quantities of farm products available for international trade.

We export more farm products than anyone else in the world.

In 1984, production from one-third (111 million acres) of America's cropland went overseas.

Until recently, farm exports had set successive records, reaching a peak of $43.8 billion in fiscal year 1981. Because of lower prices and reduced foreign demand, however, exports in fiscal year 1984 totaled $38 billion and were declining further in 1985.

Even so, farm exports still contributed a net of $19.1 billion to our balance of trade in 1984, which is another way of saying we got over twice as much for our food and fiber exports as we paid out for food and fiber imports.

Lincoln Musical 'The King And I' To Open Thursday

Curtain will go up Thursday at 7 p.m. for a three-night run of the Lincoln high school music department's musical "The King and I". The musical is under the Direction of Connie Stock and will be presented Thursday through Saturday at 7 p.m. in the school auditorium. Tickets at $3 each are available at Larson Music company.

Rodgers and Hammersteins' popular musical is an adaptation of Margaret Landon's novel "Anna and the King of Siam", based on the true story of an English governess, Anna Leonowens, who went to the Oriental court of Siam in the early 1860's to teach English (and democracy) to the king's 67 children.

The king sent for the governess as part of his plan to modernize his country. Her strong will and the king's absolute power give the story humor, sensitivity and warmth amidst its conflict.

Opening in New York City in March of 1951, "The King and I" ran for 1,246 performances and won a Tony award for best musical in 1951-52. The film version starring Yul Brynner and Deborah Kerr was released in 1956 and won six Academy Awards. A revival of the play in 1877 in New York ran for 695 performances.

Jodi Anderson is cast in the lead role of Anna while Rick Rosetta plays the part of the King Mongkut. Anna Leonowens' son Louis is played by Jason Tangquist while the King's son Prince Chululongkorn is played by Bill Nygaard.

Other members of the large cast include Pat Fisher, Captain Orton; Lance Bugge and Todd Mack, Deckhands; Ryanell Johnson, Chad Numedahl, Rick Looker and Shawn Heinze, Slaves; Keith Olson, Interpreter; Joe Drevlow, The Kralahome; Karina Krepp, Heather Adamson, Trudi Brown, Tawnya Foldoe, Dorinda Grandbois, Dianna Olson, Anne Nabben, Stephanie Altepeter, Wendy Gustafson and Wendy Swanson, Dancers;

CORRECTION

It has been called to our attention that an omission was made in one portion of the findings of fact regarding the Elm Lake water impoundment project as published in a recent editon of the Times. Full text of Finding No. 7 should read: "That a wildlife depredation problem exists in the area and depredation pressure may increase in the immediate area of this project, but it is determined the benefits of the project far exceed and diminish this possible loss." The TRAGIC HOME FIRE at 502 East First street Saturday afternoon claimed the life of Mrs. Emma Lindahl, 95, who was in an upstairs room of the home, owned by Luverne Lindahl. Another family member reportedly left cooking oil heating on the stove and fell asleep. Firemen are shown attempting to contain the blaze in order to enter Mrs. Lindahl's upstairs room.

Fires Destroy 2 Homes; One Life Lost Saturday

Fire destroyed two homes in the Thief River Falls area this weekend and took the life of an elderly woman.

Mrs. Emma Lindahl, 95, died of smoke inhalation Saturday. Mrs. Lindahl was in an upstairs bedroom when fire destroyed the home of Luverne Lindahl. Funeral services for her will be held Wednesday at 11 a.m. at Trinity Lutheran church. Funeral arrangements were made by Green Funeral home.

Fire Chief Dave Bjorkman reported the fire department received a call at 5:38 p.m. of a fire at 502 East First street in Thief River Falls. Bjorkman said the fire apparently started at the kitchen stove where cooking oil caught fire. When the fire department arrived the firemen were only able to contain the fire. In attempting to extinguish the fire, one fireman suffered smoke inhalation. He was treated and released from Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls.

Bjorkman said that at the time he was unaware that another family member had escaped the fire. Bjorkman thought the house was probably a total loss.

Deputy state fire marshall Kevin Schumann is investigating the fire. Schumann said another family member was cooking something on the stove, left the kitchen and fell asleep in another room. When he awoke, smoke and flames were filling the house and he was unable to reach Emma Lindahl, who was in an upstairs room.

Bjorkman said a second fire, which destroyed the Duane Jensen home of rural Thief River Falls was reported to the fire department at 8:36 p.m. Sunday. When the fire department arrived at the home three miles north on highway 59 from the junction of highway one and 59, fire completely engulfed the home. Bjorkman said Monday morning that the cause of the fire was unknown. No one was at home at the time of the fire and no injuries were reported. Bjorkman said the fire was reported by someone who was passing by the home and noticed flames and smoke coming through the roof.

Bjorkman said civil defense sirens were accidently triggered when the fire department received the call Sunday evening. Apparently a transmitter next to the microphone was bumped by mistake, which set off alarms throughout the city and phones ringing at the law enforcement center in Thief River Falls.

MN Women's Fund Seeks Opportunity To Remove Barriers

Minnesota Women's fund, the first statewide grantmaking fund in Minnesota, is looking for opportunities to address the causes perpetuating barriers to growth and choice for women and girls. Its purpose is to remove barriers.

Any organization dedicated to the same goals can apply for grants from Minnesota Women's fund. Carmen Marvel, program outreach consultant, was recently in Thief River Falls to promote the organization.

Marvel said many people don't seem to be aware of the organization or the possible benefits which could come from the organization. It is her duty to make it known to everyone and provide technical assistance in writing grants.

According to the organization, 74 per cent of Minnesotans living in poverty are women and children; Minnesota women earn 57 cents for every dollar men earn; half of women working full-time year round earn less than $12,500 per year; less than six per cent of Minnesota women working full-time earn $20,000 or more; about one of five women over 65 is poor; women living alone are the largest and poorest group among the elderly; and half of single parent families headed by Black, Indian and Hispanic women are living in poverty in Minnesota.

According to the organization, in rural Minnesota, obstacles to advancement are often more severe. Services and support system important to education and employment — such as child care, affordable family health care, reliable transportation — are less accessible. Available jobs are frequently low-wage, part-time or seasonal, and often do not offer fringe benefits.

Despite a growing recognition of these problems, programs for women and girls continue to receive a meager share of funding dollars across the country. A recent study of Minnesota's top 33 grantmakers found that only three per cent of all grants in a given year were aimed at programs that specifically benefit women and girls.

The Minnesota Women's fund is a catalyst promoting change in the distribution of resources to assure that the needs of women and girls are more adequately addressed.

Workshops are being planned to help groups find out more about their organization and write out grants, Manvel said. Workshops are tentatively planned for April 7 and 8 between 3 and 6 p.m. The first workshop, April 7, will be held in the Roseau city hall. The second workshop will be held in Crookston at the Diane Markel counseling center, 102 North Broadway.

The stated mission of the Minnesota Women's fund is to assist in removing barriers to the economic, educational, physical, emotional, social, artistic and personal growth of women and girls, and to encourage the advancement and full participation of women and girls in society.

The fund will: support program that advocate policy and system change on issues that affect women and girls; act as a catalyst to increase awareness of and support for both identified and emerging interests of women and girls; encourage programs that will enable women and women's organizations to achieve economic self-sufficiency; foster prevention, early intervention, support, and enrichment programs targeted at young girls and adolescents; support organizations which increase the range of choices available to women and girls; and give high priority to organizations in which women are the primary decision-makers.

Special consideration will be given to projects which address the needs of low income women and children and issues of discrimination.

Free Glaucoma Screening Given

To help promote "Save Your Vision" month, the Medicine Shoppe in Thief River Falls is offering a free glaucoma screening in cooperation with the American Optometric association.

This potentially blinding disease is more likely to develop after age 35, and particularly after age 60. Today, there are two million Americans over 35 who have glaucoma, and the number is expected to rise since the number of older adults in the population is increasing rapidly.

Food Nutrients Often Lost In Preparation

Fresh, frozen, canned, bottled, boxed or wrapped — which of these foods are most nutritious? What happens to the vitamins and minerals when food is processed?

A thorough review of these techniques and their impact on nutrients has just been completed by the Institute of Food Technologists, the professional society of food scientists. And the verdict is that they're all about equally nutritious.

The IFT expert panel on food safety and nutrition points out that often it is home preparation of foods that causes the more significant nutrient losses. Processing is essential in part because without it concentrations of various nutrients would naturally decrease over time in unprocessed foods and eventually wholesomeness would be lost.

"Many people don't realize that when food is processed, whether it's in the home or by commercial organizations, a certain amount of nutrient loss is inevitable," explains Dr. Joanne Slavin, of the department of food science and nutrition at the University of Minnesota, IFT regional communicator for Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota.

"But these losses are quite similar, irrespective of the process, and attention to a few details can minimize them," Dr. Slavin said.

The IFT expert panel has just published its findings in a scientific status summary, "Effects of Food Processing on Nutritive Values," which appears in the current issue of "Food Technology."

Up to half of vitamins and minerals can be lost by improper preparation, overcooking or poor storage in the home, the expert panel notes. Minerals and water-soluble vitamins (C, and B vitamins) are "leached" from (washed out of) foods during cooking or repeated regrigeration and reheating.

"Although home meal preparation can result in substantial nutrient losses, these losses can be mimimized with proper cooking procedures," the expert panel points out.

These include:

+ Refrain from excessive trimming and over-chopping of vegetables.

+ Cook them in covered pans (to shorten cooking time and reduce water needed).

+ Cook with a minimum amount of water.

+ Cook vegetables only until tender. (Don't overcook).

+ Use steam cooking or stir-frying instead of boilingf or frying.

In general, hotter and quicker cooking reduces the amount of mutrients lost. (Thus, using high-wattage and shorter times for microwave cooking is also preferred.)

"On an overall basis, commercial food processing techniques in use today result in some nutritional losses, but these are minimal compared to the increase in the amount, variety and wholesomeness of food that processing brings to us," the IFT panel concludes.

And cooking (boiling) pasta can lead to the loss of nearly all of its manganese, iron, copper, phosphorus, zinc, calcium and magnesium.

It's also important to store foods properly. Holding foods in a freezer at 15 degrees fahrenheit or above can deplete many vitamins, depending on the packaging. If held at that temperature for six months, for example, asparagus, peas or lima beans lose half their vitamin C.

"Storage at zero degrees or lower results in excellent retention of vitamins for up to six months," they caution.

Modern technologies developed by food scientists help to maximize nutrient retention. For example, a High Temperature Short Time (HTST) technique used to pasteurize milk results "in little or no loss of vitamin A, niacin or riboflavin" (B-2) in milk. When HTST processing is used for fruit juices, it retains much of the vitamin C.

Over half of the minerals can be lost during canning (home or commercial) of spinach, beans and tomatoes if the liquid is not consumed, the IFT Expert Panel points out. But new commercial egetable processing techniques (such as HTST) reduce these losses, especially of thiamin (B-1) and pyridoxine (B-6).

And using irradiation instead of conventional thermal canning to process pork actually results in increased thiamin retention.

Fermentation — used in making such products as aged cheese, bread, sauerkraut, pickles, summer sausage and yogurt — can increase B-vitamin levels because the microbes that cause the fermenting produce these nutrients at the same time.

Berean League Speaker To Talk In Karlstad

Wayne Olhoft of the Berean League of Minnesota will speak at the Karlstad community center on April 4 at 7:30 p.m. Olhoft, executive director of the league, has been invited by concerned citizens and parents in the area to explain the league's work and answer questions. He will also be addressing current political issues of concern and explaining how citizens can be more effective in the political process.

The Berean league was formed to establish and promote the use of biblical principles in government and community. Olhoft, who will be speaking on the League, served 10 years in the Minnesota Senate from 1973-82. He now co-ordinates work of the league full time through its office in St. Paul and speaks to a wide variety of groups concerned about current issues facing local and state government.

The INSIDE SCOOP

by GAYLE BORCHERT

This week all the students in choir are busy putting the final rehearsals in for their performance of "The King and I." The musical will be performed March 26, 27 and 28 in the Lincoln auditorium. Curtain time will be 7 p.m. Mrs. Stock, director of the musical, was gracious enough to answer a few questions.

"The King and I" is a Rodgers and Hammerstein musical that doesn't really fit into a general category. Mrs. Stock told me that it is taken from a book written by Margaret Landon, that was based on an actual story. It is about an Englishwoman, Ann, who leaves her native England and goes to Siam, which is now known as Thailand. The musical is set in the 1860s and includes many humorous conflicts between Ann and the king. The musical also includes scenes showing the differences between eastern and western culture. Also included are themes of romance and tragedy. The musical will include several dance numbers that are being choreographed by Suzanne Tutin, a student at Northland. Mrs. Stock says she is happy with the cast and that rehearsals are going well. Advance tickets can be purchased at Larson Music company.

Practice for cheerleading try-outs is being held this week and next. On Monday, March 23, the hockey try-outs will be held and on Monday, March 30, floor try-outs for football and basketball will be held.

There is a new fitness and weightlifting record board up in the halls of Lincoln. It holds the names of winners of physical fitness tests and weightlifting records.

"I would encourage all of you to look not only at production agriculture but also at the other areas," Dr. Sahlstrom told the students present. He encouraged the students to learn how to participate in the process so they can influence government and to work together to insure prosperity for rural America.

Using only a few statistics, Dr. Sahlstrom impressed on his listeners that 23 per cent of the nation's workforce is involved in one form of agriculture or another. In Minnesota that percentage increases to 40 per cent. It takes 15 people to serve each farmer on the average in Minnesota, the speaker said.

He pointed out that there are four billion people in the world, about one-fourth of whom live in China. He broke the population numbers down to about 250 million in the United States, four million in Minnesota and 30,000 to 50,000 in northwestern Minnesota, emphasizing that although the numbers are few in this area, the work they do in agriculture is extremely important.

"Rural areas set the standards for the life of our nation," Dr. Sahlstrom said. "The Midwest is a center for honesty, credibility and honoring your word."

He urged students to consider going on to help agriculture and to realize how important they are.

Business Property Tax In Minnesota Highest In Region

A major research study by the Minnesota Taxpayers association has found the state property tax system to be unique among the 50 states. According to the study, no other state has as many classifications of property for tax purposes, nor has such an extensive property tax relief system for homeowners.

This information is a part of a research study released by the Minnesota Taxpayers association (MTA) titled, "CLASSIFIED: Minnesota's Property Tax System". This book explains the basics of the property tax and sketches the history of the tax in Minnesota.

One of the results of Minnesota's unique system is the high tax burden on business real estate. In the five state area of Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa and Wisconsin, the study found taxes paid in 1985 on business real estate to be the highest in Minnesota. In contrast, Minnesota ranked lowest in this region in residential property taxes, and second lowest in taxes on agricultural land.

On business property, the average 1985 effective tax rate in Minnesota was 3.41 per cent of real estate market value. In lowest ranking North Dakota, businesses paid only 1.52 per cent of value. This means that on average, on a $100,000 property, the Minnesota business would have paid $3,410 compared to $1,520 in North Dakota, a difference of 125 per cent. Iowa ranked second with an effective rate of 2.83 per cent of market value, and Wisconsin was third with 2.45 per cent. South Dakota ranked fourth with an effective tax rate of 2.34 per cent.

Homeowners in Minnesota paid an average effective tax rate equal to 1.23 per cent of their real estate value, while in Wisconsin homeowners paid an average rate of 2.22 per cent, the highest rate in the study. This means that, on a $75,000 house, on average, the Wisconsin homeowner would have paid $1,665 compared to $923 for the average Minnesota homeowner. South Dakota ranked second with an effective rate of 2.19 per cent, Iowa ranked third with a rate of 2.02 per cent; and North Dakota ranked fourth with an effective rate of 1.36 per cent.

On average, property taxes on Minnesota farms were lower than those in Iowa, Wisconsin and South Dakota. Farmers in North Dakota pay the lowest taxes in this region.

Minnesota has a staggering number of property classes, by some counts over 70. Most states have three or less. Also, in Minnesota, a large share of state sales and income taxes go to reduce property taxes for homeowners, farmers and renters. The differences in tax laws between Minnesota and other states create differences in tax burdens.

These differences are important for the border counties in Minnesota. For instance, Clay county (MN) businesses paid 1985 property taxes at an average rate equal to 2.31 per cent of property value, while across the Red river in Cass county (ND), the average business tax rate was only 1.52 per cent, or 34 per cent less. Homeowners paid less in Cass county however, 1.07 per cent compared to 1.35 per cent in Clay county.

Farmers in the Clay county area paid at an average rate equal to 0.92 per cent of real estate market value versus 0.57 per cent in Cass county. The MTA study found that these differences occurred for almost all border areas of Minnesota.

The MTA study notes that Minnesota's property tax system is the most complex in the nation. "There is general agreement that the property tax system must be reformed. This study provides the reader with a guide to understanding the system and possible changes," a spokesman for the taxpayers association said.

The 80-page booklet contains a variety of statistical and historical information. The Minnesota Taxpayers association is a non-profit, non-partisan research organization that has provided information on taxes and government in Minnesota for over 60 years. This study is free to all members of the MTA. Others wishing to purchase the study should contact the MTA at (612) 224-7477. One copy is also available at the Times office.

WMB Takes First Step To Locate Waste Facilities

Minnesota waste management board (WMB) has taken the first step in a process to find a volunteer location for a facility that will treat and store hazardous industrial waste residues. Meeting in St. Cloud Thursday, the WMB accepted resolutions from four counties — Carlton, Itasca, Nobles and Red Lake — interested in the possibility of hosting the facility.

A fifth resolution from Aitkin county was tabled.

Thursday's action by the WMB does not mean the plant will be built in one of the four counties, according to WMB chairman Joe Pavelich.

"The program is just beginning," Pavelich said. "We will continue to accept resolutions from other counties interested in participating, but it's completely voluntary. The resolutions of interest simply allow the board to provide some financial assistance to help counties study the proposal in more detail."

Under the program, established by the 1986 Minnesota Legislature, any county that passes a resolution of interest can receive up to $4,000 per month from the state while potential locations for the facility are identified and evaluated. The resolutions are non-binding: during the preliminary evaluation period a county can withdraw from the program at any time.

The legislature authorized the WMB to ask counties to volunteer locations for a facility that will process residues from hazardous waste treatment, primarily ash from hazardous waste incinerators and metal sludges from circuit board manufacturers and metal-plating companies. The facility will first "stabilize" the residues, turning the waste into a solid form that cannot break down and pollute the environment, then contain and monitor the stabilized waste in an above-ground structure. Stabilization will render much of the waste non-hazardous.

By early 1988 the WMB will narrow the list of counties with suitable locations to four and negotiate contracts providing each county with up to $150,000 per year for two years while locations are evaluated further. The WMB will also seek proposals from companies interested in building and operating the facility.

The county finally selected to host the stabilization and containment facility will negotiate with the WMB for a package of long-term benefits that could include cash payments, tax breaks for local landowners, increased local government aids and other forms of assistance.

"This facility will be a source of industrial development for the host county," Pavelich noted, "and it will benefit Minnesota industries by providing an environmentally safe management alternative for these types of waste. But we won't force this project on anyone. Local officials and residents must make up their own minds whether to pursue this."

Safety Should Be Spring Planting Season Concern

Before farmers head for the field they should give some serious thought to safety. More farms accidents occur in March, during the busy planting season, than at any other time of the year.

A number of factors contribute to the problem. Human factors — fatigue, carelessness and preoccupation — affect the compatibility between operator and machine. In the rush to get spring planting done, there's always the temptation to hurry to take extra risks and shortcuts.

Whatever the cause, the result is a loss of some kind. While damage to equipment alone is expensive and time-consuming, accidents that result in injury or death are tragic, painful losses.

A quick check of equipment, preseason preparation, and a review of potential hazards are low-cost steps farmers can take to prevent field accidents. Engineering has done much to eliminate or minimize potential hazards, but strict adherence to recommended safe operating practices is the only guarantee of safe operation.

Operators of folding planters should avoid contact with electrical lines when folding, unfolding and transporting. They should be aware of the need for proper ballasting, especially with full tanks and hoppers, follow recommended travel speeds, and remember that the long wheelbase planter will 'cut the corner' during turns.

For operating safety, review operator manuals before each season begins. The manual provides a checklist of safe operating procedures and outlines potential safety hazards. Exceed the capabilities of machinery and the equipment stops or fails. But humans have variable limitations, depending on environmental conditions, attitudes and physical condition.

Operators should get to know their own limitations. Learn to recognize the indicators that are the human body's signals of potential overload.

When accidents occur, the operator most likely:

+ Forgot something — To watch for power lines, to take the basic precautions that can prevent trouble, to turn the machine off before working on it;

+ Took a shortcut — Such as failing to weight the front end of a tractor properly in the rush to get into the field.

+ Ignored a warning — Such as "do not use torch to free frozen augers" or "Certain type of fertilizers may explode when heated."

+ Used unsafe practices — "Didn't bother" to fold the planter because the next field was "just a little way down the road."

+ Was preoccupied — Worried too much about getting the field done before bad weather hit, got hung up on some personal concern and let the mind wander away from the job at hand;

+ Failed to recognize the hazard — Leaving no time for corrective action.

Recognizing the hazards of machine operation and acting to reduce these hazards in every way possible are the only ways to avoid accidents. Manufacturers try to reduce potential hazards through equipment design, and put safety messages in the operator's manual and on the machines to help you operate machines safely.

But in the end, only you are in charge of the situation — you are the ultimate contributor to a safe spring planting season.

Central Livestock Agrees To Stay With Stockyards

Central Livestock association has announced that it will stay at the West Fargo stockyards.

An agreement has been reached between Central Livestock association and the new management of the West Fargo stockyards to continue this long-term working relationship, started when the stockyards were first built over 50 years ago.

In a joint statement, Donald G. Kampmeier, president and general manager of Central Livestock association, and Daniel Hofland, president of West Fargo stockyards, said, "We have settled our differences and will work together toward the improvement of the West Fargo stockyards. Specifically, we will be working toward more promotion, better pricing methods, more and better customer service and improved attitudes, plus the over-all structure of the stockyards in order to improve the efficiency of this market."

West Fargo stockyards is the north country's largest livestock market. In 1986, the stockyards sold over 172,000 cattle, 102,000 hogs and 25,000 sheep.

Dear Readers,
St. Augustine made this comment approximately 400 A.D.: "The laying out of the body, the burial rites . . . are more of a consolation to the living than of assistance to the dead." Since that time, many other qualified persons in religion and psychology have agreed. The funeral service impresses the reality of death, while it brings together relatives and friends to share the burden of grief of the bereaved family.
Respectfully,

TIMES Around The Region

by Sharon LaCoursiere

First Time Tourney Turnout

Newfolden — The Marshall County Central school board met in Special session last week to make a decision to close school Thursday and Friday for the girls' state basketball tournament. They also decided that the district should pay tournament expenses of the team that are not reimbursed by the state high school league, and to allow the school band to stay at the tournament as long as the girls are playing. By the time this goes to press, we'll all know if the girls won or lost, but whichever the case may be, it is obvious that the school board and the entire area are 100 per cent behind the team.

Second Two-Headed Calf

Holt — Local residents reported a two-headed calf born March 15 near Holt. The calf was born with two heads and four eyes and managed to survive a few days before dying. This calf was the second two-headed calf reported in the Times' region within a month.

Area Winner

Hallock — Jeanette Bedard of Hallock was one of four Minnesotans who won a microwave in the American Dairy Association's National "Cook Regional With Cheese, Glorious Cheese" contest. Willard and LaVerne Thompson of Plainview, MN, were the winners of a Nissan station wagon valued at more than $11,000.

Auditions For Plaza Suite

Karlstad — The Karlstad community theatre will begin auditions for the Neil Simon comedy, "Plaza Suite," March 27, 30 and 31. Production will be either late May or early June. Seven males and five females are needed for the production, in addition to people for lighting, sound, props, costumes and set construction. For information, call Robert Gust at 436-2374 or 436-2107.

Looking Good, Guys

Warren — The Warren Jaycees and the Warren-Alvarado Wrestling club joined forces to buy 37 new uniforms for the grade school wrestlers to wear to the regional and state Jaycee wrestling tournaments March 28 and April 4.

Too True

Williams — The Williams Northern Light recently printed parts of this article. Then the Bagley Farmers Independent ran a similar quip, so here appear the best of both. Feel free to check those that apply. You know you are getting older when...

Almost everything hurts. What doesn't hurt, doesn't work any more.

It feels like the morning after the night before, and you haven't been anywhere.

All the names in your little black book end in M.D.

You get winded playing chess.

You look forward to a dull evening.

You still chase women (or men), but have forgotten why.

You turn off the lights for economic, not romantic, reasons.

Your knees buckle and your belt won't.

You are 17 around the neck, 42 around the waist, and 226 around the golf course.

You sink your teeth into a steak and they stay there.

You try to straighten the wrinkles in your stockings and find you aren't wearing any.

A little old gray-haired person tries to help you across the street and you find out it's your spouse.

You begin to outlive enthusiasm.

You decide to procrastinate but never get around to it.

You know all the answers, but nobody asks you the questions.

You walk with your head held high, trying to get used to your bifocals.

Your favorite part of the newspaper is "Turning Back the Times."

You sit in a rocking chair and can't get it going.

You regret all those temptations you resisted.

Just A Little Late

Oslo — Efforts of the Oslo Superstars 4-H club, community businesses and organizations and local volunteers over the past three years have finally produced a brand new warming house for Oslo skaters. Only problem is, now that they have the warming house, where is the ice? Well, it'll be all ready and waiting for next year.

Kittson County Investigations

Hallock — The Kittson county sheriff's department reported that the Humboldt school had been broken into the afternoon of March 9, and that four of the six windows had been shot out of Svea town hall near Donaldson on March 10. Both cases are under investigation by the sheriff's department.

Spare Time Success

Greenbush — A former resident of Greenbush, Robert Kammen, has published his first book. Kammen, presently a postmaster in Mott, ND, has sold 125,000 copies of his book, "The Watcher," published by Random House in 1985. Other scheduled publications by Kammen are "Big Horn Gunfighter," "The Church at Devils Ford," "Long Henry," "The Ambushers" and "Sombrero." Kammen has been writing for the past 15 years and continues to do his writing in his spare time. He has several relatives in the Greenbush area, including uncles Tommy and Jens Pederson.

Believe It Or Not

Warren — The Warren Sheaf reports that Warren Sheriff Brekke received a telephone call from a man identified as Norman Claude Vandal, who wanted to know about the Minnesota statute of limitations. Vandal is the Canadian citizen who allegedly robbed Peoples State Bank in Warren, taking $9,800 at gunpoint February 28, 1985.

Help Wanted

Williams — The high percentage of low income households in the city of Williams should aid in promoting grants and low interest loans from various government sources to help the city improve their sewer system. At the last census, 80 per cent of the population was in the low to moderate income level, reported grantswriter John Wynne. The city is faced with a total sewer improvement project cost of $355,000, according to the Floan and Sanders engineering firm.

Yes Sir, Ma'am, Mom

Wannaska — A mother of three children, ages five, three and two, was recently called to serve her country with the U.S. Army reserve in Honduras. Spec. 4 Gail Briese of Wannaska spent 14 days in February helping supply electricity to a temporary base camp supporting the building of a 3.4-mile farm-to-market road in that country. Briese is a member of the Minnesota National Guard and one of several soilders sent to Honduras to participate in "Blazing Trails '87" in which Honduran and American soldiers are training together.

Fatal Crash

Hallock — Blair McVean, 22, of Hallock, died as a result of injuries received in a car accident near Grand Forks Saturday, March 14. He is the son of E. G. "Bud" and Alta McVean of Hallock, and was serving with the U.S. Air Force at Grand Forks Air Force base at the time of his death. McVean was a passenger in a car driven by Andrew Dibacco of Emerado, ND, which collided with a vehicle driven by Lon Carpenter of Grand Forks at the intersection of county road 5, three miles south of highway 2 in Grand Forks county at 1:15 a.m. Dibacco and Carpenter were dead at the scene of the accident and McVean died March 15 at United hospital in Grand Forks.

Fire And Smoke

Hallock — Faulty water line heat tape was the cause of a fire east of Hallock Tuesday, March 10, that damaged a mobile home owned by James Nordling. Fire Chief Duane Lyberg said that the heat tape caused a smoldering fire in the insulation and vapor barrier beneath the home and fire fighters had to tear out an extensive amount of insulation, and go through the flooring inside the back bedroom to extinguish the smoldering fire. There were no injuries reported and Lyberg estimated damages to the home at $2,500 to $3,000.

Burglaries And Thefts

Karlstad — Investigation by the Kittson county sheriff's department led to information that two male juveniles from the Karlstad area were responsible for several incidents in the Kittson county area. The juveniles are being petitioned for the May 25, 1986, burglary of the Tri-County high school music and drama departments, the February 14 theft of two stereo speakers and tape case containing fifty tapes from a car belonging to Louis England, the burglary of the Keith Lindgren farm between Karlstad and Greenbush, and the December, 1985, theft of a radio-cassette player from the Karlstad school. Recovered property has been valued at approximately $1,000.

Ambulance Accident

Ada — The Norman county ambulance was involved in a one-vehicle accident March 16 near Georgetown. The ambulance swerved on icy roads, rolled on its side in the ditch and caught on fire. At the time of the accident, the ambulance was transporting a seven-year-old patient and his mother to St. Luke's hospital in Fargo, ND. There were no injuries in the accident, but the vehicle was considered a total loss from fire damage. Faulty wiring is suspected as the cause of the fire.

Karlstad Fun

Karlstad — The annual elementary basketball tournament at Karlstad is slated to begin at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, March 29. The Lions of Karlstad will serve a klub supper from 4 to 6:30 that afternoon and anyone purchasing a supper ticket will be admitted to the tournament free with that same ticket. The Karlstad Booster club will present a carnival at the old gym during the tournament, beginning at 1:30, featuring booths and games for the kiddies.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

I am writing this letter in regard to the Ducks Unlimited and watershed project at Elm Lake. I would like, at this time, to express my situation as a result of a project like this.

I have 160 acres about five miles SE of this proposed dam. Basically this land has no bad problems with drainage. But at the proposed 1,141 foot level I will have exactly one foot of fall for five miles because the bottom of my drainage ditch is 1,140. At this rate my quarter will be worthless as far as drainage is concerned. I have discussed my situation with three different professionals and they also agree with my conclusions.

I have to do one of two things to save this land:

(1) Dike this quarter and pump the water off over the dike which would cost me about $5,000 to do, or

(2) Give the land back to Federal Land Bank and lose a good quarter of land.

Next, I have to face the damage the waterfowl will cause to my barley or wheat field. They can destroy an 80-acre field in about one week which will cost about $8,000 (an amount that would make a payment on the farm or pay other farming expenses. We were told that the waterfowl threat would not get worse due to this project, but can you imagine adding 1,000 acres of wetlands and not having more waterfowl in the area?

I was interviewed by an area daily newspaper and the reporter stated that only diving ducks would be coming to this area which should be of no worry to us. We all realize, however, that mallards and geese will also be drawn to this area (just plain common sense). When I approached the reporter with the suggestion that he give up $8,000 of his salary, he flatly refused.

The reporter then suggested that I get hail insurance to pay for the damage (hail insurance does not cover this, I replied.). He then suggested Federal Crop Insurance (that also will not cover). Then the reporter suggested that I look 'til I find some type of insurance that does!

CAN YOU IMAGINE THE LACK OF UNDERSTANDING THAT A LOT OF PEOPLE HAVE?

As far as hunting goes, we are all hunters in this area and enjoy the sport very much. We have many hunters on our land throughout the various hunting seasons. I have never posted my land unless for some unusual circumstances.

Now, looking back to the elk situation in Grygla, a situation which should not have been as great a problem as it became if this would have been managed correctly. The DNR could have issued about 15 permits to hunt the elk each year and have given the proceeds to the farmers for damages (a process that would repeat itself each year as the young calves are born). In this way the DNR, the farmers and the hunters would be satisfied and the state of Minnesota could be proud of their elk project. But because of mismanagement of the elk, this project was a total disaster.

We feel that the Elm Lake project will also be a total disaster. Let me explain: When the project was first introduced to the farmers, we were told that the watershed would work with the farmers, making sure there would be no problems. As time went on the farmers began to realize that the watershed had no intention of listening to our suggestions and the problems that would occur. They had only one intent: to do it their way and only their way.

As a result the farmers have been meeting and have decided to post every acre of private land. As a result we all lose again. In summary, one cannot have a million dollar project and more waterfowl, dumping the problems that will result on the townships and farmers, and then state that we do not understand what the engineers claim will be of value to us.

We all live and work in this area and have for many years. Who could better understand than the farmers . . . we know every inch of our land and what can happen to it and the crops as a result of Mother Nature better than any professionals who just try to visualize things on paper only.

YOU HAVE TO LIVE IT BEFORE YOU CAN UNDERSTAND IT!!

City To Test Lights On Downtown TRF Streets Tuesday

Lighting of downtown Thief River Falls will get a fresh look Tuesday evening and hopefully businessmen and residents will come away enlightened (pardon the pun).

City superintendent of utilities, John T. Anderson, and other luminaries will cast a new light on considerations to downtown lighting. Approximately nine different plans for streets and intersections will be tested on Horace avenue from First street to Fourth street 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Different types of poles and bulbs in different combinations will be tested. Anderson said those who plan to participate should begin to look at the poles already up in downtown Thief River Falls. Some have arms and some don't, he said. The participants should decide which they believe is more attractive and does a better job lighting the streets.

Different types of bulbs will also be tested and in different combinations. Anderson said the effect will show the streets under normal lighting to floodlighting. Anderson said 250 to 400 watt high pressure sodium bulbs will be tested in different combinations and over different parts of the street.

Anderson said the different scenaries will give all of the participants an opportunity to decide what they like. The test will also give them an opportunity to look around and decide what they like and dislike about current lighting.

The final consideration to be given will, of course, shed some light on the cost.

MCC Girls 1-2 At State Basketball Tournament

First-ever Marshall County Central appearance at the Minnesota Class A state girls high school basketball tournament produced a bundle of memories and a 1-2 record for the Nordics, who returned home from six-day Twin Cities jaunt Sunday afternoon.

Marxhall County Central state tournament play started Thursday night at the Met Center in Bloomington, where the Region 8A champion Nordics lost a 40-36 opening round quarterfinal game to Rochester Lourdes, a team that went on to win the 1987 state title.

A Friday morning consolation round semifinal game against Fairfax-Gibbon at Normandale Community College produced a 55-52 Marshall County Central victory.

Back at the Met Center Saturday morning for the consolation final, Marshall County Central lost to Tracy-Milroy 59-39.

Marshall County Central challenged eventual state champion Rochester Lourdes the full 32 minutes, but the Nordics were never fully able to gain an edge in the all-important momentum department as the No. 7-ranked Eagles held on for a 40-36 victory in Thursday's final Class A quarterfinal game.

The loss ended a 23-game Marshall County Central winning streak. The Nordics hadn't lost since a 43-40 season-opening defeat at the hands of Class AA Thief River Falls back in November. Lourdes took a 24-2 record into the Friday semifinals.

Lourdes got off to a 12-6 first quarter lead and controlled most of the action. The Rochester school led 21-12 at halftime, and took a 35-27 lead into the fourth quarter. Kelli Anderson's basket at the buzzer made it look close at the end. Lourdes went the entire fourth quarter without a field goal, but five free throws proved to be enough of a cusion.

Anderson, a 5-9 sophomore, led all scorers with 17 points. Teammate Jodi Foss had 13. All-stater Laurie Decker, a 6-foot senior center, led Lourdes with 13 points. Catherine Restovich had 11.

The game matched the tournament's smallest school (MCC with an enrollment of 104 students in grades 10-12) against the largest school in the Class A field (Lourdes with 374 students).

Jodi Foss, the lone senior on the Marshall County Central roster, scored a game-high 22 points, including the key points in the final seconds that enabled the Nordics to gain a state tournament victory with a 55-52 consolation semifinal decision over Fairfax-Gibbon Saturday morning.

Foss connected on two free throws with 19 seconds left for a 53-50 Marshall County Central lead, and the Nordics maintained possession because Fairfax-Gibbon center Jodi Hurney picked up her sixth foul on the play. That enabled Marshall County Central to eat up 12 more seconds before the Nordics surrendered a basket to Coleen Palmer with seven seconds left in a 53-52 game.

But Foss clinched it with two more free throws with just four seconds on the clock to finish off a 10-point fourth quarter for the 5-6 guard.

Fairfax-Gibbon started with an 18-12 first quarter lead. It stayed a six-point ball game at intermission, 29-23, but Marshall County Central cut the gap to just 41-39 as the third quarter ended.

Kelli Anderson added 16 points to the Marshall County Central total.

Both teams were productive at the free throw line, where Marshall County Central was 15-for-21 and Fairfax-Gibbon was 18-for-23.

The losers finished the year at 20-6.

A strong Tracy-Milroy team used its full-court pressure defense to produce a 19-2 first quarter lead and went on to beat Marshal County Central 59-39 Saturday morning for the consolation title.

Marshall County Central regrouped after the rocky start, with the Nordics being out-scored just 40-37 the rest of the way. But that didn't make up the early deficit. Tracy-Milroy led 30-15 at halftime and had a 40-22 third quarter cushion.

Jodi Foss and Kelli Anderson led the Nordics with 12 and 11 points, respecitvely. Mary Jo Miller, a 5-5 guard and one of the top players in the state, led the winners with 20 points. Shari Heidebrink had 16 and Elaine Eischens netted 13.

Marshall County Central scored 11 times from the field compared to 26 Tracy-Milroy field goals. The Nordics went 17-for-26 at the line, where the winners were 7-for-13.

Tracy-Milroy finished the year 23-2.

Prowlers' 1986-87 Swimming Review . . .

TRF Strong Dual Meet Team

Thief River Falls boys continued their success in dual meet competition this winter when the Prowlers went 9-2 and extended their dual meet high school swimming record to 18-3 over the past two years.

"I guess our emphasis was on winning dual meets," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Jay Forney. "Given the swimmers we had this year, we had a very good dual meet team. We had depth. There were only a few teams in our section who would have beaten us this year," he said, pointing to Bemidji, Brainerd, and Fergus Falls.

Indeed, the Prowlers' only losses this year both came against Bemidji — a 95-74 verdict when they met in Thief River Falls Jan. 16, and a deceiving 123-49 blow-out when the shorthanded Prowlers visited Bemidji for a Feb. 10 rematch. Brainerd and Fergus Falls weren't on the Thief River Falls dual meet schedule.

But while the Prowlers excelled in regular season one-on-one team match-ups in recent years, they've been middle-of-the-pack performers at the post-season Section 8 meet, turning in an eighth place finish in the 13-team field in 1987. That's because dual meet competition rewards teams with depth; multiple-team events reward teams with outstanding individuals.

"We probably finished about where we belonged at sections," said Forney. "We possibly could have moved up a couple of notches to sixth, but it's just that everybody's best was better than our best."

Things will change in 1987-88, warned Forney. "We'll have a pretty danged good swimmer in each event next year, but we won't have the depth. "The emphasis of our program will change next year; it'll be geared to pushing those individuals to a top six spot at section. We'll point our season to the section meet instead of the dual meet record."

This year's Thief River Falls team was led in scoring by senior Rick Rosetta with 240.9 points. Junior Paul Giauque was close behind with 234.50 points. Senior Joe Drevlow and junior Brian Schindler ranked third and fourth, respectively, with 175.15 and 174.75 points.

"We're going to losing some good seniors," said Forney, "but our juniors did very well this year, and we're going to ask the freshmen (Tofte was the only sophomore on the team) to make some drastic improvements next year. We'll be pushing them next year."

Forney has high expectations for individuals like Giauque, Schindler, Thompson, Olson, Tofte, and junior Brian Joppru (70.25 points this winter). Giauque (100 butterfly) and Thompson (diving) were state meet qualifiers this season.

"We saw a lot of improvement this year," Forney said. "Almost all of them showed personal improvement. I think they all swam as well as they could."

Thief River Falls dual meet wins this winter came against Detroit Lakes 51-32, 112-56; Park Rapids 103-68; Fosston 115-48, 53-37; Moorhead 111-57; Grand Forks 102-66; and Fargo South 88-84. Thief River Falls' multiple-team outings included a fourth place finish in the eight-team Prowler relays; a fifth place finish in the six-team Brainerd Invitational; a fourth place finish in the eight-team Fosston Invitational; a fifth place finish in the 10-team Grand Forks Invitational; and a third place finish in the six-team Bemidji Invitational.

Angie Sinn served as Forney's assistant coach.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Giving May Be Inhibited

Guest editorial by Wayne Olhoft, executive director of the Berean League:

A pending attempt by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) to clarify lobbying regulations by non-profit organizations could shut down an array of interest groups and seriously inhibit giving by charitable foundations. The 20 pages of proposed rules released in November have generated shock waves among non-profit groups (known as 51 (c)(3) groups). They are exempted from paying income taxes due to their charitable, religious or educational work. The broad definitions proposed to clarify a 1976 law would affect non-profit groups working on anything from welfare to anti-communism if they refer to public policy.

Current law requires that non-profits do no more than an insubstantial amount of lobbying. This would continue to be five per cent of their expenditures on grassroots lobbying and no more than 20 per cent on lobbying overall. Groups which exceed these limits are taxed at a 25-per cent rate of the excess. Organizations consistently exceeding the limits lose their tax exempt status and much funding since donors no longer get a tax deduction for contributions.

The definition of what is to be included as a lobbying expense has been radically broadened. If a background research report on an emerging issue ultimately recommends that some legislation be adopted, it would be considered lobbying. This would be true even though no attempt was made to contact legislators or to urge citizens to do so.

If this same report only pertained to legislation but expressed no explicit view on the legislation, it would be deemed lobbying if it is "selectively disseminated to persons reasonably expected to share a common view of the legislation." This becomes an impossible test for organizations that send information to just their members or allow the report to be explained at a conference.

It is anticipated that the accounting records necessary to allocate daily office expenses to various projects would be enormous. An administrator would never know for sure which expenses might become classified as lobbying in the future. Also, the new rules would allocate the future cost of a direct mail fundraising letter to grassroots lobbying if it mentioned in passing its views on an issue. Now a proportionate share of the cost is allocated between fundraising and lobbying.

The proposed rules would kill some existing groups since the rules are retroactive to 1976. Some groups would have to pay back-taxes, penalties and interest on the newly determined amounts which exceed the five and 20 per cent limits. This would bankrupt many. Others would lose their tax exempt status and, consequently, their funding source since contributions to them would no longer be deductible. What's particularly irritating here is that groups which conscientiously abided by the current rules, may be wiped out by an arbitrary decision to reexamine old records and apply new rules.

If the rules are adopted, they would unquestionably have a chilling affect on the funding patterns of charitable foundations. They must be careful to avoid funding groups which do substantial lobbying. Therefore, even though an advocacy group does mostly research on policy issues and little lobbying, a foundation would shy away from funding the group since research reports may get classed as lobbying.

The deadline for commenting on the regulations has been extended from February 3 to April 3. The IRS is asking for specific comments on how the rules may affect groups and suggestions for improving them. However, most leaders are urging that the whole set be thrown out. Since Congress can override any action of the IRS, letters to Congressmen urging them to see that more reasonable rules are proposed are appropriate.

Concerned citizens may find the proposed rules in the Federal Register of November 5, 1986. Send comments or a request to withdraw the regulations to: Commissioner of Revenue, CC:LR:T:EE-154-78, Washington, DC 20224. For further information (I suggest reading the proposed regulations before calling) you can contact Paul G. Accettura, 202-566-3544. Copies of detailed explanations of the rules may be obtained from the Berean League, 2875 Snelling Ave. N., St. Paul, MN 55113, (612) 633-0654.

Hard To Find Sympathy

Columnist Mike Royko of the Chicago Tribune wrote as follows about layoffs at the major television network:

I was sitting around feeling depressed by all the layoffs at CBS. As you may have read. about 200 newspeople have been axed.

And I became even more depressed when I read an op-ed column in The New York Times written by Dan Rather, the famous anchor creature.

In it, he bemoaned the dismissals of his coworkers, invoked the sainted memory of Edward R. Murrow and wondered whether the bottom line had now become more important to CBS than being a shining beacon of news, a sacred public trust.

And I was about to dash off an angry note to the hard-eyed corporate executives at CBS, when a memory drifted back to me. It was the summer of 1980, and I was in Detroit writing about the Republican convention.

Like much of the press, I was staying in a huge, modern hotel in the renovated section of the riverfront.

Each day, I would leave the hotel and walk a few blocks to the Joe Louis Arena, where the convention was being held. I'm not sure exactly how far it way. Not more than a stretch of the legs. And it was a pleasant walk. Since the area was crawling with politicians and reporters, I'd usually bump into someone I knew for a chat.

While leaving the hotel one morning, I noticed a long, black limousine pull up in front. The driver got out and opened the door. and into the limo stepped a network anchorman.

A moment later, another limo arrived to pick up another TV anchor.

As I walked to the convention hall, I noticed that in the heavy traffic, the limos weren't making any better time than I was. Had I jogged, I would have beaten them there.

At the time, I shrugged it off as further evidence that we live in a whacky world. Hoofing with me on the pavement were many convention delegates — presumably the most important people at the convention. Among them were congressmen, state officials and others of some stature. But riding those few blocks in limos were guys who were — blow-dried hair and hype aside — nothing more than reporters.

It didn't surprise me, though because that was the way networks did things. Anchormen and other TV news stars didn't walk or ride in a cab. They had limos. It was sort of a statement about how important they were, those creatures who sat in the boxes high above the convention floor and told the rest of the country what was going on.

I remembered those limos when I read Rather's poignant words. And I remembered other stories, about anchormen insisting that the networks rent plush houses for them so they wouldn't have to stay in hotels with the rest of the herd.

But nowhere in Rather's New York Times article were such indulgences mentioned. Nor did he say anything about his $2 million-a-year salary. Or the many other so-called stars at his network who earn $1 million a year, $500,000 a year or $300,000 a year.

Apparently it didn't occur to him that the people who keep the books at CBS might not have been inclined to chop as many heads had there not been so many limos and rented houses, and if some of the news readers — or their agents — hadn't demanded seven-figure salaries.

Outstanding reporters can be hired for $60,000 a year. Many are working for less. So, for what it costs to pay someone $1 million to read the news, 15 good reporters could be hired to actually go out and find the news.

So while I sympathize with the CBS newspeople who lost their jobs and hope that they all land something soon, I can do without Rather's warnings that somehow the future of democracy is threatened.

As Rather said in his article: "Journailsm . . . is a light on the horizon. A beacon that helps the citizens of a democracy find their way."

Sure it is, Dan. But most citizens manage to find their way five or six blocks without the help of a limo.

Borrowed Nonsense

First grader to mother: "Teacher says my best subject is coloring. I think that's what I'll take when I go to college."

A young man was arrested recently in New York City for selling a liquid he claimed would provide eternal youth. A check of the record showed he was a repeat violator. He had been arrested for the same offense in 1967, 1936, 1895, 1854 and 1814.

Many people go south in the winter to live in the kind of weather they complained about all last summer.

Several weeks after ordering a book from a publishing company, the customer received this note: "Many thanks for your recent order. While we would like to fill it at once, recent improvements in our handling procedures will result in a delay of shipping."

YOUR TIMES

Although I am no longer from the Thief River Falls area, I still have a great interest in the Elm Lake Project.

I have read about the arguments by persons opposed to the project as well as persons supporting it.

It is my opinion that this project could be carried out with great success and benefit everyone involved. One of the problems I see is that the people opposed to the project automatically assume the worst is going to happen. They don't think of the many advantages a project such as this could have.

I was very disappointed after reading the letter by Joe Philipp. Joe made some good points, but I don't think he was being fair by speaking for the entire community. Joe commented that "I don't know of any farmer in this area who is going to allow any public hunting on ag. land as a result of this project." Perhaps there are many in the area who oppose the project, but I'm sure there are some who view this a very worthwhile project.

Joe also stated that he was against Ducks Unlimited and that "I don't think people living in the city would appreciate me driving on their lawn in the rain and setting up a dozen decoys and leaving garbage up and down the street." A statement such as this immediately labels all sportsmen as inconsiderate slobs who have no respect for private property. As any good sportsman knows this is very far from the truth and only pertains to the very small minority who give good sportsmen a bad name.

In closing I would like to say that I hope this project is reviewed very closely by all people opposed to it so that they can see a positive side to it, and realize that it is an improvement project not intended to create problems.

Signed:
A Proud Ducks Unlimited Member

Education Photos From 1885-1925 Shown At School

"Minnesota School Days," an exhibit that captures the flavor of school life in the times when today's senior citizens were young, opened Friday at Franklin middle school, room 507 and continues until Thursday of this week. It is open daily between 8 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

This photographic exhibit, on loan from the Minnesota Historical society, examines Minnesota education between 1885 and 1925. At the turn of the century the passing of the one-room schoolhouse marked a transition in Minnesota education. Schools were becoming larger, the curriculum included training in art, vocational and physical education and progressive reforms stressed "hands-on" learning in the classroom.

These photographs, from the collections of the Minnesota Historical society, depict life at school in an era of change — a bridge between a promising beginning and the continuing commitment of people in Minnesota to education.

Say Child Care Services Won't Meet Demands

Unless present trends are reversed, Minnesota will not have enough child care available to meet the growing needs of parents with young children.

That's one conclusion of a new report, "Making Child Care Work," presented to the 1987 Legislature by the Minnesota council on Children, Youth and Families. The council, which is a part of the state department of human services (DHS), prepared the report through a special child-care task force.

"This is an important report," said DHS commissioner Sandra Gardebring, "since it speaks to an issue that has a direct impact on the daily quality of life of so many Minnesotans. I'm confident the report will help us reach consensus about just what needs to be done to improve the availability — and the quality — of child care in our state."

The report shows that although the number of available child-care openings increased dramatically in the early part of the decade, very little growth has taken place in the past three years. Since demand for child-care services is increasing, shortage of available child care are causing hardships for parents throughout the state.

The report makes recommendations about what needs to be done to encourage growth in the state's child-care system, as well as ways in which the current system could be made more effective.

It asks for these new initiatives:

+ Making more child care available for infants, sick children, and school-age children;

+ Establishing a child-care services unit at the state level to develop new resources and programs;

+ Developing incentives to encourage more providers to offer child-care services.

The report also says that licensing child-care providers does not restrict the growth of the system, but rather supports it.

Dennis DeMers of East Grand Forks, who chaired the task force that prepared the report, said its support for the licensing system is based on "our belief that state agencies will work together to make the present system more effective."

Rural Enterprise Alternative Meet Set At Bemidji

Rural Enterprise Alternative Possibilities (REAP), an alternate income workshop, will be held at the Bemidji AVTI on Saturday, April 4. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. The workshop will offer landowners exposure to personal business experiences in non-traditional enterprises. Approximately 25-30 entrepreneurs and specialists will share their business experiences in a broad range of topics.

With the depressed rural economy, many rural landowners are interested in alternative or supplemental income to allow them to continue to live in rural Minnesota. There is no single solution to the problems facing the agricultural industry today, but there are thousands of solutions for individuals to better themselves through their own personal initiative.

Workshop topics will include everything from "Blueberry Production" and "Vegetable Production" to "Bed and Breakfast Establishments" and "Specialty Crop Marketing" in addition to about 25 other topics. Workshop participants will be able to attend five or six 40-minute mini-sessions on their choice of subjects.

Pre-registration is strongly encouraged as it is anticipated that a maximum of 300 participants will be able to attend. Registration fee of $8 per individual includes lunch. Pre-registration forms are available at local soil and water conservation district office and extension service offices.

Betty Bergland Will Lecture At Northland Thur.

Betty Bergland, a specialist in American studies focusing on the immigrant experience, will discuss autobiographies written by immigrants from many different ethnic groups in "Through Their Own Eyes: The World of the Immigrant child in Immigrant Biography" at Northland community college Thursday at 8 p.m. in the theatre. She will concentrate, especially, on stories about children and childhood.

Autobiographies of immigrants frequently focus much attention on their childhood years and what it felt like to be "different" growing up in a new homeland. Children particularly had a sense of being caught between two worlds, between their new American way of life and the customs and traditions of their native lands. These two worlds often were in conflict, and the children's values and identities were shaped by the problems they experienced and the creative solutions.

Bergland's presentation gives her audience — many of whom are the children and grandchildren of immigrants — a richer understanding and appreciation of their own heritage, and she encourages discussion of the ideas she has raised at the end of her lecture.

Realtors Hear Kettleson And Manke Tuesday

James Manke, executive vice president of the Minnesota Association of Realtors, and Alden Kettleson, real estate broker from Bemidji, were guest speakers when the Thief River Falls board of realtors met last Tuesday in Thief River Falls.

Manke told the group that two million people in the United States have real estate licenses and 770,000 are classified as realtors. About 12,500 in Minnesota are licensed and there are 36 local boards of realtors functioning in the state. He also said the price of a medium priced home in the state has increased 3.3 per cent and prices are expected to continue to climb.

Interest rates paid for home purchasing in 1987 average 9.7 per cent compared to an average of 12.5 per cent in 1986. Thirty-two per cent of all sales are financed through the Federal Housing administration and concern was expressed that proposed changes in FHA would require additional fees for the home buyer to pay.

Realtors in general oppose changes in FHA laws and the mortgage deed tax which Gov. Perpich has proposed increasing from $2.20 per $1,000 to $4.40.

Questions Raised Over Water Sources In TRF

Thief River Falls city council voted Tuesday night to accept a water treatment plant compliance agreement with the state in which the city agreed to meet state guidelines by September 30, 1993, but serious questions were raised as to just why an intake line was moved in the mid 1970's from a better location on the Red Lake River to a location just above the dam on Thief Lake and whether the city had really investigated the possibilities of ground water wells.

City Councilman Kenneth Murphy, utilities chairman, said that while the investigation into ground water wells was not an expensive proposition because it used information provided by the government, it did establish that such an undertaking would not be cost effective. He said it would take a miminum of 10 wells and several lift stations from quite a distance out to provide for the needs of the city.

Murphy said he wasn't sure what the reasons were for moving the intake line, but thought the reasons involved poorly functioning line and high repair costs. It was established however, that the water in the Red Lake River was better than the Thief Lake River, but it would not do anything to change the current problem of turbidity.

March 31 has been set as the date for a public hearing on the 1987 street improvement project. City Clerk Jerry Wigness said about 500 notices had been sent out to land owners affected by the street improvement project. However, after a recommendation from J.J. Womack, finance committee chairman, the Barzen avenue project has been eliminated. The change makes it necessary for another public hearing for a replacement project suggested and adopted at the meeting. Instead of Barzen avenue, the proposed project has been extended to include East Greenwood avenue. The public hearing for East Greenwood will be held on April 7. The bid opening for the project will be held on May 21.

Problem-correcting meetings between members of the Thief River Falls city council, the school district and Pennington county commissioners were discussed as a way to prevent budget surprises and common problems. Councilman Don Barron suggested the meetings as a way of solving problems and increasing dialogue. While getting support to host the first such meeting, questions were also raised about its budgetary purpose.

Mayor Bob Carlson said he supported the meetings, but did not think that it would help direct the efforts of legislators to reduce the state budget. He also said he was not supportive of any group that would try to tell the city where to make cut backs.

Write-offs from sales of city-owned electrical power in Thief River Falls was termed as a relatively small amount by Councilman Murphy. Murphy said one-tenth of one per cent of the total sales comprised a list of write-offs that will be given to the credit bureau for collection if possible.

Near the end of Tuesday night's meeting, Mayor Carlson requested that the council consider a bituminous covering of a small part of the east side of the Sports center parking lot. No final decision was made. Carlson estimated the cost of the project at $7,700 for 2,800 square yards. City crews would do the backfill.

In other news the council: approved renewals of club on-sale intoxicating liquor licenses to the Eagles, Elks, VFW, American Legion for $500 each; approved an agreement with local realtors to list three city-owned lots as long as the city has the right to terminate the agreement on 10 days notice to participate in special programs; and agreed to open bids on garbage bags April 28 at 10 a.m. in the council chambers.

Area Projects Financed By NW Initiative Fund

Northwest Minnesota Initiative Fund (NWMIF) will award $272,077 in grant money to 16 organizations that developed projects to strengthen the economic base, including several for Thief River Falls and Pennington county.

Cities, counties, post-secondary institutions and regional organizations will receive the grants that range in size from $4,000 to $29,197.

The Initiative Fund board, comprised of eight northwestern Minnesota residents, met March 20 to make the award selections out of a pool of 30 applicants. The fund, established in 1986, is a public charity that makes grants in a 12-county area to address social and economic problems.

Four grant awards, totaling $83,800, will assist business entrepreneurs, company owners seeking international markets and small town business people attempting to improve their operations. A list of the grants approved is as follows.

Small Business development center (SBDC) at Bemidji state university was awarded $28,800 to expand its international trade services and counseling offerings in small communities. The Bemidji SBDC, which provides an array of business counseling services, will increase its outreach efforts in Bagley, Fosston, Mahnomen and Park Rapids.

Thief River Falls Small Business development center will receive $10,000 to increase its workshops and client contacts in the rural areas. Communities targeted for service are Roseau, Greenbush, Red Lake Falls, Warroad, Oklee, Baudette, Erskine, Newfolden, Karlstad, Fertile, Badger, Middle River, McIntosh and Plummer.

University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) was awarded $25,000 to establish a Northwest Minnesota marketing research center. UMC will do primary research on new products for entrepreneurs and conduct labor studies and other research requested by communities and economic development boards. Also, UMC plans to assist extising businesses and new business owners in getting access to market data through publications and computer services.

Headwaters regional development commission was awarded $20,000 to participate in an import substitution program being launched in a 17 county area of northern Minnesota. A field broker will be hired to help match area product suppliers with businesses and governments that usually purchase goods and services outside the northern Minnesota area.

The project, which has substantial financial backing from the Blandin foundation, Grand Rapids, will affect five counties in the NWMIF funding area — Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Lake of the Woods and Mahnomen.

The NWMIF board awarded $91,363 to five projects that help farmers enhance their existing operations or explore alternative crops in northwestern Minnesota.

Pennington county board, in cooperation with the Minnesota extension service, was granted $28,070 to conduct marketing research for specialty crops in northwestern Minnesota. Project will identify the market potential and profitability of fresh vegetable production on a commercial scale.

In Hubbard county, the board will receive a $20,025 grant that will allow Park Rapids area farmers to conduct a comprehensive survey to determine the market potential for certified organically grown poultry and produce.

University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) will use an $11,895 grant to provide technical assistance to farmers interested in growing hybrid poplars for fiber fuel. For three years UMC has been involved in experiments to determine whether the poplars could become an alternative cash crop and provide a means of reducing erosion on marginal soils.

A $25,000 grant will be made to the

Tim Numedahl, TRF, Is USSA Driver Of The Year

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

DRIVER OF THE YEAR award from the United States Snowmobile association (USSA) was received by Tim Numedahl of Thief River Falls at the USSA awards banquet Saturday evening in LaCrosse, WI. Numedahl also received the total points trophy and points money for winning the Super Mod 340 class. The smaller plaque at the lower right of the photo was provided by his co-workers at Northwest Power System, recognizing his recuperation from injuries sustained in a snowmobile crash while racing in LaCrosse February 1.

From the 1986-87 snowmobile racing season, Tim Numedahl of Thief River Falls has four things he will remember for a long time: The United States Snowmobile association (USSA) total points championship in the Super Mod 340 class; the USSA "Driver of the Year" award; and compound fractures of both legs.

Oddly enough, he recieved all of them in LaCrosse, WI. The high point and "Driver of the Year" trophies he recieved Saturday evening at the USSA annual awards banquet. The fractures he received February 1 when his snowmobile went out of control on a slushy track and carried him into a concrete wall. He expected to get the total points trophy; the other trophy and the fractures were total surprises.

"Even when there was one more race to go after I got hurt, I had enough points so that no other driver could catch me for the total points title," Numedahl said. "The closest driver would have had to finish first both Saturday and Sunday of the next race to get within two points. As it turned out, he didn't do very well and someone else finished second about 30 or 40 points behind."

A 10-year veteran of snowmobile racing at 25 years of age, Numedahl was having one of his finest racing years until the February 1 mishap. The previous two years had not been very good and he thought at the start of this season that it would be his last. Then he found the consistency he had been looking for, and in 10 days of racing at five USSA race events he earned two first places, seven seconds and one third in the Super Mod 340 class.

"The biggest win was probably the first race of the year at Ironwood, Michigan," he said. "I also had a first place win at Antigo, Wisconsin. And I think I would have had a good shot at winning the world championship race at Eagle River, Wisconsin, except for some bad luck." In that race, Tim and Dave Wahl of Greenbush were pulling away from the rest of the field when Wahl's sled slipped sideways on the track and Numedahl hit him, taking both machines out of the race.

Numedahl and Wahl race together often as part of the Wahl Bros. racing

Tim Numedahl, TRF, Named USSA Driver Of The Year

team. Dave Wahl was winner of the prestigious "Driver of the Year" award from the USSA two years ago when he also won the Super Mod 340 total points trophy. The award is voted by USSA drivers and is based on racing success, sportsmanship, conduct on and off the track and demonstrated driving ability.

"The driver of the year award usually goes to someone who drives hard and competes hard on the track, but is the kind of person you like to race against and don't mind seeing win," stated Dave Thompson of Thief River Falls, a veteran racer who had his share of success (and injury) as an Arctic Cat driver. He said he did not know of any other local winners of the "Driver of the Year" award from the USSA and added that winning the title is no small accomplishment in snowmobile racing circles.

Numedahl explained that the total points championship is based on points accumulated by placing in USSA sanctioned races. Race winners receive five points for each machine entered in that class. Second place finishers get four points, third place finishers get three and so on through a single point for each machine for a fifth place finish. Tim had accumulated 242 points prior to his accident at LaCrosse. He estimates there are about 200 drivers who are members of the USSA and eligible to vote for "Driver of the Year".

In addition to the Super Mod 340 class, Numedahl also raced the same machine in the Formula I class. The two classes have basically the same restrictions except that the Formula I class permits twin-track machines. It was in a Formula I race that Tim reached the probable end of his racing career.

"I was just coming out of a corner at about 60 to 70 miles an hour when the sled hit slush and I lost control," he said. The snowmobile and Numedahl crashed into a concrete wall. In addition to breaking his right ankle so bone protruded through the skin, he broke his left leg below and up into the knee and the leg was caught in the machine's track, causing severe injuries that required skin grafts. He now gets around with crutches and has been back at work for several weeks. He is manger of Northwest Power Systems, located near Wilson Bros. company on Atlantic avenue, where he has been employed for about eight years.

One of the awards he received at the banquet Saturday was provided by his co-workers. It was suitably inscribed as "Champion Wheelchair Racer" and called attention to his three weeks in a wheelchair after getting out of the hospital.

In his prior 10 years of racing, however, Numedahl said he had never been seriously injured although he had taken his share of spills. He said that racers wear shin pads, Safe-Jacs similar to bulletproof vests, leather clothing and, of course, helmets. He said best racing conditions were from zero to 10 degrees and most tracks are now made of ice with very little banking on the turns. The bladed runners and studded tracks keep the machines on the track about as well as a car on the highway.

Numedahl has always been an independent racer, although he rode Arctic Cat machines until 1981. He then began experiementing with machines built by the Wahls and since then has been racing those units from as far east as Valcourt, Quebec to as far west as Calgary, Alberta.

While Numedahl is taking rehabilitative therapy for his injured legs, he now has a couple of trophies to reflect his successes of the season. The total points trophy also carries with it some cash for points won. His sleek, hand built racing sled didn't fare too well in its encounter with the concrete wall. "It's junk," Numedahl explains succinctly.

But in a year when one thing went terribly wrong, a few things went very well. One of them is the recognition by his fellow drivers of his ability and his character. That certainly strikes a high note in the racer's swan song.

HAND BUILT SNOWMOBILE was used by Tim Numedahl of Thief River Falls in his 1986-87 snowmobile racing season. The sled was built in cooperation with the Wahl Bros. Racing shop in Greenbush and the fiberglass body was formed by Ken Halvorson of rural Thief River Falls. Using the sled in Formula I and Super Mod 340 classes, Numedahl had good success this year until a crash on a slushy track in LaCrosse, WI, ended his racing season — and likely his racing career. Winning the USSA Super Mod 340 total points championship, Tim recorded two firsts, seven seconds and one third in 10 races this season.

Services Today For L.B. Hartz, Local Entrepreneur

He began his business career there, selling vegetables door-to-door on his bicycle at the age of eight. He married Harriet Lamson Oct. 3, 1936, in St. Paul. She died Feb. 1, 1976. He married Onealee Russell in Texas Feb. 14, 1979.

After two years of military service during World War I, which included driving an ammunition truck in France, he returned to Minnesota and enrolled in Duluth Business University in the fall of 1919. The following spring, he began work as a bookkeeper for the Wilson Packing company, and then returned to the Duluth Business University to teach that fall. Following that, he managed the Duluth office and credit department of the Siegel hardware company for two and one-half years.

He then bought a bankrupt store in Mitchell, SD, and sold everything in the store except the coal stove and cash register in three weeks. Returning to the Siegel company, he asked for a cut in his salary in exchange for the opportunity to take part in collections for the company. This was the beginning of his business endeavor in the purchase and sale of bankrupt stock, which he continued for several years.

With a partner, he bought the bankrupt Roseau Cooperative company and packaged items of car, tractor and small machine parts in "grab boxes" to sell for 10 cents. He then moved merchandise to Greenbush, put 14-year-old Maureen Parr in charge of the Roseau store, and went into business for himself, buying out his partner for a small amount of money and several hundred pairs of shoes.

Sale of the Roseau building forced Hartz to move his business to Middle River in 1927. He formed the Hartz Cash Stores company and opened stores in Warroad, Badger and Ross. He soon added a store in McIntosh, and by 1931, there were Hartz stores in Stephen, Greenbush and other area towns.

He began a grocery store in Thief River Falls in 1931, realizing more than $70,000 in sales the first year. He then rented an old church building for wholesale stock storage, and leased the upper story of a creamery building with a cooler in the basement for perishables. He gradually began to buy more and more from other companies, purchasing in quantity and repackaging in smaller lots, and encouraged local enterprise by buying onions, potatoes, carrots, asparagus, berries and melons from area growers. Fertile Faith Mills provided the firm with Hartz Best flour.

Initially he sold only to his own stores. These stores were businesses owned and operated by local individuals who were encouraged and assisted by Hartz. At the start of World War II, Hartz's operation had extended to the service of 27 stores and he had begun to establish agency stores. When the war created problems with personnel, he sold the stores to local managers.

After the war, Hartz rapidly expanded his wholesale operations. He built a warehouse which underwent numerous expansions to handle ever-increasing volume and changes in food products. He established his own fleet of trucks which covered millions of miles in transporting merchandise to over 400 stores. He pioneered a pallet system in warehousing and truck loading and was one of the first businessmen to use computers in his accounting system.

Sales volume for the year of 1981 exceeded $50 million and the company has never had a year when it did not show a profit during Hartz's years of management.

His concern for his employees is shown by the number of people who worked for the company for many years and retired as Hartz employees, many times three generations of a family working for the company. Hartz Wholesale offered wages and benefits among the best in the community. Hartz rarely turned down a request for assistance, either personal or business. He frequently co-signed notes and personally helped his employees with financial problems.

Hartz arranged for the formation of a cooperative whereby his store owners would become owners of the company through credits for purchases of merchandise. The year ending Sept. 30, 1981, showed a return of $460,000 to members in company profits and the employee payroll for that year totalled $2,843,000.

Hartz also assisted area small businesses by guaranteeing loans and injecting capital. The most notable of these businesses was Arctic Enterprises, which produced 100,000 snowmobiles a year at its peak, and employed over 1,000 people in manufacturing and related fields.

He was also active in civic affairs. He joined the American Legion when it was organized in France and was a recipient of its 50-year membership pin. He was a long-time member of the Thief River Falls Rotary club, and chapter president in 1950 and 1951. He served as president of the Commercial club, which later became the Chamber of Commerce, and was president of the hospital board for several years. He was also a member of the board of Valley Home for the Aged, serving as president for several years, was active on the board of directors of Arctic Enterprises, and sat on the board of Western States Life insurance company for 30 years.

Hartz established the Hartz Foundation over 40 years ago. The foundation began as a charitable institution, operated by Hartz and one assistant. In years past, the foundation has contributed well over one million dollars to worthy area causes, such as churches, college and vocational institutes, local and national medical research institutions, senior citizen centers, handicapped assistance programs and cities undertaking community improvement projects.

L.B. Hartz is survived by his wife, Onealee.

MEA Programs For 1987 Are Adopted By Assembly Vote

Minnesota Education association (MEA) has embarked on a number of initiatives as a result of MEA representative assembly (RA) actions that could affect the public as well as teachers and their profession.

"We are putting all our energies behind the program developed by the representative assembly," says MEA president Robert E. Astrup, "and we have every hope that most of our agenda will be put into place by the appropriate agencies."

The MEA's 65th representative assembly recently in Bloomington was attended by some 900 teachers from throughout the state, including 830 delegates and alternates selected to represent more than 40,000 MEA *members in nearly 500 local associa*tions and affiliated or associated organizations.

"Even though the RA is the MEA's legislature, which might lead some to think that its activities are strictly internal," explains Astrup, "its actions impact on the learning climate for students in Minnesota schools -- and, at times, on the public itself."

The assembly sets the MEA program for the ensuing year, expressed through items of new business and resolutions. Included in the adopted items of new business are the following:

(1) MEA will initiate and implement a short-range plan and a long-range plan to create pay parity and pay equity for Minnesota teachers, so that all will be compensated commensurate with professions that require similar education and preparation and equal to other teachers in the state who have comparable preparation and tenure.

(2) MEA will lobby to repeal Minnesota Statute 126.122 Subdivision 1, which prohibits the beginning of school before Labor day.

(3) MEA will seek an amendment to PELRA (public employment labor relations act) that would require inclusion in teacher bargaining units of all persons who work in public schools performing teacher functions in any part of their work, regardless of any other status they have as students, fellows, interns, etc.

(4) MEA supports Minnesota income tax conformity with the federal income tax law; further, the MEA endorses increased tax revenues to fund education adequately.

(5) MEA supports legislation that would prohibit employers from assigning or allowing anyone 16 years of age or under to work after 11 p.m. before a school day.

(6) MEA supports exploration of legislation that could merge the borads of the community college system and the vocational technical system.

Among the 142 resolutions adopted by the assembly are the following:

— Equal Opportunities — MEA believes that public schools have a responsibility to provide students with equal access to, opportunity for involvement in, and encouragement for participation in all educational areas regardless of gender, race, physical condition or learning disability.

— Sectarian Practices in the School Program — MEA believes that the constitutional provisions on the establishment and free exercise of religion in the First Amendment require that there be no sectarian practices in the public school program.

— Non-violent Resolution of Conflict — MEA believes in non-violent resolution of conflict between individual, groups and countries of the world.

— Student Rights and Responsibilities — MEA believes that basic student rights include: the right to free inquiry and expression; the right to due process; the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and petition; the right to participate in the governance of the school, college and university; the right to freedom from discrimination; and the right to equal educational opportunity.

MEA further believes that a student shall have access to a licensed teacher in the public school facilities during any form of instruction.

The association believes that each *of these rights carries with it a com*parable responsibility.

— Drug Testing of Students — MEA believes that mandatory or voluntary drug testing of students in a school environment is an infringement upon their constitutional rights.

— Student Personnel Services — MEA urges that student personnel services be increased or established to include, but not be limited to, guidance and counseling, career counseling, social work, school nursing, dental hygiene and psychological services.

MEA further urges that student personnel services be provided at all levels of education, pre-school through adult with additional emphasis at the pre-school and elementary levels, since behavioral and attitudinal patterns are established at an early age. These services shall be provided by licensed professional personnel.

MEA opposes the subcontracting of student personnel services to private organizations.

— Chemical Use Education — MEA, the state department of education, local school systems and communities should work together to develop and implement educational programs concerning chemical use.

— Reading Programs — MEA believes in the autonomy of school districts in determining reading curricula and reading programs. No school district should lose state educational funding because of the lack of participation in any specific reading program.

— Basic Skills — MEA supports the concept that classroom teachers and parents must be involved in all phases of the basic skills programs. All basic skills programs must be supervised and taught by a licensed teacher.

— Drug Testing — MEA believes that either mandatory or voluntary drug and alcohol testing of employees and job applicants is an unwarranted and unconstitutional invasion of privacy, and opposes such testing by school districts, colleges and universities.

— Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect — MEA urges the state of Minnesota to fund specific educational programs designed to prevent all types of child abuse and neglect.

— Child Pornography — MEA supports the strong enforcement of current laws dealing with child pornography. MEA opposes the exploitation of children through child pornography.

— Minnesota State Academies for the Deaf and the Blind — MEA believes the continuation of the graded academic programs at the Minnesota Academies for the Deaf and the Blind is essential as a viable alternative on the continuum of educational services available to the visually and hearing impaired students of the state of Minnesota. MEA further believes that the jurisdiction of these academies shall be with the Minnesota State Board of Education.

— Student Discipline — MEA believes that an atmosphere of equitable discipline is essential to promoting optimum learning in the school. Local affiliates should negotiate a process whereby administrators, teachers, parents and students will be involved in identifying disruptive behavior and prescribing, implementing and evaluating procedures that will reduce and correct disruptive behavior. It encourages affiliates to negotiate for services supportive of the classroom teacher.

to the Editor

To The Editor:

I am a former resident of Thief River Falls and a graduate of Lincoln senior high school. I visit my "humble" hometown periodically. Each time I do, the more I ask myself . . . why? I see a lot wrong in a lot of areas of this community. This letter is about the ways and attitudes of people during the winter season sports.

It is obvious that Thief River Falls is a "hockey town!" All I heard was how the hockey team was going to state. As it turned out, they didn't go any further than the boys' or girls' basketball teams. The boys' B-ball team had a downfall and lost some of their games but they also had a great year and the boys played with all their hearts. Congratulations, guys!

The girls' B-ball team had an extremely good year with an outstanding record and I congratulate them! The swim team had two members to state! This community seems to forget that they do have a swim team. Good job, swimmers!

It infuriates me the way this town stands behind only one sport instead of all sports — not only the winter sports, but all sports throughout the school year. Look how long it took for the people of this community to stand up and take notice of the girls' B-ball team! What did it? Winning, of course! There is definitely too much emphasis put on winning. Winning isn't everything! What about good clean participation and good attitudes of the players?

Now, I'm sure some of you readers are thinking . . . "How can we afford to support all sports? What does this person think? I have a solution: Why not go to a few games or meets of each sport instead of being involved with just one sport? I don't think people realize the pressures these kids are under because of this community's ways! In order to be accepted or recognized for their efforts, it is obvious to me and other out-of-towners that you have to have the "right" name in order to get any credit for anything!

Also, adults expect the kids to show good sportsmanship. I hope the adults realize they are to set the example. I have heard and have been told such awful, sarcastic comments made by people in the crowd! For those of you who make these remarks — and you know who you are — I'd like to see you take the place of a player and see how well you do!

The sign by the Chamber of Commerce says, "Thief River Falls . . . Where everybody is somebody." Ha! What a farce! It should read, "Thief River Falls . . . Where everybody needs to QUALIFY to be somebody!"

For those of you wondering, I am an adult and an avid sports fan. The key word is sports . . . I mean ALL SPORTS! I hope this letter prompts others to express their views. I know there are others in this community who feel the same way I do.

Y.E.S. Phase II Program Slated For This Weekend

Whether it's raising hamsters to sell to pet shops or raising miniature corn seed to sell by direct mail, planning is essential for establishing a strong business — and that means developing a strong business plan.

That's why Phase II of the youth entrepreneurial seminars (Y.E.S.), designed and presented by the University of Minnesota's extension service, will be held March 27 and 28 at Crookston — to help potential, young businesspeople to begin to develop a business plan that demonstrates their strengths and skills.

The Friday and Saturday program is designed for high school students, ages 14 and older, and their parents. "It is not neccessary to have attended Phase I of the Y.E.S program, which took place recently in seven Northwest Minnesota locations, to come to the Phase II weekend," says Catherine Huebner, area extension agent.

Program registration begins at 6 p.m. on Friday and concludes early Saturday afternoon. Registration is $20 per person, which includes overnight lodging, meals and the program. Location for the Crookston program will be the Northland motel. Immediate registration is suggested. Contact the county extension office or Jerry Nagel at Crookston Jobs, Inc., Box 492, Crookston, MN 56716, telephone (218) 281-7979.

Huebner says the $20 registration for the weekend is nominal. Most of the costs for the programs will be paid by the West Central initiative fund; Crookston Jobs, Inc.; and the Minnesota extension service. The program will be presented by the Women's Economic Development corporation.

"The idea is to walk youth and parents through the development of a business plan based on a pre-prepared book focusing on youth business. In the brief time allotted, it will not be possible to complete a business plan, but those attending will have a good start on how to construct their business plan," Huebner said.

She added that response to the Phase I Y.E.S programs, aimed at encouraging young people to think about and plan to start new businesses in their home communities in northwestern Minnesota, was excellent. She feels certain that some potential new businesses just need the Phase II information to "take off." A similar Phase II program will be held April 10 and 11 at the Sunwood Inn at Morris.

Applications For State Student Programs Taken

As many as 100 students in Minnesota public secondary schools may attend state "Programs of Excellence" in school districts other than their own.

High school principals and counselors are now distributing application forms to students in grades 7-11 for enrollment in 58 programs which have been designated as programs of excellence by the Minnesota department of education. Application forms and course description booklets may also be obtained in the principal's office of public junior and senior high schools.

Completed applications for the 1987-88 school year must be postmarked or delivered to the Minnesota Department of Education no later than March 27, 1987.

Minnesota legislation passed in 1984 enables high schools to offer these designated programs to highly motivated students. The programs have a wide range of appeal to students and are available to school districts throughout the state.

Programs include world languages, science, music, mathematics, English, art and others. To be

'Grow Your Own' Program Given At Roseau Library

Learn to grow new varieties of fruits and vegetables and to create unique markets for them Friday, March 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the library assembly room of the Roseau public library. Phil Baird, assistant professor in the agricultural division of the University of Minnesota, Crookston, will present the program entitled, "Grow and Market New Varieties of Fruits and Vegetables."

Learn which varieties of produce grow best in the Red River Valley soils. Explore new ways to create markets for the produce you grow. This program is designed to meet the needs of both experienced and inexperienced growers.

The information is the result of a two-year project that was originally funded through the governor's council on rural development and UMC to explore economic alternatives to traditional farming approaches.

This program is one in a series of several "Grow Your Own" programs sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education council. For more information, call Betty Johnson at 218-463-2181.

DAV Service Van Visits Crookston Area On April 6

Crookston area veterans and their families aren't alone if they're concerned about the effects of Veterans administration (VA) benefit changes on their lives. But they'll get answers free of charge when a national service officer of the Disabled American Veterans (DAV) visits Crookston. The DAV van will be parked from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the south courthouse parking lot in Crookston on April 6.

The DAV veterans' benefits expert on board is fully qualified to help veterans and their families file new and reopened claims for the full range of veterans' benefits. Veterans need not be DAV members to take advantage of these free services.

"For several years," said DAV national service director Arthur H. Wilson, "veterans have heard many news reports on changes in VA programs and services, cutbacks in VA health care, and proposals to slash disability compensation payments. Also causing concern are changes in social security disability programs.

"What do all these changes mean to you?" asked Wilson in a letter to all disabled veterans in the Crookston area. "How do they affect your family? If you're worried about your rights, you should be. That's why the DAV is coming to your area soon. We're here to serve you."

The DAV has sent its vans, called field service units, to communities across America for 13 years. To date, more than 460,000 veterans, dependents and survivors have used the free services offered by the highly trained DAV national service officers staffing these traveling offices. Last year alone, 29,004 veterans and family members visited DAV vans. Their questions covered a broad range of programs, including VA disability and educational benefits, social security disability payments, VA medical care, military benefits, veterans' employment and training programs, and more.

"These veterans and their families came to the DAV because they know we're on their side, totally committed to making sure they get all the benefits their military service has earned," explained Wilson. "The DAV isn't a government agency. We're an association of one million disabled vets dedicated to helping our fellow veterans."

Veterans or family members visiting the DAV van should bring the veterans' VA claim number, if known, and social security number. These are needed in filing and reopening claims.

On March 16 two juvenile boys, both 16, were caught after changing prices on items from Ace Hardware and paying the lesser amount at the checkout. Charges are pending in juvenile court for theft by fraud. On March 17 Variety Sales caught a juvenile shoplifter, age 16 from rural Thief River Falls. He had taken a candy bar. The merchandise, valued at 40 cents, was recovered. Charges are pending in juvenile court.

On March 21 Kmart reported catching two juvenile shoplifters. The two youths, age 16 from Stephen, had taken cassette tapes and a utility knife, valued at $25. The merchandise was recovered and charges pending in juvenile court. Additional merchandise was recovered that had been taken from Pamida. The two also admitted to taking merchandise in other cities.

Anderson, Thief River Falls, was going west on Third street and a car driven by John Johnson, route one, Goodridge, was pulling away from a stop sign on Horace avenue and entering Third street going north. Damages from the collision were estimated at $350 to the Johnson vehicle and $650 to the Anderson vehicle.

On March 22 at 12:18 a.m. police received a report that a car struck a tree. Upon arrival, a driver was not at the scene so the vehicle was impounded. The registered owner is Sheri L. ## Sparby Attends Winter Meeting In Washington State Rep. Wally Sparby was in Washington, D.C., recently to attend the mid-winter meeting of the state-federal assembly (SFA) of the national conference of state legislatures.

The SFA serves as a forum for discussion among its individual state members, identifies issues of critical concern and informs legislatures of developments in state-federal relations.

Sparby serves as a member of the assembly's agriculture, food policy and rural development committee. "We discussed, at length, problems with the 1985 federal farm bill and looked at alternative proposals that would aid in bringing profitabiltiy back to agriculture," Sparby said.

The committee also gave attention to agricultural credit problems and the need for diversification of American agriculture.

Policy resolutions formulated by SFA provide guidance to members testifying before Congress or federal agency hearings. They also help in efforts to lobby Congress, the White House and federal executive agencies.

Farm Security Plan Reactivated By Legislature

Family farm agriculture in Minnesota received a shot in the arm with announcement of plans to reactivate the state's family farm security program, according to Willis Eken, Minnesota Farmers Union president.

The program was a major initiative of Minnesota Farmers Union (MFU) in 1976 to help farmers get a start in agriculture. Then a state representative, Eken authored the legislation which provided state-guaranteed loans to about 400 beginning farmers until the program was put on hold last year.

"Reactivating the family farm security program is one of our five priorities as an organization for the 1987 legislative session," Eken said at a news conference at the State Capitol.

MFU hailed the legislature's intention to reactivate the program as a recommitment to the needs of Minnesota's farm economy and an excellent follow-up to last year's mediation and debt restructuring programs.

"Once again, Minnesota is taking the lead in farm legislation," Eken added. "We're proud of the legislature's responsiveness to our message from the people of the state for the urgent need for a vehicle to help put family farmers on the land. We're also pleased St. Paul Farm Credit services is responding with recognition of the need for the family farm security program."

The MFU designed program provides the opportunity for families to get started in agriculture and help to displaced farmers for reentry.

"This is something states can do to make a real impact on the well-being of family farm agriculture, and with federal loan money currently at a minimum, our legislature has once again taken a leadership role in filling that gap," Eken said.

New IRS Ruling Explains Tax On PIC Certificates

A new IRS ruling issued recently explains the tax treatment of generic commodity certificates, according to C. D. Switzer, director of the IRS in Minnesota.

Generic commodity certificates are issued under government programs to farmers. The recipient may sell them, use them to pay government debts, redeem them for cash, or use them for purchases from the Commodity Credit corporation (CCC).

The new ruling explains that for farmers using the cash method of accounting, income is recognized in the year the certificate is received by the farmer. This is true regardless of what the certificate is used for. The farmer's basis in the certificate is its face value.

The ruling states that where an election to pay tax on a Commodity Credit corporation loan in the year received has not been made, and later, a generic commodity certificate is used to redeem the loan, the transaction is treated as a regular sale.

The sale will result in profit equal to the redeemed CCC loan and the farmer will have a basis in the crop equal to the certificate used in the redemption.

Switzer said that in certain cases, farmers have treated this redemption as a partial forgiveness of debt where the amount of the loan exceeds the basis of the certificate. This is incorrect, according to the new ruling.

Rundell Suggests Care In Seeding Efforts For CRP

"If you have CRP acres to seed this spring there are some plans and actions you should be making and doing now," suggests Ralph Rundell of the Marshall-Beltrami SWCD at Grygla.

"If you do not have current soil tests or tests from the last two years on your CRP acres you need to get the samples taken and sent in for testing as soon as possible. When sending in soil samples, be sure to specify they are for CRP seedings so the extension agent can make out the proper recommendations. If you have acceptable test information you need to contact the county agent for a recommendation for CRP seeding from the old test," he said.

Another action to plan is seedbed preparation for CRP seeding. "Remember, you are seeding a crop to remain for 10 years," Rundell said. "Do the best job of seedbed preparation you can as a smooth, firm, weed-free seedbed is one of the best ways to insure a good seeding that you can maintain. Preferable seeding method is with a grass seeder but other methods are acceptable as long as they plant the seed at proper depth and density."

Rundell said he saw some excellent seedings last year and some very poor seedings. "If your seeding is not acceptable, the cost of re-seeding will be many times more expensive than the extra work to do the job right the first time," he said. "I hope every CRP field I check this year is done so both the farmer and I can feel good about the job done."

Teaching Career Month Proclaimed By Gov. Perpich

Gov. Rudy Perpich has proclaimed April as teaching career month in Minnesota. This year's observance is the 30th annual.

The proclamation notes that society depends for its continuing well-being on the abilities and performances of individuals and that the effectiveness of individuals, their creativity and self-reliance are greatly affected by teachers, making it necessary for the nation to have dedicated, well-prepared professional teachers "who will prepare students for a future that will surpass every other age."

Teaching Career month, sponsored by the Minnesota Education association (MEA), focuses public attention on the function and importance of the teaching profession.

Governor Perpich says teachers are "in a position to affect deeply the public and individual welfare of the country and of each citizen."

For these and many other reasons, he proclaimed, "it becomes incumbent upon our populace to work not only toward attracting the finest of our youth but also toward retaining the career teachers in the profession of teaching."

Make Minnesota More Beautiful Conference Set

"Most people want to make their neighborhood a more pleasant place to live; they just are not sure where to start," states Mark A. Gustafson, project coordinator for Minnesota Beautiful.

Second annual "Make Minnesota More Beautiful" conference is set April 10 at the landscape arboretum in Chanhassen. Participants will learn to identify potential improvement areas and obtain the tools necessary to organize and implement beautification projects. Special workshops will feature environmental education programs for classrooms and youth organizations, recycling programs and issues for rural and suburban communities, and hisoric preservation methods. A complete listing of the conference program is available by calling Gustafson at (612) 296-2169.

This year over $4,000 and $2,000 gallons of free paint will be awarded to Minnesota Beautiful communities, but perhaps the greatest benefit available is the chance to develop a renewed community pride, Gustafson said.

By calling the above number you may obtain a brochure of this year's conference and reserve a spot (a $15 registration fee includes lunch and all conference material). Act soon as seating is limited!

County Approves 1 Year Contract With Ambulance Service

Pennington county commissioners Tuesday night decided to award a one year contract to Lifestar ambulance to provide service to Thief River Falls. Sheriff Bob Wold said he had some major concerns before studying the issue but after reviewing the contract and services to be provided the city, decided to recommend the ambulance service.

Approval of the contract gives the ambulance service the opportunity to get a subsidy from Quin County Community Health services. The amount of subsidy requested was $14,183.83. The money does not go through the county.

Sheriff Bob Wold noted that the ambulance service might be purchased by Dave Snyder of Thief River Falls. Wold also said he believes two paramedics will be hired by the ambulance service. In response to questions from the board, Wold said he also believed tension between the hospital employees and ambulance employees was improving.

The commissioners discussed a variety of topics during the evening session. Other business discussed included the opening and acceptance of equipment rental bids, and acceptance of bids for fuel and oil. Sorvig Oil in Thief River Falls will apparently be the fuel and oil supplier.

The commissioners approved a resolution to approve a renegotiated package deal with the Minnesota counties computer coop. The contract, which includes about 38 counties, was renegotiated when several counties withdrew from the contract, causing the monthly fee set by MCCC to increase substantially with the loss of one more county. County auditor Ken Olson said the new contract will be a better deal for the county.

Questions were raised about ownership of property and funds for a boat landing at St. Hilaire. The commissioners decided to refer the matter to the Northwest Regional development commission until ownership and other questions were resolved.

In other business, the commissioners: adopted the legislative platform for the Association of Minnesota Counties; discussed a proposed group project ditch; approved bidding on a sign truck; and discussed the requirements necessary to move a compost pile at Future Fuel.

Senator Moe Says Minnesota Taxes Down From 1984

Senate Majority Leader Roger Moe of Erskine says that, according to a recent national survey, Minnesota has dropped in its ranking for "total revenues collected" by the state. "Between 1984 and 1986, we dropped from fourth place to 10th," Moe said.

The National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL), which conducted the research, based its estimates on revenues collected per $100 of personal income.

"In 1984," Moe continued, "we collected $14.39 per $100 of personal income in both state and local tax revenues, but in 1986, we only collected $12.35. This sizeable drop is mainly the result of the large income tax cut the state gave in 1985."

The NCSL survey showed that 38 of the 50 states decreased their tax revenues between 1985 and 1986, and estimated that, for the entire country, state-local taxes fell 1.8 per cent, and state taxes fell three per cent.

Moe noted that the survey also indicated that Minnesota was one of eight states where the largest decreases occurred. "Our combined local and state taxes dropped by 8.1 per cent — that's three and a half times more than the national average of 1.8 per cent.

"In light of all the claims in recent years of Minnesota's increasing tax burden," Moe added, "it's interesting that our tax burden was higher in 1970 than in 1986.

"Sixteen years ago, our revenue was $12.50 per $100 of personal income — or 15 cents more than in 1986. Yet, our nationwide ranking was down at 15th. That indicates to me that many other states have increased their taxes, while we have kept them down."

Former TRF Planning Officer Involved In Battle Of Incentives

Jack Quinlivan, former city planning officer for Thief River Falls, is involved in what appears to be a sign of the times.

The search for larger quarters for the Winnebago manufacturing company, a 15 employee metal-fabricating firm in Winnebago, MN, has attracted a large number of cities very willing to become the next home of the company. Providing incentives to any company willing to relocate in an economically depressed community is creating a lot of infighting among small rural Minnesota communities.

Quinlivan, the economic development coordinator for Faribault county, according to a Minneapolis Star and Tribune article, is disturbed at the infighting between cities and is hoping for a calm rational resolution.

According to the Minneapolis Star and Tribune article, Faribault county offered the Company a building in Blue Earth for nothing more than the property taxes on it when they discovered the company was making plans to relocate, which might take them out of the county. When Winnebagans learned of the deal, the city council voted not only to buy one of the town's several vacant factories for the company, but also to set aside $100,000 for low-interest loans on which the company could draw.

Faribault county, rather than increase the intensity of the infighting rescinded its action which had nearly forgiven the $20,000 owed on the Blue Earth building.

But since the controversy has been picked up by the media, other communities from Iowa, South Dakota and four nearby Minnesota counties have made offers to the company.

Computer Assists Potato Growers During Storage

Out of the Red River valley comes a computerized system to save stored potatoes. Researchers at the Red River valley potato research lab have linked a personal computer to gas monitoring devices, temperature and wind sensors, and ventilating fans to give early warnings of spoilage or other storage problems.

The system helps most in controlling bin atmospheres during and right after harvest when potatoes recover from harvest damage, use large amounts of oxygen and produce high levels of carbon dioxide. (Normal respiration in the dark conditions adds to an environment that promotes disease outbreak.)

Tubers on the bottom of the bin are the first to show breathing problems because of the weight stress. "Disease pockets" develop and can spread quickly by the liquid generated in these pockets if they're not contained.

Changes in temperature, humidity and windspeed during harvest and bin-filling mean a lot of individualized attendtion for each bin. Using a computerized monitoring system, air samples within the bins are automatically pumped through nylon tubing to a gas chromograph for analysis.

The chromograph acts like a mechanical nose and identifies key stress gases in the air a lot sooner than humans can detect them. Also, when carbon dioxide levels get too great, the computer turns on the fans.

Both lab research and fieldwork in commercial bins are being done in cooperation with the Minnesota and North Dakota ag experiment stations and the Red River Valley Potato Growers' association.

Divorce Affects Tax Liability Of Spouses

Recent studies show that approximately one million marriages a year end in divorce. According to the Minnesota Society of CPAs, those two million individuals need specific tax advice. There are several tax issues that they should concentrate on, one of the most important being their new filing status.

If you were legally separated or divorced on or before December 31, 1986, you and your spouse — or former spouse, depending on your situation — cannot file a joint return. You will either have to file as a single individual or as a head of household.

The single individual status is available to those taxpayers who have no children or dependents. The head of household status is available to the spouse who is unmarried at year-end or separated for the last six months of the year. In addition, the same spouse must also have maintained a household that was the principal home for their child for more than half the year.

Other important tax issues after a divorce or separation include the deductibility of alimony, professional fees and child support. Depending on the legal agreement between you and your former spouse, some of these expenses and forms of income will be taxed while others will not.

The first tax issue to be addressed as a newly separated or divorced individual is alimony. Couples must determine who will pay taxes on the alimony settlement and who will take a deduction.

Alimony payments deductible by the paying spouse must be included in the income of the receiving spouse. In order to be classified as alimony, a payment to an ex-spouse must be (1) paid in cash, (2) in accordance with a divorce decree, and (3) clearly designated as alimony rather than any other purpose. For payments of more than $10,000, additional requirements must be met.

Once alimony arrangements have been made, it is important to stick to them. If, for example, an individual agrees to pay more money to his or her former spouse, this extra money cannot be taken as a deduction. Under the formal, written agreement, it is not considered alimony. If, however, an individual does agree to pay more money to his or her former spouse, together they can legally change their agreement and avoid any future tax problems.

Just getting a divorce can be expensive. But certain professional fees incurred by separation or divorce proceedings are also tax deductible.

Neither spouse can take a deduction for fees paid for arranging or resisting a divorce. Only those fees incurred as a result of arranging the details of the alimony payments and-or tax advice are deductible. Therefore, it is important that you have the attorneys and other professionals for both sides list their fees in two categories: (1) Those for specifics of the divorce or separation, and (2) those which detail the arrangements of alimony payments, property settlements, or tax implications of these issues.

Are child support payments tax deductible? Payments specifically designated as support for minor children are not deductible nor are they taxable to the recipient of them. Payments are non-deductible child support if they are reduced based on certain developments related to the child, such as the child graduating from school or getting married. Structuring of alimony payments and child support payments can be mutually beneficial to both spouses where there is the potential to take deductions at a higher income tax rate and include payments in the other spouse's lower taxable income.

Other aspects to a divorce agreement that will affect the tax liability of both spouses include mortgage payments, medical expenses and other credit arrangements.

ROOTS

There are two lasting bequests we can give our children. One is roots, the other, wings. When I think how we have brought up our children here over the past 26 years, it seems to me that kids growing up in Thief River Falls have some advantages that help them to mature with both confidence and grace.

Children start to grow roots by observing and following examples of others. Growing up in a small town has given our children a chance to see people living and working together in harmony.

But besides observing, youth need to try things themselves. Working together in a group to achieve a common goal is an important learning experience. One place our children were able to do this was in Franklin and Lincoln school musicals.

I think not of just our own, but of the hundreds of kids we have enjoyed, singing their hearts out at shows and programs. I think they surprised themselves a little. They perhaps might never have thought of singing from a stage, but they became caught up in the group effort and fun. How thrilled they were that so many townspeople would come to see a show that they had worked so hard to produce. Of course they could not have succeeded without strong leadership from their choir and orchestra directors, teachers who have always had a great commitment to youth.

It is also important for kids to have a chance to give something back to the community. Music is one of the ways they have been able to do so, whether at school, church or even at the county fair.

In a rural area such as ours, many grandparents are around, not just on holidays but throughout a child's growing years. What they have to give to their grandchildren is precious and unique. Grandparents teach children things they cannot learn in school, and they can also tell them stories of other times.

Experts tell us that grandparenting is the second most powerful emotional bond next to parenting a child. Grandparents are nurturers, living ancestors, mentors, providers of unconditional love. Grandparents love children just because they are alive. Sartre said he could make his grandmother happy just by being hungry.

Not all children are lucky enough to have their grandparents near Thief River Falls. But whether they have relatives living here or not, children here are fortunate to have a strong support system. In a small community such as ours it seems that there are many friends more than willing to be like uncles and aunts to youth.

This year our daughter was the recipient of many many good wishes as her athletic team enjoyed a winning streak. Then when her team's season ended abruptly with a loss, even more folks came forward, talking to her, encouraging her, giving even more good wishes than when the team was winning. This is the kind of understanding from adults that gives a teen-ager confidence to go ahead with yet another activity.

Our youth have opportunity to understand the past by visiting Pioneer Village. There local history becomes visible. The stories children hear from grandparents as well as the faded photographs they have been shown come alive in Pioneer Village. Kids can walk up steep wooden stairs leading to the little rooms under the eaves of the log house, and then come down to try out the old butter churn in the simple kitchen. They can touch the old blacksmith's forge, now cold. Kids can see the big threshing machine, the steel plow. It is good to look behind us and see where we have come from and try to imagine what it was like for our ancestors. Only by having a connection to the past can any of us see ourselves as participants with a stake in the present.

I think kids listen when the community says that something is important. That is why I was not surprised that most of the Lincoln class of 1986 went to the first graduation party provided by the Community Education's Chemical Awareness Task Force. The seniors understood that the community was saying, "We want you to celebrate and we want you to have fun together at graduation. We know you can have a fine time without any alcohol around."

There is always more the community can do. Right now a committee called "ZRT" is painting and furnishing a large youth room that will soon welcome all high school kids. It will be open after weekend games and on Saturday nights. "ZRT" stands for Zion-Redeemer-Trinity churches. It is good to have this kind of cooperative effort that tells our kids, "You are important."

Children were not meant to be raised by just two people. It takes lots of people. It is the people living here who have provided the nourishment for our children's roots. Our community provides goodness for a child's growing years.

Next time: WINGS.

Numedal

Tawnya Morkrid, 681-6076

Those of you who attended Sunday morning worship services at Oak Ridge Lutheran church on Sunday, March 15 probably wondered as I did, who the visitors were that looked like characters of biblical days and also dressed in the attire of those days and a setting in front of the church as that of a modern day courtroom. I know my one year old daughter really wondered about this young bearded man who sat by her — that wore no shoes and wore different clothes (he portrayed Nicodemus). The Middle River Parish Luther league put on this dramatic trial entitled "The Case of Humanity vs. Pontius Pilate. Twelve area folks that were in church were selected as jurors to find the defendant not guilty, guilty, or it is a hung jury. The entire group and directors are to be commended for this presentation. I think it was everyone's opinion that this was an enlightening ministry.

Ag Magazine In State Classrooms For Third Time

Third issue of the new student magazine about agriculture is now in Minnesota schools. The publication, called the "Minnesota Agriculture Magazine," is designed to help students learn more about the source of their food supply and the role of agriculture in the economy and society. The magazine is a major educational effort of the Minnesota Agriculture In The Classroom (M-AITC) program.

"We've tried to provide a series of magazines for classroom use that reflect the very broad-based and diverse agricultural industry in Minnesota. This third issue focuses on soil and water conservation and the importance of protecting our natural resources... it should fit well with the new environmental education rule for instruction," says program coordinator Al Withers.

"Our fourth and last issue for the school year will be distributed in early April and will focus on the impact of technology on agriculture, history of agriculture from 1950-present, and discuss opportunities for youth in agriculture such as 4-H, FFA and the state fair."

Each issue is distributed statewide through elementary and middle school principals, with sixth grade being the primary target audience; 61,000 copies are distributed to 1,250 schools with each new issue.

Amherst Saxophone Quartet Gives Fine Performance In TRF

by Larry Carlson

"Phenomenal!" "I didn't know fingers could move so fast!" "Fun!" "As close to musical perfection as I've heard." "Excellence with antics!"

These are just a few short descriptions of the March 5th concert featuring the Amherst saxophone quartet. Their appearance marked the third entry in the Thief River Falls Concert association's 1986-87 season, and was a most welcome and enjoyable addition to a fine series of performances.

The quartet takes its name from Amherst, New York, a suburb of Buffalo, where they make their residence. After beginning to rehearse in 1978, they have since performed extensively for such noteworthy audiences as "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson, Carnegie Hall, and numerous performances for National Public Radio.

The group consists of four saxophones: Salvatore Andolina, soprano; Ken Seino, alto; Steven Rosenthal, tenor; and Harry Fackelman on baritone. Their variety of instruments make possible a most diverse assortment of ranges and tone colors.

The quartet's program was progressive and covered a wide range of musical styles and history. From Bach to Duke Ellington, romantic to ragtime, (and even opera), the group displayed an incredible mastery of their instruments, great variety of styles, and wonderful sensitivity to their audience. The evening was articulated with humor from the opening "tip-off," as they called it, to their jazzy encore.

At once the audience was captivated by the musical excellence of the group. Their superb sense of ensemble, immaculate attention to detail and integrity of interpretation, whether demonstrated in astounding flourishes of technical mastery, or a slow, melodic chorale, made each piece a pure joy to listen to. Soaring melodies, sparkling trills, spiraling cadenzas and humorous choreography made this a truly delightful evening, one that is sure to remain in the memories of those who attended for a long time to come. All in all, it was a night of magnificent music and great fun!

Pesticide Hucksters Push Telephone Sales

U.S. Environmental Protection agency (EPA) Region 5 administrator Valdas V. Adamkus has warned that some farmers could spend more than they anticipated on weed control this spring — if they fall for misleading telephone sales pitches of a few pesticide companies.

With many sales organizations turning increasingly to the telephone to serve a widely scattered group like farmers, EPA and state agriculture departments have been receiving complaints from farmers and other consumers about telephone salespersons making false or misleading claims about weed control.

These claims say that the products are nontoxic to people, livestock and fish; that they control all weeds when, in fact, they will control only some; they can be used on crops or pastures, when actually they may damage or destroy these areas; that they work as well as, or better than "Brand X" at only a fraction of the cost when, in fact, a different chemical with a different mode of action is involved; and that they will curb all weeds for up to three years when they may or may not do so.

Prizes are sometimes offered to farmers willing to buy. The calls are usually made in the early morning or in the late afternoon, when farmers are most likely to be at home.

In most situations, farmers and other pesticide users should make purchases only after they have read the products' labels," advised Adamkus. "Telephone purchases are all right only if the buyers are dealing with a reputable agent, personally known to them.

"The statements and precautions on pesticide labels are backed up by intensive scientific study and careful scrutiny. The labels provide guarantees that the products will do an effective job in an environmentally safe way. Users should always read and follow label instructions when applying pesticides."

Pesticide buyers should make it clear to any unknown telephone salesperson that they are not interested in,— and will not pay for — the weed control products being sold, Adamkus warned. Reports indicate that waivering buyers have sometimes been shipped the pesticides C.O.D.

"The vast majority of pesticide producers and dealers in this country condemn the unethical action of the few," Adamkus said.

Some of the weed control chemicals found in products sold by telephone include 2,4-D, bromacil and diquat dibromide. These are legitimate weed control agents, but they may be ineffective or illegal for the uses being claimed, according to EPA.

Prosecution of the suspected firms has been difficult because there are problems in building legal cases based on telephone conversations.

"Records of these telephone conversations are few," Adamkus said. "Some of the companies involved are shrewd. They appear to know pesticide laws quite well. They will often avoid blatantly false claims, relying instead on innuendo, implication or 'strategic misrepresentation' of certain vital information."

Here is what farmers can do to stop the abuse of pesticide sales by phone.

One obvious thing is to hang up if you are not interested, or if you suspect a misleading sales pitch.

You can help protect other farmers if you stay on the telephone and get information about the caller. Write down the caller's name, address and telephone number.

If the product is a pesticide, ask for the EPA registration number, whether the pesticide or the company is registered with the state department of agriculture and where it will be shipped from.

If you receive a product that you did not order, don't pay for it, and don't pay to send it back.

If the salesperson requests a down payment, place your order on the condition that your bank will hold the down payment in escrow until the product is received. That will put out of business those companies who finance tomorrow's sales with the down payment you make today.

Note to editors: A farmer who feels victimized by a pesticide telephone huckster should report the company to the state agricultural agency. In Minnesota call (612) 296-8547.

Work Ethic Changes With Industrial Moves

by David M. Maxfield
Smithsonian New Service

"Work, work, work," said American naturalist and writer Henry David Thoreau, addressing an audience in New Bedford, MA, a booming factory town in 1854. "It would be glorious to see mankind at leisure once."

Thoreau knew his topic firsthand, for he spoke during the great roar of the nation's Industrial Revolution — the span of decades between 1790 and 1860 that forever changed the world. Coming fast after the War for Independence, this second revolution, its historians declare, was the most important change separating our complex world from the technologically far, far simpler life of Colonial America.

New factories cut into the tranquil landscape. Textile companies, machine shops and ironworks came first, though the speed at which new plants opened varied from industry to industry and place to place. Scores of amazing new inventions, many familiar household names today, altered daily life: Bigelow's carpet loom, Howe's sewing machine, Goodyear's rubber overshoes, Colt's revolver.

The ways Americans labored rapidly changed too. "The Industrial Revolution is about more than machines," says Steven Lubar, organizer of a new permanent exhibition, "Engines of Change," at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. "New management practices were just as important as technology."

The casual, camaraderie of the Colonial workship, where a day of labor might be followed by a day of hunting or fishing, was vanishing as fast as the nation's wild game. In 1813, the superintendent at the Springfield (Mass.) Armory put forth a representative set of rules that controlled not only the way work was done there but also the behavior of the employees and their families. Declared one regulation: "Due attention is to be paid to the Sabbath and no Labor, no Business, amusement, play, recreation and. . . proceeding incompatible with the Sacred Duties will be allowed.

The factories, the machines, the management systems meant not only an enormous increase in production but also a boom in comsumption. While Americans became accustomed to a vast marketplace of new goods, Lubar and others have found that there was a substantial price to pay for these products.

"It now appears that Americans of the early 19th century were making a difficult transition from the world of household production and the artisan's shop to the world of commercial farming and the wage system," historian Harry L. Watson recently suggested in the journal of the National Endowment for the Humanities. "What the victims of this process resented most was the loss of autonomy it entailed. In other words, they believed their liberty was in danger."

American workers today appear to be in the midst of eerily similar challenges of their own, with technology changing once again and foreign competitors forging inroads in traditionally American enterprises. For management, workers and American society as a whole, "work has become a problem," according to psychologist Michael Maccoby, a paticipant in a 1984 Library of Congress "Symposium on Work."

For many, the problem is as basic as employment, lost as technical advances "wiped out traditional jobs," Maccoby said. For the well-educated, work "is a problem because (often) it does not sufficiently engage skills or meet aspirations." And for private-sector management, the task is "to gain higher levels of motivation and efficiency" to remain competitive in sales markets.

Americans have not always taken their bread-winning this seriously. As Thoreau's New Bedford speech implied, the first American dream was not so much of work but of leisure. It was Thoreau, after all, who described his own occupation as "inspector of snowstorms and anticipator of sunrises." Yet for most 19-century Americans, University of Wisconsin historian Daniel Rodgers noted in a 1978 study of the work ethic, "to doubt the moral pre-eminence of work was the act of a conscious heretic."

The reasons Americans five for going to work have changed every so often, however. The Puritan work ethic motivated many early Americans. They found it morally necessary to have a "calling" — to labor for the glory of God. By the time of factory-building, interest in work had turned fiercely practical. In a world of pressing material demands, the laboring class was reminded over and over that a slackening of pace would send the nation — and them — into the abyss of poverty.

Americans apparently like to think more positively, for it was not long before the reason to work had a new lure. To gain a sense of dignity and mastery on the job was no longer entirely satisfying. Now, like the heroes of Horatio Alger, workers wanted to get rich, perhaps even as rich as the Rockeffellers and Vanderbilts. The industries left behind by the capitalists set the stage for today's job holders. For them, careerism, based on technical expertise, has formed a new version of the work ethic.

As the Museum of American History exhibition "Engines of Change" reveals, by and large the republic's first citizens, most of them farmers, found "it easy to accept" not only new ideas about work but also innovative machinery that powered the industrial age. The farmers already were handy with special tools used at home and nearby gristmills. Moreover, the vast natural resources — timber, water power, minerals — fueled industrial development, and the people themselves — European immigrants, native Americans and black slaves — had varied skills that made industrialization possible.

The final ingredient of the nation's industrial success is harder to define. "Something about American culture set it apart," Lubar believes. "American institutions were less rigid than their European counterparts, readier to change. Many Americans were freer to try new ways of doing things."

Still, some weren't so sure where all this was headed. The role of industry was debated at tall levels, by young girls in textile mills and by guests at Thomas Jefferson's table. Representing the viewpoint of small planters, Southerns and many merchants, Jefferson was convinced that manufacturing cities produced evils incompatible with good government. "Let our workships remain in Europe," the Virginian said, an opinion vigorously opposed by such pro-growth Federalists as John Adams and Alexander Hamilton. Other national figures saw both sides of the issue. "Machinery is good," Ralph Waldo Emerson quipped, "but mother wit is better."

The rate at which manufacturing entered American life illustrates the impact of the Industrial Revolution. In 1820, 2.1 million people farmed and only 350,000 were factory hands. By 1860, the number of farmers had tripled whereas the count of factory workers had leaped fivefold.

But the speed with which actual machinery entered the picture is murkier history. While industries such as clockmaking and gunmaking were highly mechanized, some factories had no machines at all. Even in the bustling garment industry, thousands of women sewed by hand. By gathering workers together in machineless plants, capitalists could better control the workforce, divide up tasks and save transportation expenses.

When industry came, "some lives were changed overnight," Lubar says. Within a decade of the 1814 opening of textile mills in Waltham, Mass., the workers went on strike to protest low wages. Poor working conditions, including machine "speed-ups" and worker "stretch-outs" to watch over more and more equipment, also irritated employees. Some owners were benevolent in their management, yet for many workers, the lofty talk about the glory of work did nothing to relieve their back-breaking hours.

The managerial revolution that coincided with factory building was especially hard on those who were used to working on their own. But factories could not function in this work style. Some workers accepted the new standards; others, such as workers at the Harper's Ferry (W.Va.) armory, protested to Congress that theirs had become a "military style of work." The enterprising saved to open their own shops. Activists sparked the later rise of unionism. Some of the disgruntled just quit and headed west.

Workers today do not suffer the same "machine anxiety" that once rippled through America, Lubar believes, but "the issue that remains is whether you have control of your own work. There's still anxiety about that." From foreign competition, there may be certain lessons. As Maccoby told the Library of Congress symposium, replacing rigid work rules and procedures with innovative production and problem-solving teams of workers, as Sweden and Japan have done, can boost both output and job satisfaction.

Some scholars have suggested that more important matters transcend these pragmatic issues, Lubar says. "But spiritual and moral values are connected to the industrial changes. On some deep level, the changes affect the way we think of ourselves."

MICHAEL WAISANEN, a student at the Thief River Falls AVTI from Grand Rapids, placed second in the gas welding division for post-secondary students at the VICA skills contest in Minneapolis March 21 and 22. Waisanen is a first year student at the AVTI who plans to major in welding.

DNR NEWS

DNR To Protect Loons

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has taken action to protect loon-nesting areas and parks in the state from problems associated with the commercial harvesting of minnows and leeches from public waters.

In a Commissioner's Order, the DNR expanded existing regulations prohibiting the commercial taking of leeches or minnows in certain waters, solely for commercial reasons.

"We are prohibiting this activity from all state parks, Wildlife Management Areas, designated trout waters and within 50 yards of any loon nests for good reasons," said DNR Commissioner Joe Alexander.

Alexander noted that commercial minnow activity can seriously disturb loon nesting, causing many birds to leave their nests open to predators. Minnesota currently has the largest population of loons in the lower 48 states. This new regulation will help preserve our loon population.

"In addition," Alexander explained, "the commercial exploitation of our parks is not consistent with the DNR's park management policy, which is to protect parks as a natural system."

He noted that future minnow or leech-taking activity in these areas will not be allowed "except by special permit issued by the Commissioner of Natural Resources or his authorized agent."

Conservationist of the Year

A Hugo resident has been selected Minnesota Nongame Wildlife Conservationist of the Year by the Nongame Wildlife Program of the Department of Natural Resources.

Bob Anderson, a falconer, was chosen because of the extensive work he has done on behalf of the peregrine falcon. He had developed a propagation facility to raise the endangered falcons in captivity, and has been instrumental for years in helping restore them in the state.

Last year, he hatched and raised 10 peregrine falcon chicks released in 1986. This year he hopes to raise 20 to 30 more for release. "The maintenance and raising of peregrine falcons requires a great deal of dedication and attention to detail," said DNR Nongame Director Carrol Henderson, in giving Anderson the award.

TRF Indoor Archery League

Thief River Falls Archery League completed its regular season league schedule Wednesday, March 18. League playoffs were planned this week.

Annual League awards banquet will be held for all league members and their families at Putzy's Cafe Sunday, March 29. The meal will be served at 1:30 p.m., with the awards presentation planned immediately after the meal. Free roller skating for league members and their families will be offered until 6 p.m.

Banquet cost is $3.50 per person, with the Thief River Falls Archery Club picking up the tab for the balance of the cost.

Bullseye Bowmen won regular season Big Game League honors this winter with a 35-point total for nine weeks of indoor competition above the Old Arena. Arctco was the runner-up finisher with 28 points. Bullseye Bowmen team members include Peter Tri, with a year-end per game average of 84.67 out of a possible 100 points, Barry Llimatainen (85.23), Greg Ose (93.67), and Dave Hanson (94.23).

Hide Hunters won the Small Game League title with 30½ points, finishing just ahead of the Altitude Archers' 29½-point effort. Hide Hunters squad includes Mark Mattson (81.00), David Weckwerth (77.87), John Monroe (83.59), and Tony Hoglo (75.57).

Eighteen four-member teams took part in the weekly league schedule this winter. Club officials said it was a very successful, and very competitive year. They remind interested archers that the league will be in full swing again next year. Anyone with questions about the program, or the upcoming banquet should contact Dana Klos at 681-7592, or Darrel Janisch at 681-2106.

MSHSL News

In the period from 1970-1987 17 years of growth in girls athletics, a statewide athletic program for young women in Minnesota has been produced which is unparalleled in our athletic history, writes Larry Larson of the Minnesota State High School League.

It is exciting to contemplate the visual impact of these young women as they represent nearly 1,500 high school teams in 12 interscholastic sports as well as the commitment and efforts of Minnesota schools to the develpment of equity in the athletic programs.

Outdoor News

A cooperative effort is being made by a variety of conservation organizations in the state to restore the peregrine falcon to prominence. A total of 36 falcons were released in the state last year, and at least 36 more will be released each year for the next several years. Most of the peregrine falcon population died out in the early 1960s due to the use of DDT and its poisoning effects on the birds.

Nordics Do Well

Marshall County Central girls high school basketball coach Tom Mjelde felt his team made a good showing at the 1987 Minnesota Class A state basketball tournament that was completed Saturday at the Met Center in Bloomington.

The Nordics lost a 40-36 opening round quarterfinal game Thursday to Rochester Lourdes, a team that went on to win the tournament title, defeated Fairfax-Gibbon 55-52 in a Friday consolation round semifinal match-up, then lost a 59-39 consolation championship game Saturday to a strong Tracy-Milroy team.

"I was really pleased with the way we performed down there," said Mjelde. "I think we represented Region 8 real well."

There was after-the-fact pride in losing by just four points to the eventual state champion, noted Mjelde. "I thought defensively we played well enough to win that first game," he said. "If our offense had clicked a little better, we could have won it."

A state tournament victory — whether in the championship or consolation round — was a real treat, acknowledged Mjelde. "We played that late game Thursday, then had to play again Friday morning, so it was a little tough," he said. "We were behind most of the way, but the girls never gave up. They just kept battling back. To win a game down there was the most important thing that has ever happened to our basketball program."

A lopsided consolation championship game loss to Tracy-Milroy was taken in stride, according to Mjelde. "We played some tough competition," he said. "We lost to the state champion by four points, and Tracy-Milroy was the favorite going into the tournament."

It was a banner 24-3 season for the Nordics, and with four starters returning next winter, the Nordics will be in a position to challenge for District 32A and Region 8A honors again in 1987-88.

Miscellaneous

+ Brian Johnston of Thief River Falls, a junior defenseman on the Concordia College hockey team in Moorhead, was one of four Cobbers named this week to the MIAC all-conference team. Teammate Mark Rice, a senior defenseman from Moorhead, was named the most valuable player in the MIAC, and first-year Cobbers head coach Steve Baumgartner was named MIAC Coach of the Year.

+ Annual Maroon and Gold high school all-star hockey series for graduating seniors will be played this weekend — 2 p.m. games in Warroad Saturday and in Grand Rapids Sunday. Section 8 products skating for the Gold Team include goalie Corey Chwialkowski of Bemidji, forwards Jon Helgeson of Roseau and Shane McFarlane of Warroad, plus defenseman David Marvin of Warroad.

+ Northome school district recently approved a consolidation with Big Falls, which will leave its long-time association with Littlefork. It will mean an additional 53 senior high students for Northome, which combined with Kelliher this year for athletic competition. Big Falls ended its association with Littlefork over a move to close the Bigfork elementary school. Littlefork-Big Falls represented District 29A at the Region 8A girls high school basketball trournament two weeks ago.

+ Minnesota Amateur Hockey Association Pee-Wee A and Bantam A state hockey tournament championship games were carbon copies of each other Sunday when Grand Rapids came out a one-goal winner over Roseau in both events — quite a feat when you consider there are over 500 teams at each level in Minnesota. Roseau had won three straight PeeWee A state titles, but returned just one player from last year's championship team. Roseau still reached the finals, though, with a pair of 2-1 wins over Rochester and Bloomington Jefferson that clinched a title game spot in the eight-team, two-division, round-robin format even though Roseau lost a third start to Edina 5-0. Grand Rapids took the title game 3-2. Roseau Bantams beat Edina 6-3, handled Eveleth 12-3, and stopped Burnsville 9-5 to gain a championship game spot. Grand Rapids won 5-4.

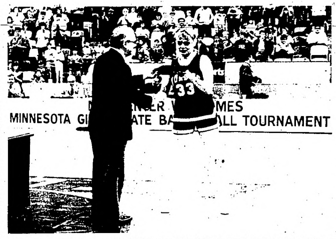
About 230 out of the original 410 packets of Four-Season Shrubs are still available through any DNR office, Soil Conservation Service Office or county extension agent, it was announced by DNR Nongame Director Carrol Henderson.

"The habitat created by these shrubs is especially attractive to songbirds, robins, brown-thrushers, cat birds, pheasants, cedar wax wings and mourning doves," Henderson explained. "Any homeowner wishing to attract these birds should purchase and use one of these packets."

Developed by the DNR Forestry and Wildlife Division and Minnesota Nurserymen's Association, the packets include 50 seedlings of Nanking cherry, wild plum, western sandcherry, Juneberry, red osier dogwood, Russian olive, cotoneaster, ginnala maple, Manchurian crab, and red-splendor crab.



MINNESOTA GI ATE BA LL TOURNAMENT

JODI FOSS, the lone senior on the Marshall County Central girls high school basketball team, accepted a participation plaque for the Nordics Saturday morning after they closed out their appearance at the 1987 Minnesota Class A state tournament with a 59-39 loss to Tracy-Milroy in the consolation championship game at the Met Center in Bloomington. The Region 8A champions lost to eventual state champion Rochester Lourdes 40-36 in opening round quarterfinal play Thursday, then beat Fairfax-Gibbon 55-52 in the consolation semifinals Friday before losing to Tracy-Milroy. 1986-87 Northland Basketball Review . . .

Records Set By NCC Women

Seven records were re-written during the 1986-87 Northland Community College women's basketball season, according to the year-end figures released this week by head coach Tom Neibauer of the Pioneers.

Record-setting efforts included two individual career figures, two individual single-season marks, one individual single-game performance, and two team standards.

Jody Pahlen of Plummer closed out her two-year Northland basketball career as the school record-holder for points and assists. She wound up with 768 points (a 17.5 average per game) to surpass the 732-point figure put into the books by Georgine Troska of Goodridge during the 1977-78 and 1978-79 Northland basketball seasons when she averaged 17.9 points per game. Pahlen also finished with 226 assists to top the old figure of 179 set by Thief River Falls' Paula Wilkens during the 1984-85 and 1985-86 seasons.

Janelle Lorsung of Waubun also had two record-breaking figures this winter. She set a single-season scoring mark with 464 points (21.1 average) to break Troska's 430-point standard, and set a single-game record with a 37-point outing to top a 32-point figure that was shared by Pahlen and Troska.

A third individual record was set by Sheila Jaeger of Plummer this year when she finished with a 55 per cent field goal shooting figure (48-for-87). The old 45 per cent record mark owned by Troska (178-for-393) was also topped by Lorsung (191-for-369) and Angie Enerson of Mentor (117-for-226), who both shot 52 per cent from the field this season.

Two team scoring records fell in 1986-87 as the Pioneers collected 1,568 points (71 points per game) to break a 1977-78 figure of 1,310 points, and they established a single-game record in a 119-33 win over Itasca, eclipsing a 97-24 record outing against Red River of Winnipeg in 1981-82.

Talent-wise it was one of Northland's best teams in history, but because the Pioneers also faced one of their toughest schedules ever, they wound up one game over the .500 mark at 12-11. Those facts were underlined in year-end results when Northland lost tough 82-77 and 73-64 games to Fergus Falls while finishing with a come-from-behind 79-76 overtime victory over the University of Minnesota-Crookston. Northland wound up third behind Fergus Falls and UMC in the final Northwest Division standings, and watched as the Spartans and Trojans swept through the 1987 Minnesota Community College Conference state tournament field, with UMC beating Fergus Falls in the finals.

Northland's potent offense included the 21-point average by Lorsung, a 16-point average from Pahlen, and a 13-point average from Enerson, a front-line trio that ranked second to none in the state. The Pioneers' 71-point scoring average was accompanied by a 65-point defensive average.

Northland wins this winter came against the Alumni 84-48; Rainy River 98-68, 92-44; Itasca 119-33, 73-54; Anoka-Ramsey 78-42; Hibbing 84-53; Vermilion 74-65; Mesabi 71-58; Brainerd 95-46, 78-38; and UMC 79-76 in overtime.

Losses came at the hands of the Concordia JV 79-49, 78-57; Mayville JV; Inver Hills 73-59; NDSU-Bottineau 77-58 and Northern State JV 75-62 in the Wahpeton Invitational; Wahpeton 64-49; Fergus Falls 82-77, 73-64; UMC 77-66; and Devils Lake 85-45. UMC was the Minnesota state champion; Devils Lake was the North Dakota state champion, Region 13 state champion and NJCAA national tournament participant; and the Concordia varsity was the NCAA Division III national runner-up.

"Won-loss records aren't as important as improving yourself for that final swing through the conference schedule," pointed out Neibauer, who plans the same type of schedule for 1987-88. "Our kids really improved during the year playing that tough schedule."

And that improvement allowed the Pioneers to stay even with the strong UMC and Fergus Falls teams in the Northwest Division — without question the strongest division in the MCCC this winter. The Pioneers stumbled, though, when they let a nine-point lead slip away in that 82-77 home court loss to Fergus Falls Feb. 9. A Northland win there would have meant a season-ending three-way first place tie in the Northwest Division.

"We had some good kids," praised Neibauer. "It was a good season."

Puetz All-America At UND

from Kathy Howe,
Assistant SID
University of North Dakota

Michelle Puetz

Michelle Puetz, a freshman from Thief River Falls, recently earned All-America honors in swimming at the NCAA II Nationals in Long Beach, CA.

Puetz qualified for the NCAA II's in the 100-backstroke, 200-backstroke, and as a leg on the 400-medley relay, 400-freestyle relay, 200-medley relay, and 800-freestyle relay.

She finished third in the 100 backstroke (59.21) and ninth in the 200 backstroke (2:11.23), while the 400 medley relay finished seventh (4:02.30), 400 freestyle relay was fifth (3:43.55), and the 200 medley relay third (1:50.30), 400 freestyle relay was fifth (3:43.55), and the 200 medley relay third (1:50.03).

Her finishes gave her three All America honors and two honorable mention All America awards.

Puetz, in her rookie season at UND, was earlier named the North Central Conference swimmer of the year. She set NCC records in three individual events in the NCC while swimming a leg on three record-setting relays. Puetz holds the following records in the NCC: 50 backstroke (28.21), 100 backstroke (59.72), and 200 backstroke (2:10.60). Relay records are the 800 freestyle relay (8:01.10), 200 medley relay (1:50.27), and 400 medley relay (4:01.87).

UND school records set by Puetz this season include the 100 backstroke (:59.21) and 200 backstroke (2:10.60).

Puetz, according to coach Mike Stromberg, is a "diamond in the rough". She turned in the best season ever recorded by a freshman swimmer at UND so with three years remaining we'll probably hear alot about swimmer Michelle Puetz.

Sioux women captured their sixth consecutive North Central Conference title while finishing sixth in the NCAA II Nationals.

— Youth Hockey —

Thief River Falls VFW Bantam A hockey team reached the finals of a weekend tournament for the first time this season Sunday, but had to settle for a runner-up finish after a 4-3 double-overtime championship game loss to Alexandria at the Brainerd Invitational.

Down 2-0 in the second period of an opening round quarterfinal match-up with host Brainerd, Thief River Falls struck for three goals in a quick 1:30 span of the third period for a 3-2 victory. Chad Kleinvachter, David Stengrim, and Roger Anderson scored the goals. Anderson also had an assist. Ryan Haugen had 24 saves in the Thief River Falls nets; the Brainerd goalie stopped 27 shots.

Corey Poole scored 11 seconds into a sudden-death overtime period to give Thief River Falls a 5-4 semifinal win over Duluth RJ Sports. Poole scored twice, and also picked up two assists. John Seaverson had a goal and three assists, Paul Borchert had a goal and two assists, while Kleinvachter scored once. Jay Lusignan was in goal for the winners, stopping 25 shots; the Duluth goalie had 32 saves.

The Thief River Falls-Alexandria championship game was a dandy, reported Thief River Falls coach Jeff Tunberg, featuring good back and forth, tight-checking hockey. Seaverson scored twice, Stengrim scored once, and Poole had two assists. Haugen made 41 stops; the Alexandria goalie had 38 saves.

After a regulation 5-on-5 overtime session, tournament rules had the team skating 4-on-4 in the second sudden-death overtime period. If a third extra session would have been needed it would have been 3-on-3, and finally, a fourth overtime would have been 3-on-3 without goalies, according to Tunberg.

A lengthy Thief River Falls lay-off had ended last Thursday when Thief River Falls faced the Grand Forks International All-Stars at the University of North Dakota Winter Sports Building, losing an 8-3 decision. Jeff Novak, Corey Howe, and Anderson scored the goals. Lusignan and Haugen combined for 29 saves; the Grand Forks goalie had 25 stops.

The 1986-87 season ended when Thief River Falls held off the Grand Forks International All-Stars 7-5 in a Tuesday rematch at the Sports Arena as the winners built a 5-0 lead, watched as the visitors pulled within 6-5, then hit an open net goal at the end. Poole led the offense with three goals and two assists, while Wade Jorde scored twice, Seaverson had a goal and an assist, Howe had a goal and an assist, and Borchert picked up two assists. Lusignan and Haugen combined for 24 stops; the Grand Forks goalie also had 24 saves.

Pee-Wees

Both Thief River Falls Pee-Wee teams will complete their 1986-87 seasons with tournaments Saturday and Sunday.

Thief River Falls Eagles Pee-Wee A team will be at the Roseau Invitational, while the Thief River Falls Elks Pee-Wee B team participates in the Baudette Invitational.

Squirts

A two-week combination of 10-year-olds on the Thief River Falls Squirt Blue team wound up 0-6 following three losses in the East Grand Forks Invitational over the weekend.

Thief River Falls lost to Edina 13-1, fell to Bismarck 5-3, and dropped a 4-3 decision to Devils Lake. The team had lost earlier single meetings with Roseau (twice) and East Grand Forks.

Meanwhile, the 10-year-olds on the Thief River Falls Squirt Gold team completed a 2-1 two-week mini-season with a come-from-behind 3-2 win over Crookston Saturday at the Old Arena.

Crookston started with a 2-0 lead, but a goal by Kyle Boman late in the second period cut the deficit to 2-1, and Thief River Falls struck for two quick goals at the start of the third period for the win. Boman tied it at the 47-second mark, and a length-of-the ice power play rush by defenseman Ben Engelstad produced the game-winner at 2:15.

Thief River Falls goalies Jeff Lundgren and Ryan Skibicki combined for 20 saves; the Crookston goalie had 18 stops.

Two first-round games were played Tuesday in the Squirts In-House playoffs at the Old Arena as Red Lake Falls beat Coke 10-4, while Pepsi defeated Pizza Hut 4-2.

Thursday semifinals will feature No. 1-seeded Hardees-Bridgeman vs. Red Lake Falls at 5:30 p.m., and No. 2-seeded TG Sporting Goods vs. Pepsi at 7.

Friday's finals will have Coke and Pizza Hut playing for the consolation title at 4:30 p.m., followed by the third place game at 6 p.m., and the championship game at 7:30 p.m.

Northland Opens 1987 Baseball Season Today . . .

Pioneers At Metrodome

Northalnd Community College baseball team is in Minneapolis today (Wednesday) opening its 1987 season inside the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome.

Coach Rick Nelson's Pioneers were scheduled to play three games against Willmar today starting at 11 a.m. A Thursday doubleheader will find Northland facing Hibbing at 11 a.m., and playing Fergus Falls at 3:30 p.m.

A season-opening appearance at the Metrodome has become an annual affair for the Pioneers, who will use weather-protected guaranteed playing time to prepare for the upcoming Minnesota Community College Conference-counting schedule, which is slated to start with a Saturday, April 4, doubleheader at the University of Minnesota-Crookston. Like most northern climate baseball teams at this point of the season, the Pioneers have been confined to indoor drills inside the limited space of a basketball gymnasium since preseason drills began March 9.

Twenty-five players were scheduled to make the trip to the Metrodome, and they were all going to get a chance to play, said Nelson. The squad includes four returning sophomores — Paul Balstad of Winger, plus Dean Brandon, Brian Dormady, and Tim Nyland of Thief River Falls. Another sophomore, Al Melvie of Viking, returns to the program after a short hiatus.

John Wilebski of Greenbush was also expected to be one of the top sophomore returnees, but he has decided to give up the sport this spring.

Freshmen on hand include Joe Blankenfeld, Kevin Fanfulik, Lee Hamre, and Kevin Nelson (TRF); Tim Borgen and Grant Grabanski (Grand Forks); Darrin Byklum (Grygla); Mike Coffield (Lancaster); Dan Cwikla and Shawn Wagner (Middle River); Darrin Elliot, Deon Schmidt, and Mike Zelinski (Fargo, ND); Rodney Gill (Inkster, MI); Steve Landsem and Dean Zimel (Dilworth); Steve Mahony (Jamestown, ND); Keith Nelson (Oklee); David Rolf (McIntsoh); and Rod Wilson (Detroit, MI).

Without an opportunity to watch the team under game conditions, Nelson wasn't in position to predict what kind of season the Pioneers would have before leaving with his team Tuesday for the Twin Cities. But he's optimistic. "In my three years with the baseball program here, I think this is the best group of athletes we've had," he explained. "We're going to the Metrodome with the idea of taking a look at all the kids. It'll be a good experience for them."

Nyland and Nelson are familiar figures to Thief River Falls baseball followers, and could prove to be the team's top pitchers. Nelson said he was headed to the Metrodome with 10 potential pitchers, and hopes to find five or six of them who will carry the Pioneers through their schedule of MCCC doubleheaders.

Northland will be grouped with Fergus Falls, Itasca, Hibbing and UMC in the newly-religned MCCC Northern Division this spring. Brainerd, a traditional power in the old Northwest Division set-up, has been moved to the Southern Division this year. Top two regular season finishers in each division will earn state tournament playoff berths in late May.

State Tournament Opens Thursday

Seventy-fifth Diamond Jubilee Anniversary of the state high school boys basketball tournament will begin Thursday and run through Saturday. Quarterfinal first round games Thursday will be held at two sites — Williams Arena (Class A) and the St. Paul Civic Center Arena (Class AA).

All semifinal and championship games will take place on Friday and Saturday at the St. Paul Civic Center Arena. Class AA semifinal games are set for 1:05 and 3 p.m. on Friday, while Class A will play Friday at 7:05 and 9 p.m. The championship games on Saturday are 3 p.m. in Class A and 9 p.m. in Class AA.

First round quarterfinal pairings in Class AA Thursday at the St. Paul Civic Center Arena are as follows: 1:05 p.m. — Region 1AA Rosemount (14-10) vs. Region 8AA Moorhead (16-7); 3 p.m. — Region 4AA Blaine (16-8) vs. Region 5AA Park Center (14-9).

The opposite Class AA bracket pairings look like this: 7:05 p.m. — Region 3AA Woodbury (22-0) vs. Region 6AA Bloomington Jefferson (23-0); and 9 p.m. — Region 7AA Duluth East (20-3) vs. Region 2AA Willmar (17-6).

Class A pairings Thursday at Williams Arena: Upper Bracket — 1:35 p.m. — Region 2A Jackson (18-7) vs. Region 5A Crosby-Ironton (20-5); and 3:30 p.m. — Region 1A Waseca (22-2) vs. Region 6A Hawley (25-0). Lower Bracket — 7:35 p.m. — Region 8A Norman County West (Halstad) (23-2) vs. Region 7A Aurora-Hoyt Lakes (22-3) and 9:30 p.m. — Region 4A Minnesota Valley Lutheran (21-4) vs. Region 3A Tracy-Milroy (21-3).

Defending State Class AA champion Bloomington Jefferson, winners of 31 straight games over two seasons, and top rated Hawley of Class A, undefeated in 25 games this season, are considered the teams to beat. The lone other unbeaten team among the 16 in the field is Woodbury, who will oppose Bloomington Jefferson in the first round.

Bloomington Jefferson in Class AA and Norman County West in Class A are the lone repeat entries back from last year's tournament. Bloomington Jefferson, of course, won the 1986 title, while Norman County West was the Class A consolatioin champion. Last year's Class A state champion, LeSueur, ranked No. 2 behind Hawley in final ratings, lost in district tournament playdowns this season, reports Larry Larson of the Minnesota State High School League staff.

Blaine and Park Center in Class AA and Jackson and Minnesota Valley Lutheran in Class A will be playing in first state tournaments. Blaine was founded in 1972, Park Center in 1971. Jackson's history dates to 1868 and Minnesota Valley Lutheran to 1979.

Bloomington Jefferson, Moorhead, and Woodbury in Class AA, and Aurora-Hoyt Lakes and Waseca in Class A are schools in this year's field who have previously won state basketball titles. Bloomington Jefferson, with titles in 1976, 1982 and 1986, could tie a record held by Red Wing and Duluth Central should it win its fourth championship. Moorhead won titles in 1928 and 1929. Woodbury was No. 1 in 1983, while Aurora-Hoyt Lakes, known as Aurora in 1923, was state titlist that year. Waseca won the championship in 1918.

Six of the eight schools which comprise the Class AA field have had previous state tournament appearances. Moorhead leads with 16 trips. Others include Willmar (12), Duluth East (7), Bloomington Jefferson (7), Rosemount (3), and Woodbury (3).

Crosby-Ironton, which last appeared in 1969 when this current team was being born, has appeared in the most state tournaments among Class A schools. C-I will make its 13th trip. Others include Waseca (6), Aurora-Hoyt Lakes (3), Norman County West (3), Hawley (2), and Tracy-Milroy (2).

While Jackson and Minnesota Valley Lutheran are making first appearances in a state tournament, it has been a long time for many of the other state entries this year. As example: Hawley (1959); Tracy-Milroy, known as Tracy (1940); Waseca (1975); Aurora-Hoyt Lakes (1956); and Crosby-Ironton (1969).

Blaine, with an upper three grades enrollment of 2,252 students, is the biggest school entered in the tournament. Norman County West, meanwhile, is the smallest with an enrollment of 92 students in grades 10, 11 and 12.

To help commemorate the 75th anniversary of the state boys basketball tournament, the Minnesota State High School League has invited all high schools in Minnesota who have had the honor of winning a state championship to be a part of a state champions reception planned for Saturday in St. Paul. Coaches and squad members will be in attendence.

In addition, all high schools who have had the honor of having a team represented in a state tournament have been asked to invite former players and coaches from tournament teams at their school to attend state tournament team reunions, scheduled for each day of this year's event.

Tournament Notes

All 16 teams will quarter in seven St. Paul hotels. All squads will practice at the St. Paul Civic Center between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Wednesday . . . If Jack Evens coaches Bloomington Jefferson to a state title, he would become the only coach in state history to coach four state chmapionship teams . . . Currently, Jim Hastings, Duluth Central, and Duane Baglien, Edina, both retired, hold the distinction along with Evens of winning three state titles . . . KMSP-TV, Channel 9, Minneapolis, will televise in its entirety all semifinal and championship games in both classes, and portions of all eight games from both arenas on Thursday. The broadcast team includes Perry Williams, Jim Gilleland, Bob Kurtz, and Janet Karvonen.

Two Mr. Basketball Finalists will be appearing in the state tournament. They include Jeff Wirtz, a 6-5 forward from Blaine (20 ppg) and Dave Zollar, a 6-7 forward from Duluth East (22 ppg) . . . Head coaches Steve Bender, Rosemount, and Kenny Novak, Jr., Blaine, both played in the state tournament in 1974. Bender with Richfield and Novak for Hopkins Lindbergh . . . Waseca leading scorer Greg Vilt has scored more than 1,100 points in his career . . . Wade Wacker, a 6-0 senior guard, became the leading career scorer at Jackson when surpassing the 1,400 career mark this season . . . Minnesota Valley Lutheran's 6-8 center Dave Begalka is averaging 23 points per game.

Crosby-Ironton is led by senior guard Mike Nagorski, who is a 1,000 point club member and has a 20 ppg average this season . . . All seven seniors on the Hawley team are members of the National Honor Society. The Nuggets' leading point-getter is 6-3 guard Randy Kragerud, 18 points per game. Hawley starts an all-senior lineup . . . The tallest player in the tournament is Dave Christianson, 6-9 center for Norman County West who is averaging 14 ppg . . . Aurora-Hoyt Lakes has won 20 consecutive games since losing three games in a row early in the season to Orr, International Falls, and Chisholm . . . The 1976 Bloomington Jefferson state championship team finished 27-0.

— News From Minnesota DNR —

Bear Hunting

DNR wildlife officials announced that the 1987 statewide bear season will open Sept. 1 and close on Oct. 18. Most bear hunting will continue to be by permit, selected in a computerized drawing. However, portions of the bear range are being opened to unlimited hunting in response to increasing bear depredation problems in crops.

Department will issue a maximum of 4,810 bear hunting permits in seven areas located in the primary bear range. A computerized drawing will be held to select hunters who will receive these permits. Those planning to enter the drawing have until Apr. 15 (earlier deadline than last year) to submit their applications. Applications for the drawing will be available from license agents.

Application information contains a map of the permit areas and the new no-quota area where the number of licenses is no longer limited. Hunters are advised to study the map to be certain of the area where they wish to apply.

Applicants must be at least 12 years of age prior to Sept. 1, possess a valid firearms safety certificate and not have had their big game hunting privileges suspended. Preference will be given to hunters who applied in previous drawings but were not selected.

An applicant's Drivers License number or Identification Card Number (issued in-lieu-of a Drivers License number by the Department of Public Safety) must be used to enter the drawing.

A person seeking a permit may apply, either individually or as a maximum four-person party. No person may apply more than once.

Those applying as a group must put all their applications together in one envelope. Either all party members will receive permits or none will. The preference rating of a group will be determined by the group member with the lowest preference.

Licenses for the no-quota area will be available at the DNR License Bureau and county auditors after July 1. Hunters that are chosen in the drawing for the permit areas are not eligible to purchase a license for the no-quota areas.

Hunters are advised that bears occur in limited numbers in the no-quota area. Most of this area is private land, where landowners premission is required.

Hunters will be limited to taking one bear for the season. The cost of a bear hunting license for residents is $25.75 and the non-resident fee is $150.75, including the 75-cent issuing fee.

100th Anniversary

Enforcement Division of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year.

"The variety of outdoor, recreational opportunities available in Minnesota, ranging from hunting and fishing to canoeing and camping, is unparalleled in the nation," said DNR Enforcement Division Director Gerald Kittridge. "Our state's conservation officers are responsible for enforcing the laws on these diverse activities and they do so with great dedication and professionalism."

Trout, Salmon Numbers

DNR Fisheries Division this week announced that an estimated 5.7 million trout and salmon weighing 122 tons were stocked into 167 lakes and 121 streams throughout Minnesota in 1986.

The trout and salmon were produced at the French River, Spire Valley, Lanesboro and Crystal Springs production facilities. The Lanesboro Hatchery produced 93,964 pounds of trout, the French River 55,770 pounds of trout and salmon, Crystal Springs 46,365 pounds of trout and Spire Valley 43,432 pounds of trout and salmon. An additional 2,977 pounds of trout and salmon were stocked from private sources.

Number and size of trout that were stocked in each lake or stream varied due to different management plans and recommendations. All of the 2.3 million salmon and 3.4 million (primarily rainbow) trout were stocked into Lake Superior and North Shore tributary streams.

Funding generated from the sale of the trout stamp and fishing surcharge contributed to production and distribution costs, of which 75 per cent are reimbursed through the Dingle-Johnson program.

Rocksbury

Valerie Torstveit, St. Hilaire

The sky was dreary and overcast, it looked like it could rain or snow, and a flock of approximately 35 to 40 crows was seen flying towards a wooded area. Let's hope that they had just arrived in the area and not that they were grouping together to head south again. Animals and birds alike must be traveling in groups these days. One evening 12 deer were seen on and near the highway. Wouldn't the hunters love to see a scene like that in November? The magpie bird has been seen in the yard of a rural Rocksbury family and this bird is not too common in this area. The birds are black and white and almost as large as a crow and they are very brave, coming even close to the family dog.

Gladys Heinze hosted a dinner at her home for her husband Frank Heinze and for Ervin Chapman who both had birthdays recently. Guests attending were Mr. and Mrs. Ole Bergland, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rondorf and Leo Hipsher.

Duane Walsberg of Twin Lakes visited on Monday and Tuesday with his mother, Yvonne Walsberg, at her home, also with his father, Victor Walsberg, at the medical center and also at the home of Virginia and Dennis Hallstrom. Joann Wold of Anchorage, AK called her mother, Yvonne Walsberg, a couple of different days to find out how her father Victor was recovering.

Stangeland Urges President To Sign Highway Bill

By both telephone and mail, Rep. Arlan Stangeland urged President Reagan Tuesday to sign into law the omnibus highway bill passed last week by the House and the Senate.

"Mr, President, this bill is long overdue," Stangeland urged. "Our highways have been neglected and Minnesota's construction season is in danger of collapsing if this bill is not signed into law." President Reagan has threatened to veto H.R. 2 as a budget buster.

"I understand the President's concern over spending," Stangeland continued, "but this bill has been trimmed to the bone already. There's nothing there that's not absolutely essential."

On March 19, the Senate approved the highway bill by a vote of 79 to 17, the same day it approved the 65 mph speed limit. The House passed the same highway bill earlier in the week by a resounding 407 to 17 vote margin.

Should the President veto, the bill will go back to the House and Senate for a vote to override. A two-thirds vote is required to override a Presidential veto.

"I'm certain the House will vote to override, and I'll support that vote," said Stangeland. "I would expect the Senate to be close, but there should be enough votes to pass this bill in the Senate as well."

The highway bill authorizes $68.5 billion for the nation's federal-aid highway program and $17.8 billion for mass transit assistance over the five years of the bill.

Bridgeman Plant Employees Aid Area Foodshelf

Employees at the Bridgeman plant in Thief River Falls are participating in Minnesota Foodshare's campaign to collect food for restocking Minnesota emergency foodshelves throughout the state.

The employee food drive is being held through Thursday and all foods donated will be delivered to the River Falls area foodshelf.

For the past four years, Minnesota Foodshare has conducted a monthlong food drive in March in cooperation with hundreds of businesses, churches and community groups. The drive supplies one-third of all food distributed to the needy each year from the state's 270 foodshelves.

Rob LaCoursiere, a Bridgeman employee, is coordinating the plant's food drive. Bridgeman's is a division of Land O'Lakes, Inc., and Land O'Lakes will match employee donations, in pounds, with a contribution of Land O'Lakes products to Minnesota Foodshare.

Rural Leadership Coalition Formed For 12 Counties

Aided by a $5,000 planning grant from the Northwest Minnesota initiative fund, the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) and Bemidji state university (BSU) are working cooperatively to provide leadership training to rural northwest Minnesota.

Under the project direction of Professor Ray Nelson of BSU, the coalition for rural leadership has been meeting since November of 1986 to develop a planning process to provide opportunities for systematic leadership training for current and emerging leaders in northwest Minnesota.

"The goal of the coalition will be the cooperative development of human resources in leadership education in order to help design and influence the future of the 12 counties involved in the Northwest initiative program," said Nelson.

The coalition has been reviewing existing area leadership programs and will soon name an advisory board to aid in a needs assessment which will lead to a model plan of action for delivery of leadership training to rural communities.

The initial board meeting will be held at 10 a.m. April 10, and will address such items as a brief overview of the project, a description of existing leadership programs in Minnesota, and a proposal for leadership training in rural communities in northwestern Minnesota. Additional grant aid will be sought from the Northwest initiative fund to enable the 12 targeted coutnies to more effectively design and influence their futures.

The 12 counties include Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall; Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

Members of the leadership coalition include professors Art Gullette, Dave Larkin, Ray Nelson and Riki Olson of BSU and professors Susan Brorson, Richard Christenson, Lynnette Mullins and Erman Ueland of UMC.

Lincoln Class Of 1967 To Meet

Volunteer Work Discussion Topic Next Wednesday

Pennington county extension service will present the topic "Making the Most of Your Volunteer Time" on Wednesday, April 1 at 1:30 p.m. in the Northwest regional library meeting room. County extension director Deborah Zak will discuss the history of volunteerism in Minnesota and why this state is unique in the quality of volunteers that it has.

Program participants will complete a self-assessment to find out what motivates them personally as a volunteer and how these interests can best be matched with volunteer responsibilities.

A panel of volunteer directors will discuss how they utilize volunteers, the type of training that is provided and the time commitment expected from the volunteer.

The panel includes Darla Twomey, director of the Northland community hospice program; Bev Rupprecht, coordinator of the Big Brother and Big Sister program; and Harl Gamber from the Retired Seniors Volunteer program.

Anyone who volunteers or manages a volunteer program is invited to attend this program which is free of charge.

This year has been proclaimed, "Year of the Volunteer" by Governor Rudy Perpich. Minnesota has a rich history of volunteerism and is viewed as a leader in volunteer development throughout the nation. Rural Minnesota thrives because of the role volunteers play in providing services that would not otherwise be possible in Pennington county and surrounding areas.

For more information regarding extension programs, contact the Pennington County Extension Office at 681-2116.

DOT Commissioner Outlines State's Highway Needs

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) commissioner Leonard W. Levine says that without action, much of the state's 12,100 mile trunk highway system will begin a rapid slide into an advanced stage of deterioration.

According to Levine, "an appropriate cycle of preserving and improving Minnesota's trunk highways would require 735 miles of various highway improvements, plus bridge repair and replacement, and other safety projects."

Such an effort would require that $825 million be spent on highway construction each year — compared to the current $350 million.

"Even at the $825 million level," Levine said, "it will still take 20 years to catch up on the backlog of identified road and bridge needs."

Levine noted other transportation issues that must be addressed:

+ Highway safety — Governor Rudy Perpich recently challenged the Minnesota departments of transportation and public safety to develop a plan and goal for significantly reducing serious injuries due to highway accidents by 1990. Mn-DOT is looking at creating a special highway safety category — targeting improvements to intersections. Preliminary figures show that during the two-year period of 1983-85, there were 1,200 intersections across the state at which six or more accidents took place. Through engineering improvements, Mn-DOT believes it could — within the next three years — help reduce that number by 10 per cent.

+ Congestion — Under current trends, congestion — particularly in urban settings — will be worse. It's predicted that in 20 years it will take twice as long as it does today for the average motorist in an urban setting to make the trip from home to work and back.

+ Highway Needs — Under current funding levels, in 20 years 67 per cent of state trunk hughway pavements will be rated in poor condition; 17 per cent are in poor condition today. Increasing use is taking its toll on many Minnesota roads not designed or built to handle heavier traffic.

+ Poor Roads Mean Increased Costs to Motorists — It costs anywhere from 23 to 28 cents per mile to own and operate an automobile. Under current highway funding levels, motorists will face higher vehicle operating costs. By the late 1990's it will cost Minnesotans an extra three cents per mile to pay for repairs and damage caused by driving over poorer roads. By accelerating the annual state trunk highway construction program to the $825 million mark, roads and bridges would be improved and that three-cent figure would be cut in half, Levine said.

"If Minnesota is to meet its changing economic and social needs, as well as its congestion and highway safety needs, adequate construction and funding levels are necessary to insure that Minnesota's roads and bridges are properly improved and maintained," he added.

Charity Tastes Good At The Food Fair In TRF

TRISTA ANDERSON, and her father Don Anderson of Thief River Falls were among the residents in our area to participate in the March of Dimes food fair held in the national guard armory in Thief River Falls Monday night. The food fair was held to benefit the March of Dimes. Fifteen area and local businesses had booths set up at the food fair.

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Charity can create a good feeling, but if it tastes good it feels even better.

"A Taste of the Falls," the title of a charity food fair sponsored by the March of Dimes in cooperation with local businesses, was held at the national guard armory in Thef River Falls Monday night.

A $5 admission price guaranteed the payee to a fine tasting fare, which included deli salad, wild rice soup, hors d'oeuvres, apple grande, turkey spread and dip, cream of broccoli soup, homemade vegetable soup, cookies, health foods, taco samples, homemade sausage, Coca-Cola, pizza, nachos, broccoli-ham roll-ups and caramel pecan ice cream.

Many area and local businesses purchased booth space at the event and served food items. All proceeds from the event went to the March of Dimes.

"We're real pleased with the turnout and support in Thief River Falls. Fifteen booths for the first year is really good," said Tracy Potter, division director of the March of Dimes in Grand Forks, ND.

The food fair held in Grand Forks this year drew about 24 to 28 commercial booths, Potter said. He said the turnout was heavier than in Thief River Falls, but that's to be expected, especially during the first year. Potter said at the end of the evening he hoped to collect between $600 and $700.

Food fairs are one of the main fundraising events for the March of Dimes. Potter who directs a district larger than many states, said he has about one fund raising event per month. His district is generally believed to stretch from Warren and Thief River Falls to Carrington, ND. It includes at least eight Minnesota counties and 13 North Dakota counties.

Potter said the funds are generally split 50-50 between local and national agencies. The reason being Potter said, is because only so much can be done at the local level without research being conducted at the national level.

Sally Tobin, event coordinator for the March of Dimes Birth Defects foundation in Grand Forks, ND, said there are many things the March of Dimes can do to prevent birth defects, but there are also many things which they do not have an answer for and need.

Two of the most serious problems being faced today, Tobin said, are fetal alcohol syndrome and fetal drug addiction syndrome. Tobin said with proper care, nutrition, and support being given to mothers these problems could be prevented.

"Right now the March of Dimes is interested in preventing premature babies and also babies born with low birth weight," Tobin said. "If people were aware of the proper nutrition, many of the causes of low birth weight could be prevented," Tobin said.

Tickets for the food fair were available at participating business places and were also sold at the door. Participating in the food fair were Red Owl, Hardee's, Bridgeman's, Land O'Lakes, Carol's Cafe, Lon's Restaurant and Lounge, Crookston Coca-Cola bottling company, Taco John's, Domino's Pizza, The Big Scoop, Best Western, American Legion and Fireside Fitness Center, Watkins store, and Gary's Rainbow Bakery.

The March of Dimes also had a booth distributing literature to those attending the event. Information about the March of Dimes can be found at the WIC office, public health nursing service, library and hospital in Thief River Falls.

The food fair was one of two events held in Thief River Falls. The other event may give those who ate too much at the food fair an opportunity to work it off. Potter said a 30 kilometer walkathon is scheduled for the early part of May. The walkathon is the only nationally planned event for the March of Dimes.

MFU And NFO To Mark Anniversary Of Collection Point

MINNESOTA FARMERS UNION WORKING TOGETHER
NATIONAL FARMERS ORGANIZATION

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Minnesota Farmers Union and National Farmers Organization members will be celebrating the first anniversary of the livestock collection point at the Joppru building in Thief River Falls soon.

"The goals of the joint venture are, to achieve a cost of production plus reasonable profit for farmers, and development of an orderly marketing system so that farmers can enjoy a profit," said Tim Lundeen, operating manager.

"It has been a real successful first year," said Lundeen. Lundeen believes farmers have joined the two organizations because they see a change needs to be made and they see the success of the organizations, Lundeen said.

"The joint marketing system works and works real well," Lundeen said.

The collection point, the first joint venture of MFU and NFO in northern Minnesota, and the nation, opened on April 7, 1986. Since that time the collection point has operated successfully. It has been open for livestock each Monday as well as any other day as needed. Presently, there are 31 jointly operated collection points in the state of Minnesota.

Butcher hogs, fat cattle, cull cows and bulls, sheep, butcher lambs and feeder cattle from a large number of MFU and NFO producers and others have run through the point since it opened.

Lundeen said as the second year begins he hopes they will have another successful year. And, he would like to see production increase by half as much again.

As its first anniversary approaches, a production drive will be conducted in the Northern part of the state by MFU and NFO personnel with the help of area people the week of March 30, 31, April 1, 2 and 3.

On April 3 an annual meeting will be held at the community center in Grygla. Supper will be served from 7 to 9 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $2.25 for children. A business meeting will follow at 8 p.m. Tickets can be purchased from and reservations made through board of director members and area producers from Tim Lundeen at 378-4499 or Gaylene Schmitz at 253-2543.

World's Fastest Hypnotist Brings Celebrities To NCC

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Eddie Murphy, Dolly Parton and Elvis Presley were among the celebrities making a performance at the Northland community college Wednesday. The real celebrities were not present, but young performers thought they were the celebrities for a short time under the careful guidance of hyptnotist John Kolisch.

Kolisch, who claims to be the world's fastest hypnotist, convinced several volunteers to concentrate on their favorite celebrity and then give a stand-up performance, which then brought the house down.

The sometimes embarrassing and often humorous antics of the hypnotized volunteers left the standing-room-only crowd in side-splitting laughter. Kolisch had the volunteers singing, dancing, telling jokes, smelling horrendous smells and even looking for their "ding-dong."

While Kolisch's show may have been humorous, it's purpose also had a serious side. Kolisch was demonstrating that hypnotism can be used to unlock barriers set up subconsciously. Kolisch said he would like to leave all the participants with a sense of self-worth and positive self-image.

An example of the positive aspects of hypnotism, Kolisch said, was demonstrated when on a trip last year he hypnotized a young girl who wanted to lose weight. He told her under a hypnotic state to keep up a positive self-image and diet and exercise regularly. She did and has continued to do well, he said.

Kolisch doesn't use any gimmicks to get his volunteers under a hypnotic state. He begins his show by asking for volunteers and then hypnotizes them by talking quietly to them and rubbing their heads, necks and backs.

Kolisch describes the hypnotic state as somewhere between wakefulness and slumber, a condition in which senses are still functioning. He uses only volunteers who are willing to be hypnotized.

In such a state, the group of volunteers was told near the end of the session to sit among the crowd and when he said two words they would smell something awful, turn to their neighbor and tell them they smell or get up and move away, but each time he said the two words the smell would increase in intensity. One young female volunteer immediately got up, covering her mouth and nose and started running away trying to avoid the smell. Others just sat where they were and covered their nose and mouth.

Later he told the group to turn to their neighbor and hug and kiss them and then tell them they thought they were very attractive. Embarrasingly enough it didn't seem to matter whether they were seated next to boy or girl.

When awakened temporarily, the volunteers seemed dazed, confused and didn't know what they had done. One volunteer said after the session that she felt like she had been really sleeping hard. Kolisch told each person that he or she would have total recall once they walked out of the door of the gymnasium and have a positive self-image. Friends of the volunteers seemed eager to make

Retail Sales Show Increase In TRF And Brooks

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Retail sales data released from the Minnesota department of revenue tax research division indicate that sales in the larger communities in the Tri-county area (Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties) have increased while smaller communities have generally seen very gradual increases.

The purpose of the publication is to provide retail sales data, as reported on the Minnesota sales and use tax returns, to those who have an interest in historical sales trends by geographic area or particular retail sector. Information contained in the bulletin was based primarily upon Minnesota sales and use tax returns filed for calendar years 1981-1985. The industry classification, however, was made at the time a sales and use tax permit application was made, based upon information supplied by the taxpayer, as are county and city designations.

The gross sales amounts reported include both taxable and non-taxable sales, as the taxpayer is asked to report total sales and subtract any deductions to arrive at taxable sales. If however, a vendor reported only taxable sales, this amount was also used as gross sales resulting in the possible understatement of the gross sales amount.

Of the largest cities in the three counties, Thief River Falls saw the largest increase in retail sales in 1985, the final reported year. In 1984 Thief River Falls had retail sales totaling $99,019,932. Sales increased in 1985 to $106,699,373. Warren retail sales were $11,724,922 in 1984 and $10,957,807 in 1985. Red Lake Falls retail sales were $16,302,452 in 1984, which was down from the prior year's total of $18,723,892, and $17,208,430 in 1985.

Data on the larger communities was further divided into different categories. The categories in Thief River Falls were lumber and hardware, general merchandise, food stores, auto dealers and stations, apparel stores, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments and miscellaneous retail. The number of stores in each category was accounted for in the report.

In 1981 Thief River Falls had 192 stores. In 1985 they reported 211, which was down from the high of 216 reported in 1984. All categories report a stable number of businesses. The largest increases however, were seen in food stores, auto dealers and stations and miscellaneous retail. The largest decreases were seen in the same categories the following year (1985) with the addition of fewer furniture stores.

The data indicates that in 1985 there were 20 businesses in the lumber and hardware category, eight in the general merchandise category, 18 in the food store category, 30 in the auto dealer and stations category, 12 in apparel store category, 19 in furniture store category, 22 in eating and drinking establishment category and 82 in miscellaneous retail category.

In Warren the number of stores decreased from 60 in 1984 to 54 in 1985. This, at the outset, appears to show little change from 1981 when the number of stores totaled 52.

The categories listed by the data were lumber and hardware, food stores, auto dealers and stations, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments, and miscellaneous retail. The number of stores in each category shows little change. The greatest changes occurred in auto dealers and stations which went from 12 in 1981 to 14 in 1982 to nine in 1985. The greatest increase was seen in miscellaneous retail which showed an increase from 17 in 1981 to 27 in 1985.

In 1985, according to the data, there were seven stores in the lumber and hardware category, five in the food store category, nine in the auto dealer and stations category, none in the furniture store category, which reported four in 1981, six eating and drinking establishments, and 27 in miscellaneous retail.

In Red Lake Falls the number of stores in 1981 totaled 39, which increased to a high of 47 in 1983 and then decreased to 41 in 1985. The data categorizes the stores into the following groups: lumber and hardware, auto dealers and stations, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments and miscellaneous retail. Throughout the reported years, little change was seen, except in the miscellaneous retail category which went from 17 in 1981 to 14 in 1985.

The number of stores in each category for 1985 are: seven in lumber and hardware, seven in auto dealers and stations, four in furniture stores, nine in eating and drinking establishments, 14 in the miscellaneous category.

Of the six remaining smaller cities in the three-county area, all saw gradual increases in retail sales, except Viking and Plummer. Because of the small size of these communities the retail businesses

Volunteer Work Discussion Topic Next Wednesday

Pennington county extension service will present the topic "Making the Most of Your Volunteer Time" on Wednesday, April 1 at 1:30 p.m. in the Northwest regional library meeting room. County extension director Deborah Zak will discuss the history of volunteerism in Minnesota and why this state is unique in the quality of volunteers that it has.

Program participants will complete a self-assessment to find out what motivates them personally as a volunteer and how these interests can best be matched with volunteer responsibilities.

A panel of volunteer directors will discuss how they utilize volunteers, the type of training that is provided and the time commitment expected from the volunteer.

The panel includes Darla Twomey, director of the Northland community hospice program; Bev Rupprecht, coordinator of the Big Brother and Big Sister program; and Harl Gamber from the Retired Seniors Volunteer program.

Anyone who volunteers or manages a volunteer program is invited to attend this program which is free of charge.

This year has been proclaimed, "Year of the Volunteer" by Governor Rudy Perpich. Minnesota has a rich history of volunteerism and is viewed as a leader in volunteer development throughout the nation. Rural Minnesota thrives because of the role volunteers play in providing services that would not otherwise be possible in Pennington county and surrounding areas.

For more information regarding extension programs, contact the Pennington County Extension Office at 681-2116.

Stangeland Urges President To Sign Highway Bill

By both telephone and mail, Rep. Arlan Stangeland urged President Reagan Tuesday to sign into law the omnibus highway bill passed last week by the House and the Senate.

"Mr. President, this bill is long overdue," Stangeland urged. "Our highways have been neglected and Minnesota's construction season is in danger of collapsing if this bill is not signed into law." President Reagan has threatened to veto H.R. 2 as a budget buster.

"I understand the President's concern over spending," Stangeland continued, "but this bill has been trimmed to the bone already. There's nothing there that's not absolutely essential."

On March 19, the Senate approved the highway bill by a vote of 79 to 17, the same day it approved the 65 mph speed limit. The House passed the same highway bill earlier in the week by a resounding 407 to 17 vote margin.

Should the President veto, the bill will go back to the House and Senate for a vote to override. A two-thirds vote is required to override a Presidential veto.

"I'm certain the House will vote to override, and I'll support that vote," said Stangeland. "I would expect the Senate to be close, but there should be enough votes to pass this bill in the Senate as well."

The highway bill authorizes $68.5 billion for the nation's federal-aid highway program and $17.8 billion for mass transit assistance over the five years of the bill.

Bridgeman Plant Employees Aid Area Foodshelf

Employees at the Bridgeman plant in Thief River Falls are participating in Minnesota Foodshare's campaign to collect food for restocking Minnesota emergency foodshelves throughout the state.

The employee food drive is being held through Thursday and all foods donated will be delivered to the River Falls area foodshelf.

For the past four years, Minnesota Foodshare has conducted a month-long food drive in March in cooperation with hundreds of businesses, churches and community groups. The drive supplies one-third of all food distributed to the needy each year from the state's 270 foodshelves.

Rob LaCoursiere, a Bridgeman employee, is coordinating the plant's food drive. Bridgeman's is a division of Land O'Lakes, Inc., and Land O'Lakes will match employee donations, in pounds, with a contribution of Land O'Lakes products to Minnesota Foodshare.

Rural Leadership Coalition Formed For 12 Counties

Aided by a $5,000 planning grant from the Northwest Minnesota initiative fund, the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) and Bemidji state university (BSU) are working cooperatively to provide leadership training to rural northwest Minnesota.

Under the project direction of Professor Ray Nelson of BSU, the coalition for rural leadership has been meeting since November of 1986 to develop a planning process to provide opportunities for systematic leadership training for current and emerging leaders in northwest Minnesota.

"The goal of the coalition will be the cooperative development of human resources in leadership education in order to help design and influence the future of the 12 counties involved in the Northwest initiative program," said Nelson.

The coalition has been reviewing existing area leadership programs and will soon name an advisory board to aid in a needs assessment which will lead to a model plan of action for delivery of leadership training to rural communities.

The initial board meeting will be held at 10 a.m. April 10, and will address such items as a brief overview of the project, a description of existing leadership programs in Minnesota, and a proposal for leadership training in rural communities in northwestern Minnesota. Additional grant aid will be sought from the Northwest initiative fund to enable the 12 targeted coutnies to more effectively design and influence their futures.

The 12 counties include Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

For additional information about the project, contact Ray Nelson at BSU or Richard Christenson at UMC.

DOT Commissioner Outlines State's Highway Needs

Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) commissioner Leonard W. Levine says that without action, much of the state's 12,100 mile trunk highway system will begin a rapid slide into an advanced stage of deterioration.

According to Levine, "an appropriate cycle of preserving and improving Minnesota's trunk highways would require 735 miles of various highway improvements, plus bridge repair and replacement, and other safety projects."

Such an effort would require that $825 million be spent on highway construction each year — compared to the current $350 million.

"Even at the $825 million level," Levine said, "it will still take 20 years to catch up on the backlog of identified road and bridge needs."

Levine noted other transportation issues that must be addressed:

+ Highway safety — Governor Rudy Perpich recently challenged the Minnesota departments of transportation and public safety to develop a plan and goal for significantly reducing serious injuries due to highway accidents by 1990. Mn-DOT is looking at creating a special highway safety category — targeting improvements to intersections. Preliminary figures show that during the two-year period of 1983-85, there were 1,200 intersections across the state at which six or more accidents took place. Through engineering improvements, Mn-DOT believes it could — within the next three years — help reduce that number by 10 per cent.

+ Congestion — Under current trends, congestion — particularly in urban settings — will be worse. It's predicted that in 20 years it will take twice as long as it does today for the average motorist in an urban setting to make the trip from home to work and back.

+ Highway Needs — Under current funding levels, in 20 years 67 per cent of state trunk hughway pavements will be rated in poor condition; 17 per cent are in poor condition today. Increasing use is taking its toll on many Minnesota roads not designed or built to handle heavier traffic.

+ Poor Roads Mean Increased Costs to Motorists — It costs anywhere from 23 to 28 cents per mile to own and operate an automobile. Under current highway funding levels, motorists will face higher vehicle operating costs. By the late 1990's it will cost Minnesotans an extra three cents per mile to pay for repairs and damage caused by driving over poorer roads. By accelerating the annual state trunk highway construction program to the $825 million mark, roads and bridges would be improved and that three-cent figure would be cut in half, Levine said.

"If Minnesota is to meet its changing economic and social needs, as well as its congestion and highway safety needs, adequate construction and funding levels are necessary to insure that Minnesota's roads and bridges are properly improved and maintained," he added.

Charity Tastes Good At The Food Fair In TRF

TRISTA ANDERSON, and her father Don Anderson of Thief River Falls were among the residents in our area to participate in the March of Dimes food fair held in the national guard armory in Thief River Falls Monday night. The food fair was held to benefit the March of Dimes. Fifteen area and local businesses had booths set up at the food fair.

Charity can create a good feeling, but if it tastes good it feels even better.

"A Taste of the Falls," the title of a charity food fair sponsored by the March of Dimes in cooperation with local businesses, was held at the national guard armory in Thief River Falls Monday night.

A $5 admission price guaranteed the payee to a fine tasting fare, which included deli salad, wild rice soup, hors d'oeuvres, apple grande, turkey spread and dip, cream of broccoli soup, homemade vegetable soup, cookies, health foods, taco samples, homemade sausage, Coca-Cola, pizza, nachos, broccoli-ham roll-ups and caramel pecan ice cream.

Many area and local businesses purchased booth space at the event and served food items. All proceeds from the event went to the March of Dimes.

"We're real pleased with the turnout and support in Thief River Falls. Fifteen booths for the first year is really good," said Tracy Potter, division director of the March of Dimes in Grand Forks, ND.

The food fair held in Grand Forks this year drew about 24 to 28 commercial booths, Potter said. He said the turnout was heavier than in Thief River Falls, but that's to be expected, especially during the first year. Potter said at the end of the evening he hoped to collect between $600 and $700.

Food fairs are one of the main fundraising events for the March of Dimes. Potter who directs a district larger than many states, said he has about one fund raising event per month. His district is generally believed to stretch from Warren and Thief River Falls to Carrington, ND. It includes at least eight Minnesota counties and 13 North Dakota counties.

Potter said the funds are generally split 50-50 between local and national agencies. The reason being Potter said, is because only so much can be done at the local level without research being conducted at the national level.

Sally Tobin, event coordinator for the March of Dimes Birth Defects foundation in Grand Forks, ND, said there are many things the March of Dimes can do to prevent birth defects, but there are also many things which they do not have an answer for and need.

Two of the most serious problems being faced today, Tobin said, are fetal alcohol syndrome and fetal drug addiction syndrome. Tobin said with proper care, nutrition, and support being given to mothers these problems could be prevented.

"Right now the March of Dimes is interested in preventing premature babies and also babies born with low birth weight," Tobin said. "If people were aware of the proper nutrition, many of the causes of low birth weight could be prevented," Tobin said

Tickets for the food fair were available at participating business places and were also sold at the door. Participating in the food fair were Red Owl, Hardee's, Bridgeman's, Land O'Lakes, Carol's Cafe, Lon's Restaurant and Lounge, Crookston Coca-Cola bottling company, Taco John's, Domino's Pizza, The Big Scoop, Best Western, American Legion and Fireside Fitness Center, Watkins store, and Gary's Rainbow Bakery

The March of Dimes also had a booth distributing literature to those attending the event. Information about the March of Dimes can be found at the WIC office, public health nursing service, library and hospital in Thief River Falls.

The food fair was one of two events held in Thief River Falls. The other event may give those who ate too much at the food fair an opportunity to work it off. Potter said a 30 kilometer walkathon is scheduled for the early part of May. The walkathon is the only nationally planned event for the March of Dimes

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Minnesota Farmers Union and National Farmers Organization members will be celebrating the first anniversary of the livestock collection point at the Joppru building in Thief River Falls soon.

"The goals of the joint venture are, to achieve a cost of production plus reasonable profit for farmers, and development of an orderly marketing system so that farmers can enjoy a profit," said Tim Lundeen, operating manager.

"It has been a real successful first year," said Lundeen. Lundeen believes farmers have joined the two organizations because they see a change needs to be made and they see the success of the organizations, Lundeen said.

"The joint marketing system works and works real well," Lundeen said.

The collection point, the first joint venture of MFU and NFO in northern Minnesota, and the nation, opened on April 7, 1986. Since that time the collection point has operated successfully. It has been open for livestock each Monday as well as any other day as needed. Presently, there are 31 jointly operated collection points in the state of Minnesota.

Butcher hogs, fat cattle, cull cows and bulls, sheep, butcher lambs and feeder cattle from a large number of MFU and NFO producers and others have run through the point since it opened.

Lundeen said as the second year begins he hopes they will have another successful year. And, he would like to see production increase by half as much again.

As its first anniversary approaches, a production drive will be conducted in the Northern part of the state by MFU and NFO personnel with the help of area people the week of March 30, 31, April 1, 2 and 3.

On April 3 an annual meeting will be held at the community center in Grygla. Supper will be served from 7 to 9 p.m. Tickets are $4.50 for adults and $2.25 for children. A business meeting will follow at 8 p.m. Tickets can be purchased from and reservations made through board of director members and area producers from Tim Lundeen at 378-4499 or Gaylene Schmitz at 253-2543.

World's Fastest Hypnotist Brings Celebrities To NCC

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Eddie Murphy, Dolly Parton and Elvis Presley were among the celebrities making a performance at the Northland community college Wednesday. The real celebrities were not present, but young performers thought they were the celebrities for a short time under the careful guidance of hyptnotist John Kolisch.

Kolisch, who claims to be the world's fastest hypnotist, convinced several volunteers to concentrate on their favorite celebrity and then give a stand-up performance, which then brought the house down.

The sometimes embarrassing and often humorous antics of the hypnotized volunteers left the standing-room-only crowd in side-splitting laughter. Kolisch had the volunteers singing, dancing, telling jokes, smelling horrendous smells and even looking for their "ding-dong."

While Kolisch's show may have been humorous, it's purpose also had a serious side. Kolisch was demonstrating that hypnotism can be used to unlock barriers set up subconsciously. Kolisch said he would like to leave all the participants with a sense of self-worth and positive self-image.

An example of the positive aspects of hypnotism, Kolisch said, was demonstrated when on a trip last year he hypnotized a young girl who wanted to lose weight. He told her under a hypnotic state to keep up a positive self-image and diet and exercise regularly. She did and has continued to do well, he said.

Kolisch doesn't use any gimmicks to get his volunteers under a hypnotic state. He begins his show by asking for volunteers and then hypnotizes them by talking quietly to them and rubbing their heads, necks and backs.

Kolisch describes the hypnotic state as somewhere between wakefulness and slumber, a condition in which senses are still functioning. He uses only volunteers who are willing to be hypnotized.

In such a state, the group of volunteers was told near the end of the session to sit among the crowd and when he said two words they would smell something awful, turn to their neighbor and tell them they smell or get up and move away, but each time he said the two words the smell would increase in intensity. One young female volunteer immediately got up, covering her mouth and nose and started running away trying to avoid the smell. Others just sat where they were and covered their nose and mouth.

Later he told the group to turn to their neighbor and hug and kiss them and then tell them they thought they were very attractive. Embarrasingly enough it didn't seem to matter whether they were seated next to boy or girl.

When awakened temporarily, the volunteers seemed dazed, confused and didn't know what they had done. One volunteer said after the session that she felt like she had been really sleeping hard. Kolisch told each person that he or she would have total recall once they walked out of the door of the gymnasium and have a positive self-image. Friends of the volunteers seemed eager to make

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Retail sales data released from the Minnesota department of revenue tax research division indicate that sales in the larger communities in the Tri-county area (Pennington, Red Lake and Marshall counties) have increased while smaller communities have generally seen very gradual increases.

The purpose of the publication is to provide retail sales data, as reported on the Minnesota sales and use tax returns, to those who have an interest in historical sales trends by geographic area or particular retail sector. Information contained in the bulletin was based primarily upon Minnesota sales and use tax returns filed for calendar years 1981-1985. The industry classification, however, was made at the time a sales and use tax permit application was made, based upon information supplied by the taxpayer, as are county and city designations.

The gross sales amounts reported include both taxable and non-taxable sales, as the taxpayer is asked to report total sales and subtract any deductions to arrive at taxable sales. If however, a vendor reported only taxable sales, this amount was also used as gross sales resulting in the possible understatement of the gross sales amount.

Of the largest cities in the three counties, Thief River Falls saw the largest increase in retail sales in 1985, the final reported year. In 1984 Thief River Falls had retail sales totaling $99,019,932. Sales increased in 1985 to $106,699,373. Warren retail sales were $11,724,922 in 1984 and $10,957,807 in 1985. Red Lake Falls retail sales were $16,302,452 in 1984, which was down from the prior year's total of $18,723,892, and $17,208,430 in 1985.

Data on the larger communities was further divided into different categories. The categories in Thief River Falls were lumber and hardware, general merchandise, food stores, auto dealers and stations, apparel stores, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments and miscellaneous retail. The number of stores in each category was accounted for in the report.

In 1981 Thief River Falls had 192 stores. In 1985 they reported 211, which was down from the high of 216 reported in 1984. All categories report a stable number of businesses. The largest increases however, were seen in food stores, auto dealers and stations and miscellaneous retail. The largest decreases were seen in the same categories the following year (1985) with the addition of fewer furniture stores.

The data indicates that in 1985 there were 20 businesses in the lumber and hardware category, eight in the general merchandise category, 18 in the food store category, 30 in the auto dealer and stations category, 12 in apparel store category, 19 in furniture store category, 22 in eating and drinking establishment category and 82 in miscellaneous retail category.

In Warren the number of stores decreased from 60 in 1984 to 54 in 1985. This, at the outset, appears to show little change from 1981 when the number of stores totaled 52.

The categories listed by the data were lumber and hardware, food stores, auto dealers and stations, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments, and miscellaneous retail. The number of stores in each category shows little change. The greatest changes occurred in auto dealers and stations which went from 12 in 1981 to 14 in 1982 to nine in 1985. The greatest increase was seen in miscellaneous retail which showed an increase from 17 in 1981 to 27 in 1985.

In 1985, according to the data, there were seven stores in the lumber and hardware category, five in the food store category, nine in the auto dealer and stations category, none in the furniture store category, which reported four in 1981, six eating and drinking establishments, and 27 in miscellaneous retail.

In Red Lake Falls the number of stores in 1981 totaled 39, which increased to a high of 47 in 1983 and then decreased to 41 in 1985. The data categorizes the stores into the following groups: lumber and hardware, auto dealers and stations, furniture stores, eating and drinking establishments and miscellaneous retail. Throughout the reported years, little change was seen, except in the miscellaneous retail category which went from 17 in 1981 to 14 in 1985.

The number of stores in each category for 1985 are: seven in lumber and hardware; seven in auto dealers and stations, four in furniture stores, nine in eating and drinking establishments, 14 in the miscellaneous category.

Of the six remaining smaller cities in the three-county area, all saw gradual increases in retail sales, except Viking and Plummer. Because of the small size of these communities, the retail businesses

Batting .1000

Gordon Poteat nails us to the rail of reality: "A man's possibility is always greater than his ability." I not only wish I had said that, but I wish I could live like that and really believe that statement in my less-achieving moments.

In our better moments, we know Dr. Poteat is on target. There is always more in us than we can ever get out. We feel an upward urge: a desire beyond what we can be or produce in our lives.

And it is this "possibility greater than ability" that moves persons toward a goal that is unattainable. No major league player has ever batted the perfect 1000. Yet, it is precisely this illusive goal that has produced a Babe Ruth and Hank Aaron, a Ty Cobb and Pete Rose.

We take comfort in Browning's phrase that "a man's reach should exceed his grasp, or what's a heaven for?"

Turn Your Heart Toward Home

TURN YOUR HEART TOWARD HOME is a six part film series

Dr. James Dobson is, unquestionably, one of the uniquely gifted communicators of our time. He and his wife, Shirley, have consistently demonstrated their commitment to the preservation of the family. We support the Dobsons in their ministry and are pleased to present their new film series entitled "Turn Your Heart Toward Home."

This film series, which is the result of months of planning and scheduling, is an impelling call for Americans to return to traditional values. Dr. and Mrs. Dobson share their lives and insights in a very personal and moving message. They will inspire you and encourage you with their deep commitment to turning hearts toward home.

See this series of unique family life films at the United Methodist Church in Thief River Falls.

The films will be shown on six consecutive Sunday evenings:

March 29th, April 5, 12, 19, 26 and May 3, 1987

The showing will begin at 6 p.m.

A nursery will be provided for preschool children.

Of the smaller cities, Brooks has seen the largest increase in gross retail sales. According to the data, gross sales increased from $831,607 in 1981 to $3,561,296 in 1985. The number of businesses however increased only from five to six in the same time period. The increase can possibly be explained from the reporting of business sales owned by local businesmen but which are located outside the community. Consolidated returns are allowed.

More Shows Of Talent

Once again area residents are being treated to displays of talent which demonstrate the abilities of young people and the instruction they are receiving. The quality and quantity of such talent is a constant source of amazement.

Athletic tournaments for this area's winter sports have been completed (except for those teams in boys's state basketball tourney play) and the area was treated to thrills and skills as both guys and gals performed with outstanding ability. Most notable was Marshall County Central's advancement in to state tourney play for girls' basketball, followed closely by the local Prowler girls' undefeated season until two heart-breaking season-ending losses.

On Saturday and Sunday the local members of the recreational skating association showed off their talent, not only in skating ability but in costuming, lighting and pageantry. Countless hours of practice and preparation were rewarded with a few seconds of hearty applause — but that was enough. A show of support and recognition is the spark that is needed to keep the fire of participation alive.

Thursday through Saturday of this week the Lincoln high school musical will showcase the talents of our young people in another area of performance. As usual, there will be fine performances by familiar people who have already established their abilities. But more importantly, we believe, there will be opportunity for others to rise to the occasion and give performances that the viewing public does not expect in advance. Every Lincoln musical seems to provide its share of these, and they are what makes the experience of attending especially delightful.

People of the community are denying themselves some real pleasure if they do not take advantage of the opportunity to see our young people in action. Sports fans in general were very supportive of local teams this winter. Such support should be continued for the other extra-curricular public events of the school year. The talent is worth watching.

Specialty Crops

As producers of grain and row crops consider alternatives to the crops which seem to be in surplus and result in depressed prices, the idea of specialty crop production and potential profits comes to the forefront. The following comments by Ralph E. Groschen, secretary of Minnesota Grown promotion group, casts an interesting light on that idea. The letter was published recently in the Cenex publication, "Co-op Country News".

We perceive a great deal of pressure from many public and private entities to move the "specialty crop industry" into the role of providing an alternative livelihood for millions of farm farmilies producing "conventional" crop and livestock products.

We share the concern for these family businesses. Many of us also grow conventional crops. We understand the pressure farmers are under and how difficult it is to make a profit with high interest rates and low prices. We feel, however, that to assist desperate farm families into the production of "specialty crops" without sufficient attention to the unique problems related to their production, processing and marketing, carries the risk of compounding the problem, raising false hopes and spreading economic misery to new areas of the rural community.

The sheer demographics of the situation would make one question the wisdom of expecting the fruit and vegetable market to absorb all the trauma now being experienced by producers of corn, soybeans, wheat and other distressed areas of agronomic production.

USDA figures show that approximately six million acres are harvested as fruit or vegetable crops in the U.S. The so-called "major crops", including those mentioned above, are harvested on approximately 330 million acres in the U.S.

From these figures, we can surmise that if only two per cent of those "major crop" farmers were to switch to producing fruit and vegetables, the acreage of fruit and vegetables harvested in the U.S. would more than double.

We feel that it is safe to say that a two-fold increase in production acreage of these crops without significant market development efforts would be catastrophic to new as well as established growers throughout the country.

Law Change Sought

Following comments were written by Jeffery Urbaniak, president of the Animal Allies Humane society of Duluth and are offered here for public thought and comment.

Most Minnesotans are unaware that a statute exists (Minnesota Statute 35.71) that forces pounds and shelters to sell unclaimed companion animals to research institutions. The common name for this law is Pound Seizure, which sounds like a vicious animal has been seized and impounded, but means that innocent former pets may be taken by researchers.

Some states that have already outlawed Pound Seizure include New York, Pennsylvania, Hawaii, New Jersey, Maine, Montana, Connecticut and Rhode Island. The National Institute of Health testified in Congress that the domestic pet is "not a good or desirable research animal". Hundreds of doctors have signed petitions from the Animal Protection Institute (P.O. Box 22505; Sacremento, CA 95822) agreeing that Pound Seizure is unnecessary, unethical and detrimental to sound research. Docile former pets submit themselves to conditions of extreme discomfort and pain because they trust humans. Most Minnesotans consider their companion animals as members of their families.

During the current legislative session Representative Wayne Simoneau will introduce H.F. 89 and Senator Gene Marriam will introduce S.F. 30. We ask that you write or call your representatives and senators asking they support H.F. 89 and S.F. 30. (Address your Representatives and Senators at the Minnesota House and Senate, St. Paul, MN 55155). The integrity of the family is certainly violated when former pets, family members, can be taken for research. If you don't feel knowledgeable about this issue ask your Representative or Senator where they are getting their information, but please write.

Borrowed Nonsense

As the judge stepped down from the bench, he tripped on the hem of his robe and fell heavily to the floor. The clerk rushed to his assistance and said, "I hope your honor is not badly hurt, sir."

"Not at all," the judge replied. "My honor is quite intact, but I fear I may have broken my leg."

A Texan was bragging about teaching his son how to drive one of the family's cars.

"But Jimmy Bob is only 10 years old!" the acquaintance exclaimed.

"I'm aware of that," the Texan smiled. "I don't let him drive outside the house."

Shortly after the salesman signed the hotel register, he noticed a mosquito crawling across the page. "I've been in a lot of hotels and seen a lot of mosquitoes," he remarked to the clerk, "but this is the first time I've seen one of the little critters checking to see which room I'll be in."

Tidbits From THE TIMES Thief River Falls

by Sharon LaCoursiere

March 25, 1937 Times

— Last week I told you about Rasmus Oen and his new store, so this week I'd like to reprint a little editorial that W.E. Dallquist, editor, wrote about life, using the new Oen building as the basis for his philosophy.

"Compared to the old structure which it replaced, the new Oen building is lacking in just one thing. The shady north side has no iron rail for the convenience and comfort of those who, year after year, have held regular morning and afternoon meetings there.

"It is the irony of fate, or something like that. Just when a fellow gets a good thick callous developed that enables him to sit on an iron rail in comfort for hours at a time, then somebody comes along and takes out the rail. Now new rails must be found and new callouses developed.

"It's a fast moving world. Sometimes a fellow just don't know where he's at."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

"The farmer," President John F. Kennedy said, "is the only man in our economy who buys everything at retails, sells at wholesale, and pays the freight both ways."

If life was tough for farmers in Kennedy's day, it is surely much worse now. Tens of thousands have gone bankrupt in recent years and many more are on the verge. Their anguish and despair are real and command our attention.

But as I have often noted, there has never been a social nor economic problem in our country so severe or tragic that liberals in Congress couldn't make it worse. And I can think of no better example of that phenomenon than the so-called "Save The Family Farm Act" introduced by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Ia.

Prudence deters me from speculating about the motives of the authors of this legislation, but it is clear they were not driven by an urge to foster sound economic policy.

It is no great secret why farmers are in trouble. There are simply too many farmers producing too much food for which there is no market, either in this country or abroad. Last year, our government spent about $26 billion buying up surplus farm produce and still thousands of farmers went under. It is clear to everyone, including farmers, that our government's ham-handed efforts to relieve the plight is serving only to deepen and prolong the agony while simultaneously bankrupting the nation's treasury.

As you might guess, the "solution" proposed by Gephardt and Harkin is to vastly expand the government's role in agriculture. They envision a "supply management" system. Farmers would vote whether to join the program. If a majority in any particular commodity voted yes, every farmer producing that commodity would have to join. Then the government would step in, proclaim a national marketing quota and divide up acreage among farmers, telling each one how much he could produce.

The goal, of course, is to drive up farm incomes by raising food prices. They don't call it a national food tax, but that is what it would be. According to the U.S. department of agriculture, by 1991 this program would raise the price of dairy products by 30 per cent and red meat by 25 per cent. From 1987 through 1991, consumers would be socked with a $50 billion increase in food prices.

To rub salt in the wound, the USDA says also that this program would instantly double existing crop support levels, which are already in the stratosphere, and hike them 10 per cent more by 1990.

Governement management of agriculture is not a new concept. The Soviet Union has been doing it for years, which is why the Soviets experience regular shortages of food. Both shortages and surpluses present problems, but given a choice I will take the latter any day.

There is only one rational way out of our predicament. We must ease government out of the subsidy business and assist our farmers through the transition. One thing we clearly do not need is a national food tax.

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf

State Senator — District 1

One of the more difficult decisions for us during the 1987 session will be whether to raise Minnesota's minimum wage. What makes the issue so controversial is that there are good arguments on both sides — as well as a set of conflicting statistics.

On the one hand, $3.35 an hour (which is $6,968 a year for full-time work) keeps minimum-wage workers well below the poverty level. On the other hand, an increase in the minimum wage would be a hardship for small businesses whose profit margins are minimal. That's especially true for many businesses in rural Minnesota.

Proponents of raising the minimum wage point out that it has not kept pace with inflation. Between 1978 and 1981, Minnesota's minimum wage rose from $2.30 to $3.10. In 1982, it was raised to $3.35, and it has remained at that level for more than six years. Over those years, inflation has eroded 26 per cent of its purchasing power: If minimum wage had kept up with inflation, it would now be $4.18.

Opponents argue, however, that an increase would hurt Minnesota's business competition with other states. They point out that Alaska, Maine, Connecticut and Washington, D.C. have minimum wages higher than Minnesota. They also indicate that a higher wage would increase other business expenses tied to the level of wages, such as workers compensation, unemployment insurance and social security contributions.

However, other business expenses have also increased. Take the example of one of my colleagues in the Senate. He once owned a hardware store in rural Minnesota and, in 10 years' time, his insurance costs went from $1,000 to $4,000 a year — with half the coverage, and his interest costs went from seven per cent to 18 per cent. Eventually, he was forced out of business. Interestingly, while chambers of commerce opposed a higher minimum wage, they had little reaction to his increases in insurance and interest costs — costs imposed on him by other businesses.

Another concern is that an increase in the minimum wage will also increase unemployment. In 1981, a presidential commission concluded that a 10 per cent increase in the minimum wage reduced teenage employment by one per cent and adult employment by a smaller fraction. However, others say that there is no empirical evidence of an increase in unemployment whenever Minnesota has raised its minimum wage in the past.

Many people believe that most minimum wage earners are youngsters. However, both on a national level and in Minnesota, nearly 70 per cent of minimum wage earners are adults. Minnesota statistics show that 50 per cent of them support families, while others in the nation say that the majority of minimum wage workers are merely providing a second income for their household.

Conflicting statistics aside, the fact is that no one can support a family on an income of $6,968 a year — especially when there are costs of going to work, such as transportation, health care and child support. Consequently, even though public assistance may pay less in actual dollars, some people stay on public assistance because they can't afford to go to work. And that costs all taxpayers.

If we don't want to raise the minimum wage, but we do want to get people off welfare, I think that we must do better in helping people directly with their work-related expenses. Although the state now has a sliding-fee child care program, it is so underfunded that many people can't use it. Medical assistance is also available for a maximum of 12 months to some people going off public assistance and back into the work force. But that program also doesn't go far enough.

Some of these programs are costly, but it seems to me that this kind of direct aid will be less costly in the long-run than having people on public assistance permanently. Perhaps, what's really needed is a cooperative effort between employee, employer and the government to make it worthwhile for people to go to work

If you have any questions on this or any other issue, please call me, Senator LeRoy Stumpf, at (612) 296-8660, or write to me at 306 State Capitol, St. Paul, 55155.

QUESTIONS Answered for VETERANS

Q. I recently was rated for a service-connected disability which makes it difficult for me to obtain life insurance. Can the Veterans administration help me?

A. If you apply within one year of the date you were notifed that you were granted a service-connected disability rating and are otherwise in good health, you may obtain service-disabled veterans insurance issued by the Veterans administration.

Q. Is it necessary for me to inform the Veterans administration of my new address if my monthly benefit check is handled by "direct deposit?"

A. Yes. Failure to keep VA notified of your current address could result in your missing important correspondence sent to your address of record.

Q. Does a general discharge from military service qualify me for benefits from the Veterans administration?

A. Yes. Honorable and general discharges qualify veterans for benefits, unless other statutory bars to entitlement exist.

Q. I have been contacted by a private collection agency regarding my education debt to the Veterans administration. Is this collection agency legitimate?

A. VA has contracted with two separate collection agencies to collect debts which are over one year old. Education debts have been referred to Data Com Systems corporation and loan guaranty debts have been referred to Corliss Credit services.

Q. I have been rated totally disabled and applied for a waiver of premium on my government life insurance. Should I continue to pay the premium?

A. Yes. You should continue to pay premiums regularly, as they become due, until the Veterans administration notifies you of a waiver. Since the criteria of total disability for VA compensation and for insurance purposes differ, payment of your premiums will prevent a lapse in your policy should your claim be denied.

Q. I am a member of the selective reserve. Does the selective reserve G.I. bill allow me to pursue my high school equivalency diploma?

A. No. Educational assistance under the selective reserve G.I. bill is not available for elementary or high school training, deficiency or remedial courses, apprenticeships, on-the-job training, cooperative courses, farm cooperative courses, flight training, correspondence courses and graduate or post-graduate training.

Q. I receive Veterans administration compensation and I wish to claim an adopted child as a dependent. What type of documentation does VA require?

A. You should provide VA with a certified copy of the final decree of adoption or the adoptive placement agreement. In areas where court records of adoption are not readily available, a certified copy of the revised birth certificate showing the name of the veteran may be acceptable.

Q. I understand that as a veteran without a service-related health problem, I may have to pay a deductible for Veterans administration health care, depending on my income. Does VA consider such things as stocks and bonds, in addition to my salary, when making this determination?

A. Yes. When you apply for medical care at a VA medical center, you will be required to complete VA form 10-10F, which includes information on income as well as "net worth," such as stocks, bonds, bank deposits and savings, and real estate. Your primary residence is not included, nor is personal property such as one car, clothing and furnishings.

You also will be required to provide information on any debts you have. The total amount of your debts will be deducted from your total net worth. Depending on your combined income and net worth, you will be placed in Category A, B or C. If your income plus net worth after your debts have been deducted is greater than $40,000, you will be tentatively placed in Category C and will be required to pay a deductible for health care.

The VA regional office will make the final determination on your financial situation. If the regional office determines that your net worth should not be a bar to your receiving cost-free health care, you will remain in Category C and be required to continue paying a deductible for VA health care.

Q. What does the Veterans administration consider as a veteran's income for purposes of the new eligibility assessment procedures?

A. Social security—(including supplemental security income), U.S. civil service retirement, U.S. railroad retirement, military retirement, unemployment insurance, any other retirement, total wages from all employers, interest and dividends, workers' compensation, black lung benefits, and any other annual income for the calendar year preceding the veteran's application for care, including income of the spouse and dependents. Personal property is excluded.

Q. I understand that the Veterans administration provides a headstone for the grave of a deceased veteran at no charge. My husband recently died and was buried in a private cemetery. The cemetery has sent me a bill for $275. Is this correct?

A. VA does provide a headstone or marker without charge. However, the cost of placing the marker in a private cemetery must be borne by the family.

Q. What is a Presidential memorial certificate?

A. A Presidential memorial certificate expresses the country's grateful recognition of an individual's service in the armed forces and bears the signature of the President. These certificates are made available to the next of kin of deceased eligible veterans or to persons who are on active military duty at time of death. Next of kin need not apply for a certificate. Relatives or friends are asked to make application at any Veterans administration regional office.

Q. I am a 67-year-old veteran with limited income. I have applied for a nonservice-connected pension. Do I have to prove to the Veterans administration that I am disabled?

A. No. Permanent and total disability for pension purposes is presumed at age 65.

Q. What is the new G.I. bill?

A. The new G.I. bill, which went into effect July 1, 1985, established two education benefit programs, one for persons in the military and the other for members of the selected reserve (including the national guard). Persons who enter active duty from July 1, 1985 through June 30, 1988 have potential eligibility for benefits. They must have their military pay reduced by $100 monthly for the first 12 months of active duty. In turn, they may receive $300 monthly basic benefits for 36 months. Individuals who enlist, re-enlist or extend an enlistment in the selected reserve for six or more years will be entitled to receive $140 monthly while pursuing an undergraduate degree.

Q. My brother was a disabled veteran. I was appointed his guardian by the Veterans administration. His compensation checks came to me. He died last month and I would like to use the check that came at the end of the month to pay some of his bills. Can I do this?

A. No. A veteran's entitlement to disability pension or compensation terminates at the end of the month prior to his death. Checks received after the death should be returned. The person who pays the funeral expenses may be eligible for a burial allowance. Reimbursement for medical expenses may be made only if accrued compensation payments are available.

Q. What is the current Veterans administration home loan interest rate?

A. Since Jan. 19, 1987, the home loan interest rate has been 8½ per cent.

Q. Does the Veterans administration offer assistance for rent, utilities, food, etc.?

A. No. The VA has no resources for these forms of assistance. You may wish to contact a local veterans affairs or social service office.

Q. I am the wife of a veteran who receives Veterans administration pension benefits. If I go to work will this affect my husband's benefits?

A. If your husband established entitlement to pension benefits prior to Jan. 1, 1979, and continues to receive benefits based on the law in effect at that time, your earned income would not be a factor. If he receives benefits under the current pension law (P.L. 95-588), your income would be a factor. If your joint income reaches a specified level his pension would be discontinued.

Suicide Rate Study Says Farm Number Did Not Increase

Suicide rate among upper midwest farmers did not increase overall between 1980 and 1985, according to a new study — but it was already higher than the national rate for a comparable group of white male adults.

There were 44.2 suicides in 1980 for every 100,000 farmers in the five states covered by the study. The rate dropped to 41.8 in 1981, increased to a high of 57.5 in 1982, and fell back to a six-year low of 41.3 by 1985.

That compares with the nationwide rate of 31 suicides for every 100,000 people in 1980, for white men over the age of 20. Nearly all of the farmers in the five-state study were also white men over 20.

Collaborating on the study were state health agencies in Minnesota, Montana, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin. The study was based on an examination of death records in the five states over the six-year period.

The year-long study was prompted by public concern about a possible increase in farm suicides in connection with problems in the U.S. farm economy. News reports had also suggested the possibility of an increase in suicides among farmers during that period.

In addition to farmers, the study looked at suicides among farm workers, and women and adolescents living on farms.

Annual suicide rates for farm women ranged from a low of 1.7 to a high of 5.8 per 100,000 women in that group, over the six-year period covered by the study. The annual rate for farm workers ranged from 3.1 to 4.8 suicides for every 100,000 workers. The rate nationwide in 1980 for white women over age 20 — a group comparable to the farm women — was 7.8 suicides per 100,000 women.

Adolescents — under 20 years of age — accounted for 60 farm-related suicides in the five-state area, during the entire six years covered by the study. That compares with 589 total suicides among farmers, 100 among farm workers and 43 among farm women.

Because of difficulties in estimating the total number of adolescents who live on farms in the region, no attempt was made to calculate suicide rates for that group.

Suicide rates among farmers were also higher in some states than in others. Thirty-three per cent of farmers in the region live in Minnesota, which accounted for only 31 per cent of suicides among farmers. North Dakota accounted for 15 per cent of the farmers and 11 per cent of the suicides, and South Dakota for 15 per cent of the farmers and 14 per cent of the suicides. In contrast, Wisconsin accounted for 28 per cent of the farmers and 35 per cent of the suicides, while Montana had eight per cent of the farmers and 10 per cent of the suicides.

It's hard to say if the suicide rates discovered in the study represent a change from earlier years, or differ from farm suicide rates in other parts of the country, according to investigators. Almost no similar studies are available for comparison.

Information from the new study can be used to measure trends in future studies dealing with the farm suicide issue, the investigators noted.

Officials responsible for planning the project chose to do a multi-state study, covering a period of several years, so they would have more statistical information available for analysis. With a study covering a shorter period, in a single state, it might have been difficult to determine if apparent changes in the suicide rate were real or just random statictical variatons.

Principal investigators for the study in Minnesota were Dr. Paul Gunderson of the Minnesota department of health and Dr. Susan Gerberich of the University of Minnesota.

Medicare Often Doesn't Pay For Nursing Home Care

Senior citizens frequently are surprised to find that Medicare often does not pay for nursing home care. Although Medicare can help pay for up to 100 days of skilled nursing care, ALL of the following conditions must be met:

(1) You must have been in a hospital 3 days in a row (not counting the day of discharge) before your transfer to a Medicare certified skilled nursing facility;

(2) You are transferred to a Medicare certified skilled nursing facility because you require care for a condition which was treated in the hospital;

(3) You are transferred to a Medicare certified skilled nursing facility within 30 days after you leave the hsopital;

(4) You are in a Medicare certified bed within a Medicare certified facility;

(5) A doctor certified that you need, and you actually receive, skilled nursing or skilled rehabilitation services at least five days a week.

If these criteria are met Medicare pays the entire cost of services in a certified skilled nursing facility for the first 20 days. You will be responsible for a $65 per day copayment thereafter. Providing the criteria continue to be met during your nursing home stay Medicare will pay any charges over that amount up to 100 days.

In 1985 Minnesota law was amended to require skilled nursing facilities in Minnesota to be certified by Medicare. Although there are exceptions to this law the number of Medicare certified skilled homes is increasing. Also, many nursing homes in Minnesota are intermediate care facilities which basically help with personal needs such as eating and dressing (often called custodial care.) These facilities are not required to be certified under the law and Medicare will not pay for their services.

The Medicare law is complex. Many errors are made in decision making and you may be wrongfully denied benefits. In 1985 the Medicare advocacy project was developed to asist people in obtaining benefits that are denied for skilled nursing care. There is no charge for these services.

The public is encouraged to use these services if Medicare has been denied in such cases where a resident receives therapy of any kind five days a week, injected medicine (this may include those who are insulin dependent if it is not self-administered), artificial feedings (anything other than oral) and care for a changing unstable condition.

While these situations are the more obvious many others are challengeable as well. Anyone who has been denied benefits when all of the above criteria are met should consider talking to someone about the case. # Senator Offers "Sanity Act" On Swampbuster Law

A flood of complaints from farmers who have been hurt by "swampbuster" regulations caused Sen. Dave Durenberger to introduce a bill to clarify the rules.

"I've gotten a stack of letters from farmers across Minnesota explaining the hardship caused by the so-called swampbuster provisions of the federal conservation program," Durenberger said. "Apparently, problems arose because of too-strict interpretations of the regulations designed to protect valuable wetlands by preventing farmers from draining them for planting."

Under the provisions, Durenberger said, if a farmer did drain a wetland, he would lose eligibility for federal farm programs.

"Unfortunately," he said, "The Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation service was interpreting these rules so that many farmers, who planted crops on land they had planted before or improved or maintained long-standing drainage systems, were being refused participation in government program benefits," he said.

"So I introduced a bill we call the 'Swampbuster Sanity Act' to more carefully lay out what Congress intended with the original wetland protection bill. This bill more clearly says that the regulations in the Food Security Act of 1985 are not to be applied to fields that have been farmed three out of the past five years," Durenberger said.

"From what farmers have told me, this should solve most of the problems and still accomplish what we wanted to do in protecting Minnesota's wetlands."

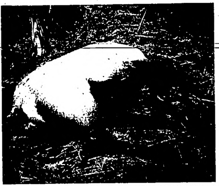
FIRST CRATE OF PARTS to be received by Arctco, Inc., under its purchase of Arctic Cat parts inventory from Certified Parts Corporation of Janesville, WI, was unloaded in the Arctco warehouse in Thief River Falls Friday. The first truckload of an estimated 75 to 100 truckloads was at the loading dock shortly after 9 a.m. Friday. Arctco has prepared lineal shelving which more than quadruples its present capacity to handle the parts. Warehouse space required increased from 15,000 square feet to 70,000 square feet. Pictured with the first crate are (left to right) Leon Johnson, Joe Klosterman, Chris Twomey, Diane Rude, Pam Kolden, Vince Hesse, Tracey Ramsdell, Kathy Olson, Darcy Harbott, Delvina Hinden, Bill Hogan, Wayne Hanson and forklift operator Terry LaCoursiere.



REWARD OF $1,000 is offered by the Minnesota department of natural resources through its TIP program for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons who killed two bull elk. The animal above and another mature adult male elk were found Sunday in Veldt township of Marshall county north of Grygla.

Reward Offered For Information About Killing Of Two Elk

Reward of $1,000 is being offered by the Minnesota department of natural resources (DNR) through its "Turn in Poachers" (TIP) program for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons who killed two bull elk this winter about two miles north of Grygla.

Michael O'Brien, conservation officer stationed in Thief River Falls, found the two adult male elk Sunday while walking in the area. He said the carcasses were found in Section 36 of Veldt township, Marshall county, in the northeast corner of the state wildlife management area.

Both animals had apparently been shot through the neck. One was discovered about 30 yards to the west of a hunter's tree stand in an open area and the other about 20 yards south of the tree stand in a more heavily timbered area, O'Brien said. A portion of the skull containing the antlers had been sawed from both animals but no attempt had been made to harvest any of the meat from either one.

O'Brien said that the area is quite heavily hunted during the deer season and no reports of the elk kills had been received at that time. He speculated that the animals had been

Arctco Seeking Photos And Info On Past Years

Persons in the area who have historical information or photographs regarding Arctic Enterprises or Arctco, Inc., are encouraged to contact Joel Hallstrom at Arctco, phone 681-8558.

Arctco is preparing for publication of a historical book about the company and its products and especially wants photographs of significant or typical events in the company's history. Informational items such as magazine or newspaper articles or other factual material is also needed, Hallstrom said.

"There must be a lot of scrapbooks or dresser drawers containing photos and information about the earlier years of Arctic Enterprises," Hallstrom said. "Any items which are available that we could use would be handled carefully and returned. We want to be as complete and accurate as possible in preparation of the book and the more material we can accumulate the better."

Seminar To Be Held In Warren

This seminar, which includes Pennington, Marshall, Roseau and Kittson counties, is being sponsored by the International coalition for land and water stewardship in the Red River basin. The goal of this seminar is to try to build consensus on land and water issues that are key to the region. Funding for this workshop has been provided by The Bush Foundation of St. Paul, MN.

Public Hearing Tuesday In TRF

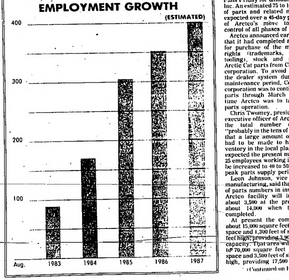
There will be a public hearing on 1987 street and utility improvement projects Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the city auditorium. Following the hearing, there will be an adjourned regular council meeting.

Arctco Receives First Shipment Of Parts Fri.



First truckload of parts from Certified Parts Corporation of Janesville, WI, arrived in Thief River Falls Friday for unloading at Arctco, Inc. An estimated 75 to 100 truckloads of parts and related materials are expected over a 45-day period as part of Arctco's move to consolidate control of all phases of its operation.

Arctco announced early in January that it had completed arrangements for purchase of the manufacturing rights (trademarks, patents and tooling), stock and inventory of Arctic Cat parts from Certified Parts corporation. To avoid disruption of the dealer system during a prime maintenance period, Certified Parts corporation was to continue to supply parts through March 31, at which time Arctco was to take over the parts operation.

Chris Twomey, president and chief executive officer of Arctco, said that the total number of parts is "probably in the tens of millions" and that a large amount of preparation had to be made to handle the inventory in the local plant. He said he expected the present number of 20 to 25 employees working in that area to be increased to 40 to 50 employees at peak parts supply periods.

Leon Johnson, vice president of manufacturing, said that the quantity of parts numbers in inventory at the Arctco facility will increase from about 3,500 at the present time to about 14,000 when the move is completed.

At present the company utilizes about 15,000 square feet of warehouse space and 1,300 feet of shelving seven feet high, providing 3,900 feet of lineal capacity. That area will be expanded to 70,000 square feet of warehouse space and 3,500 feet of shelving 16 feet high, providing 17,500 feet of lineal

A GROUP OF FARMERS from eastern Pennington county met with the Red Lake Watershed district board Thursday morning to discuss a possible water project between the Red Lake and Clearwater rivers. The group is interested in having a channel constructed between the two rivers which could provide a two-fold purpose-reduction of flooding along the Red Lake river and increased flow for wild rice production along the Clearwater river. The farmers visited with the board and engineer Charles Anderson and were advised to prepare a petition requesting the preliminary engineering on the project. A petition and bond would be required for the watershed board to give further consideration to the proposal. Distance between the rivers is about five miles and such a channel likely would be constructed where river levels are about the same, probably a mile or two west of the west boundary of the Red Lake Indian reservation.

Crookston, E.G.F. Fires Appear To Be Suspicious

Kevin, Schuman, Thief River Fals, has been named new state deputy fire marshall, arson and fire investigator. Soon after his appointment on March 4, a fire in East Grand Forks destroyed The Bridge tavern (March 8), fire destroyed the Opera block building in Crookston (March 11) and a house fire in Thief River Falls (March 22) resulted in the death of an elderly woman.

Schuman said he doesn't mind being thrown into the thick of things right off the bat. It's like hitting the ground with your feet running, he said, but he doesn't mind, even if the fires and Crookston and East Grand Forks appear to be suspicious in origin. He said his training and background prepared him well to do the job. The only thing giving him a little difficulty at this point is knowing the proper procedures and policies.

Adding to his hectic schedule as new state arson investigator are his teaching responsibilities. Schuman was the law enforcement coordinator at Northland community college and for the time being is continuing to teach one evening course at the college. Eventually he plans to phase out his teaching responsibilities at the college, which should give him more time to devote to his family and investigations.

Schuman was in training at the time of the first two fires and was called to assist and then direct the investigation when the investigating officer, Dick Brolsma of Osage, was ordered to participate in special training. Even though his training was not complete at that time, he still felt confident of his skills and abilities.

The investigations on the fires in Crookston and East Grand Forks are still incomplete, Schuman said. However, after ruling out the obvious causes for the fires, questions remain. These questions are significant enough for both fires to be considered suspicious.

Schuman believes the fire at The Bridge had multiple starting points, which is very unusual. He said they usually don't find that sort of thing. Samples from the fire have been sent to federal labs and it will probably take at least a month before the

SWEDEN BEAN BAKE

- 1 16-ounce can baked beans, without meat
- ½ large apple, chopped
- 2 tablespoons raisins
- ¼ cup onion, chopped
- 2 tablespoons brown sugar
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard
- 2 tablespoons ketchup

Mix all ingredients in casserole. Cover and bake at 300 degrees for about one hour. This recipe will serve four to six people, with a one-half cup serving containing about 1 gram of fat and 95 calories. Could be served with:

OATMEAL BREAD

- 1 package active dry yeast
- ¼ cup lukewarm water
- ¾ cup skim milk
- 2 tablespoons molasses
- ¾ cup quick or regular oats
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons margarine, softened
- Approximately two and one-third cups whole wheat flour

In small bowl, soften yeast in water for 5 to 10 minutes. Stir to dissolve. Meanwhile, scald milk by placing in small saucepan and heating to just below boiling, when tiny bubbles form around the edge of the pan.

In large bowl, mix together molasses, oats, salt and margarine. Pour hot milk on top and stir to melt margarine. Cool to lukewarm.

Add yeast and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Beat well. Add more flour to make a soft dough, and turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead, working in extra flour only as needed to keep dough from sticking to board. Knead until smooth, light and elastic, with little air bubbles under the surface (about 5 to 8 minutes).

Place in warm, greased bowl, turning dough over once to bring greased side up. Cover with plastic wrap or damp cloth. Place in warm place (80 to 85 degrees), away from drafts.

When the dough has doubled in volume (1½ to 2 hours), punch down, form into ball and let rise again until almost doubled in volume (30-45 minutes). Shape into loaf and place in lightly oiled 9 inch by 5 inch loaf pan. Grease top lightly. Let rise again until almost doubled in volume (50-60 minutes), or until dough does not spring back when touched.

Bake at 375 degrees for 30-35 minutes until loaf is lightly browned. Tip loaf out of pan and thump bottom with fingers to test for doneness (a hollow sound). If not done, return to oven for a few minutes. Cool on rack before wrapping.

This makes one loaf, about 18 slices. One slice contains 2 grams of fat and 87 calories.

Feel free to send your own recipes to Cook's Choice, Box 100, Thief River Falls, MN 56701. All recipes will appear in The Times, with or without name, as you desire.

Thank You

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the wonderful people who helped me celebrate my 73rd birthday by sharing the evening with me at the Eagles Club on Monday, March 23, 1987. I want to thank all who worked so hard to make the night so special and also for the many greetings, cards and gifts and a very special "thank you" to the Aerie for the beautiful clock.

When we first heard about the party, we assumed it was going to be on a modest scale. You can imagine our surprise and pleasure when all the people came streaming in.

Again, my most sincere thanks! It was very much appreciated.

Sincerely,
H.M. Johnson

The INSIDE SCOOP
From Lincoln High

Dear Readers,

Please use CAUTION when reading this week's column. One of my favorite holidays falls this week. You can check for yourself.

I thought maybe this week we could discuss the top five problems at Lincoln. They aren't listed in any specific order.

(1) There are no pop machines at Lincoln, except the ones down in the locker rooms, where once you smell the atmosphere, you decide that anything would be better except for the food in the cafeteria which leads us to problem No. 2.

(2) The cafeteria. Cafeteria food isn't bad, but I think carrying the St. Patrick's Day theme of green food all year round is a little much.

(3) Number three deals with the parking spaces. Actually, I think the school and the law enforcement center have a deal so they split the profits from the tickets.

(4-5) Problems four and five tie in together. They deal with the time between classes and the tardy policy. If we don't have enough time between classes, we run into the good old tardy policy. It's not that I don't like Mr. Novak, it's just that when I see him, it's fun to discuss other things than how many times I've been tardy.

Well, that's the top five problems at Lincoln high. Actually, these aren't problems at all. HAPPY APRIL FOOL'S DAY!

There are, however, some serious things going on this week at Lincoln. The band students have spent the past several weeks preparing for the solo and ensemble contests this Tuesday, March 31, at Fergus Falls. Many students have prepared solos with accompanists in hopes that they will receive a star rating from the judges. The Lincoln jazz band will also perform as an ensemble. The members of this group get up early every Tuesday and Thursday morning to rehearse.

With spring coming many events are coming up fast. One of these happens to be the annual MORP dance. MORP is prom spelled backwards and, as the name implies, everything is exactly backwards. The girls ask the guys; instead of dressing up, everyone dresses down. It is especially fun for the underclassmen because a lot of them don't get to go to the prom.

In the upcoming weeks, I will be discussing several important events that will be affecting the students and faculty at Lincoln.

COLD SNAP put a hold on Spring this past weekend. However, temperatures are expected to climb this week. The extended forecast includes temperatures once again in the 40's by Friday.

results return.

The fire at the Opera block building in Crookston, which destroyed two retail businesses and left an estimated 37 people homeless, is also classified as suspicious.

After examining the site and carrying out interviews with tenants, employees, witnesses and anyone who might have had the remotest connection with the fire, which was the same procedure followed in East Grand Forks Schuman said they had ruled out fire due to electrical short and an exploding boiler.

They have not been able to rule out all possibilities but enough to determine that the cause of the fire was suspicious. Results from federal labs are also pending on that fire. Schuman estimates that this investigation will also take about a month.

Work on both the Crookston and East Grand Forks fire may not yield any solid leads as to how the fire was started. If the fires were intentionally started, the evidence will probably begin pointing in one direction.

Schuman also said that reward posters for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone known to have started the fires are posted at the fire locations. The collect number for the arson hotline is 1-612-645-8882.

Schuman has a bachelor of science degree in criminology, sociology and physical education from the University of Minnesota. He has had numerous training courses in police and fire investigative work and has been in fire and police work since 1970. He has over 10 years of service with the Burnsville public safety office, which was a combined police and fire department. He was also deputy coroner for Scott and Oak counties.

Shortly after that he was a police officer in Alaska for two years and then he moved to Pequot Lakes. He was on the police force one year in Pequot Lakes and then was hired by Northland community college in Thief River Falls.

Schuman and his wife Dianne have five children, Jeff, 12; Shannon, 9; Jimmy, 7; Joey, 4; and Jacob, 3. Schuman is originally from Bloomington. He replaces Pat Barry as Minnesota state fire and arson investigator for this region.

Schuman said it has been quite a change for him and has cut back on his time with his family for the time being, but he does not think the rash of fires will continue.

Arctco Receives First Shipment Of Parts Friday

During 1987-87 the parts department shipped approximately 150 packages per day, Twomey said, and that number is expected to increase to about 400 packages per day as Arctco provides dealers with parts from its own inventory.

Johnson said that the total number of truckloads of parts and tooling to be received includes about nine truckloads of tooling — forms and other items which may be used to create replacement items for previously manufactured snowmobiles.

At the time of purchase December 30, Twomey had estimated the total acquisition to be between $8 million and $9 million. It is estimated that the additional shelving and warehousing changes required to handle the additional parts inventory amounts to about $250,000.

Twomey said that the movement of the parts business to Thief River Falls will have a two-fold purpose for the company. First, it will strengthen the dealer network since dealers will be assured that parts will be available from the manufacturer. Second, it will improve control by the company as only authorized Arctic Cat dealers will be able to purchase Arctic Cat parts.

"We feel we have a major interest in supplying parts only to authorized dealerships," Twomey said. "We provide training for our dealers in the proper use of parts in repairs. Improper use by repairmen who are unfamiliar with the engineering on our machines could result in repeated problems which might turn snowmobilers to another make of machine."

Certified Parts Corporation, headed by James Graft as president, and purchased the manufacturing rights for Arctic Cat snowmobiles from the former Arctic Enterprises corporation. Arctco had been manufacturing Arctic Cat snowmobiles under a licensing agreement with the Wisconsin firm. Arctic also had an agreement with Certified Parts Corporation which allowed the manufacturer to supply dealers with the parts for snowmobiles it had manufactured since beginning operation in 1984.

With the entire parts inventory now located here, Arctco will provide parts for all models of Arctic Cat snowmobiles currently in use. It also owns the manufacturing rights as well as inventory.

Manufacturing for the 1988 model year began at Arctco today with the assembly line producing the Kitty Cat model. A substantial increase in total production from the 13,000 machines produced last year is expected for the 1988 models.

killed since the deer season, probably in December or January. Part of one of the carcasses had been fed on by other animals while the other had been untouched.

"It is especially disturbing that these animals were killed without any effort made to harvest the meat," O'Brien said. "Elk are protected big game animals in Minnesota and the killing of them is a gross misdemeanor, punishable by a heavy fine, imprisonment up to one year, or both."

O'Brien said that persons may qualify for the $1,000 reward for information by calling him at 681-2055 or the TIP toll-free number of 1-800-652-9093.

Cook's Choice

SWEDEN BEAN BAKE

1 16-ounce can baked beans, without meat
½ large apple, chopped
2 tablespoons raisins
¼ cup onion, chopped
2 tablespoons brown sugar
½ teaspoon dry mustard
2 tablespoons ketchup

Mix all ingredients in casserole. Cover and bake at 300 degrees for about one hour. This recipe will serve four to six people, with a one-half cup serving containing about 1 gram of fat and 95 calories. Could be served with:

OATMEAL BREAD

1 package active dry yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
¾ cup skim milk
2 tablespoons molasses
¾ cup quick or regular oats
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons margarine, softened
Approximately two and one-third cups whole wheat flour

In small bowl, soften yeast in water for 5 to 10 minutes. Stir to dissolve. Meanwhile, scald milk by placing in small saucepan and heating to just below boiling, when tiny bubbles form around the edge of the pan.

In large bowl, mix together molasses, oats, salt and margarine. Pour hot milk on top and stir to melt margarine. Cool to lukewarm.

Add yeast and enough flour to make a stiff batter. Beat well. Add more flour to make a soft dough, and turn out onto lightly floured board. Knead, working in extra flour only as needed to keep dough from sticking to board. Knead until smooth, light and elastic, with little air bubbles under the surface (about 5 to 8 minutes).

Place in warm, greased bowl, turning dough over once to bring greased side up. Cover with plastic wrap or damp cloth. Place in warm place (80 to 85 degrees), away from drafts.

When the dough has doubled in volume (1½ to 2 hours), punch down, form into ball and let rise again until almost doubled in volume (30-45 minutes). Shape into loaf and place in lightly oiled 9 inch by 5 inch loaf pan. Grease top lightly. Let rise again until almost doubled in volume (50-60 minutes), or until dough does not spring back when touched.

Bake at 375 degrees for 30-35 minutes until loaf is lightly browned. Tip loaf out of pan and thump bottom with fingers to test for doneness (a hollow sound). If not done, return to oven for a few minutes. Cool on rack before wrapping.

This makes one loaf, about 18 slices. One slice contains 2 grams of fat and 87 calories.

Feel free to send your own recipes to Cook's Choice, Box 100, Thief River Falls, MN 56701. All recipes will appear in The Times, with or without name, as you desire.

Thank You

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the wonderful people who helped me celebrate my 73rd birthday by sharing the evening with me at the Eagles Club on Monday, March 23, 1987. I want to thank all who worked so hard to make the night so special and also for the many greetings, cards and gifts and a very special "thank you" to the Aerie for the beautiful clock.

When we first heard about the party, we assumed it was going to be on a modest scale. You can imagine our surprise and pleasure when all the people came streaming in.

Again, my most sincere thanks! It was very much appreciated.

Sincerely,
H.M. Johnson

The INSIDE SCOOP

by GAYLE BORCHERT

Dear Readers,

Please use CAUTION when reading this week's column. One of my favorite holidays falls this week. You can check for yourself.

I thought maybe this week we could discuss the top five problems at Lincoln. They aren't listed in any specific order.

(1) There are no pop machines at Lincoln, except the ones down in the locker rooms, where once you smell the atmosphere, you decide that anything would be better except for the food in the cafeteria which leads us to problem No. 2.

(2) The cafeteria. Cafeteria food isn't bad, but I think carrying the St. Patrick's Day theme of green food all year round is a little much.

(3) Number three deals with the parking spaces. Actually, I think the school and the law enforcement center have a deal so they split the profits from the tickets.

(4-5) Problems four and five tie in together. They deal with the time between classes and the tardy policy. If we don't have enough time between classes, we run into the good old tardy policy. It's not that I don't like Mr. Novak, it's just that when I see him, it's fun to discuss other things than how many times I've been tardy.

Well, that's the top five problems at Lincoln high. Actually, these aren't problems at all. HAPPY APRIL FOOL'S DAY!

There are, however, some serious things going on this week at Lincoln. The band students have spent the past several weeks preparing for the solo and ensemble contests this Tuesday, March 31, at Fergus Falls. Many students have prepared solos with accompanists in hopes that they will receive a star rating from the judges. The Lincoln jazz band will also perform as an ensemble. The members of this group get up early every Tuesday and Thursday morning to rehearse.

With spring coming many events are coming up fast. One of these happens to be the annual MORP dance. MORP is prom spelled backwards and, as the name implies, everything is exactly backwards. The girls ask the guys; instead of dressing up, everyone dresses down. It is especially fun for the underclassmen because a lot of them don't get to go to the prom.

In the upcoming weeks, I will be discussing several important events that will be affecting the students and faculty at Lincoln.

COLD SNAP put a hold on Spring this past weekend. However, temperatures are expected to climb this week. The extended forecast includes temperatures once again in the 40's by Friday.

results return.

The fire at the Opera block building in Crookston, which destroyed two retail businesses and left an estimated 37 people homeless, is also classified as suspicious.

After examining the site and carrying out interviews with tenants, employees, witnesses and anyone who might have had the remotest connection with the fire, which was the same procedure followed in East Grand Forks Schuman said they had ruled out fire due to electrical short and an exploding boiler.

They have not been able to rule out all possibilities but enough to determine that the cause of the fire was suspicious. Results from federal labs are also pending on that fire. Schuman estimates that this investigation will also take about a month.

Work on both the Crookston and East Grand Forks fire may not yield any solid leads as to how the fire was started. If the fires were intentionally started, the evidence will probably begin pointing in one direction.

Schuman also said that reward posters for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anyone known to have started the fires are posted at the fire locations. The collect number for the arson hotline is 1-612-645-8882.

Schuman has a bachelor of science degree in criminology, sociology and physical education from the University of Minnesota. He has had numerous training courses in police and fire investigative work and has been in fire and police work since 1970. He has over 10 years of service with the Burnsville public safety office, which was a combined police and fire department. He was also deputy coroner for Scott and Oak counties.

Shortly after that he was a police officer in Alaska for two years and then he moved to Pequot Lakes. He was on the police force one year in Pequot Lakes and then was hired by Northland community college in Thief River Falls.

Schuman and his wife Dianne have five children, Jeff, 12; Shannon, 9; Jimmy, 7; Joey, 4; and Jacob, 3. Schuman is originally from Bloomington. He replaces Pat Barry as Minnesota state fire and arson investigator for this region.

Schuman said it has been quite a change for him and has cut back on his time with his family for the time being, but he does not think the rash of fires will continue.

During 1987-87 the parts department shipped approximately 150 packages per day, Twomey said, and that number is expected to increase to about 400 packages per day as Arctco provides dealers with parts from its own inventory.

Johnson said that the total number of truckloads of parts and tooling to be received includes about nine truckloads of tooling — forms and other items which may be used to create replacement items for previously manufactured snowmobiles.

At the time of purchase December 30, Twomey had estimated the total acquisition to be between $8 million and $9 million. It is estimated that the additional shelving and warehousing changes required to handle the additional parts inventory amounts to about $250,000.

Twomey said that the movement of the parts business to Thief River Falls will have a two-fold purpose for the company. First, it will strengthen the dealer network since dealers will be assured that parts will be available from the manufacturer. Second, it will improve control by the company as only authorized Arctic Cat dealers will be able to purchase Arctic Cat parts.

"We feel we have a major interest in supplying parts only to authorized dealerships," Twomey said. "We provide training for our dealers in the proper use of parts in repairs. Improper use by repairmen who are unfamiliar with the engineering on our machines could result in repeated problems which might turn snowmobilers to another make of machine."

Certified Parts Corporation, headed by James Graft as president, and purchased the manufacturing rights for Arctic Cat snowmobiles from the former Arctic Enterprises corporation. Arctco had been manufacturing Arctic Cat snowmobiles under a licensing agreement with the Wisconsin firm. Arctic also had an agreement with Certified Parts Corporation which allowed the manufacturer to supply dealers with the parts for snowmobiles it had manufactured since beginning operation in 1984.

With the entire parts inventory now located here, Arctco will provide parts for all models of Arctic Cat snowmobiles currently in use. It also owns the manufacturing rights as well as inventory.

Manufacturing for the 1988 model year began at Arctco today with the assembly line producing the Kitty Cat model. A substantial increase in total production from the 13,000 machines produced last year is expected for the 1988 models.

Reward Offered On Information About Killing Of Two Elk

killed since the deer season, probably in December or January. Part of one of the carcasses had been fed on by other animals while the other had been untouched.

"It is especially disturbing that these animals were killed without any effort made to harvest the meat," O'Brien said. "Elk are protected big game animals in Minnesota and the killing of them is a gross misdemeanor, punishable by a heavy fine, imprisonment up to one year, or both."

O'Brien said that persons may qualify for the $1,000 reward for information by calling him at 681-2055 or the TIP toll-free number of 1-800-652-9093.

Entries Now Being Taken For Annual Photo Contest

Entries are now being taken for the 8th annual Northland nature photography contest, which is co-sponsored by the Northwest Regional library and the Agassiz Regional Environmental council. This year's contest has an added bonus: the Northwest Medical in Thief River Falls will be selecting photographs from this contest — separately from the Photography Contest judges — for inclusion in their calendar.

This calendar is also the organization's annual report and will be distributed to about 25,000 people in northwestern Minnesota. Approximately 15-16 photographs will be selected for inclusion in the calendar. Those selected by the Northwest Medical center will have their name as well as their photograph printed in the calendar.

Since selection by the Northwest Medical center and the Northland nature photography contest are done separately and by using different criteria, those selected by the center and those winning ribbons and prizes in the photography contest will not necessarily by the same.

Entry forms for the contest and the Northwest Medical center calendar selection may be picked up at the Northwest Regional library in Thief River Falls, Godel Memorial library in Warren, Greenbush, Hallock, Red Lake Falls, Roseau, Warroad or the Bookmobile. Entries will be taken up to and including May 16, 1987.

The contest includes a black and white division and a color division. Each division includes three categories: wildlife, scenic and environmental message. Ribbons will be awarded to the top three photographs in each category. First place winners will also receive a book as their prize. One grand prize ribbon and $25 will be awarded to the best photograph in the contest.

For more details, contact any Northwest Regional library listed above.

JERRY HASNEDL, vice president, St. Hilaire Lions club, presented Bev Rupprecht, program coordinator for the new Big Brother, Big Sister program recently started in Thief River Falls, with a check for $500. Rupprecht said a need for the organization was definitely seen when a survey of a local grade school revealed a number of single families. Pairings have not quite begun, but volunteers are needed now. A list of younger people has been started already. Those who do volunteer as a big brother or sister, will spend about two to four hours per week with the youngster assigned to them. The volunteer will be responsible for entertainment costs but discounts at several local stores have been secured.

KIWANIS CLUB of Thief River Falls, represented by Orin Green, presented Eleanore Erickson, program coordinator for the Special Olympic team in Thief River Falls, with a check for $100. The funds will be used to transport the special olympic team to the special olympic event in Crookston scheduled early in May.

Farm Rescue To Be Topic Of Workshop At Warren Ap. 11

Northwest Region emergency medical services is sponsoring two farm rescue workshops. These workshops are designed for the emergency care and rescue personnel in the northwest region. Topics covered will be: equipment safety and disentanglement of trapped victims, rescue of a person pinned under heavy farm equipment, high voltage demonstration and presentation of electrical hazards, hazardous farm chemicals and how to handle the scene and victims, this includes anhydrous ammonia, and a hands on workshop in the use of small fire extinguishers that are carried in ambulances.

Since the northwest region of Minnesota is largely an agriculture area, and farming equipment presents some unusual challenges to the rescuer when confronted with a farm rescue situation, the workshop is presented to familiarize the rescuer with the equipment and unique rescue techniques that are encountered.

The workshop is being presented in Warren on April 4 at the Warren fire dept and rescue service and on April 11 at the Twin Valley civic center.

Robert Fanning who has taught farm equipment rescue with NDSU for several years will be presenting part of the program, the electrical demonstration is being handled by PKM Electric of Warren and Ottertail Power. Bruce Roed, a fire protection specialist is teaching the afternoon sessions.

The cost of the workshop is $5, the balance of aprox. $35 per participant is being paid by a subsidy from northwest Minnesota emergency medical services. Approximately 90 persons from the communities in the northwest region are expected to attend the two workshops.

Wolves, Deer And Hunters Topic Of Roseau Meeting

A program which will explore the relationships between wolves, deer and hunters will be held Friday April 10 at 7:30 p.m., in the Roseau library assembly room presented by Todd Fuller, a wildlife biologist with the Minnesota department of natural resources. There is no admission charge and refreshments will be available.

Few animals have exerted such a powerful influence on the human imagination as the wolf. How much of what we know is based upon myth and how much on reality? Northern Minnesota harbors the only substantial population of wolves in the lower 48 states. Discover where these animals are found, how they behave in packs, what they eat and how many are found in our area. Learn how these elusive animals communicate through howling. Fuller will also explain ways in which deer and wolves are studied, what is known about the affects wolves have upon deer populations and how people affect wolves.

Plans are being made to open an International Wolf center in Ely, and Todd will discuss some opportunities that may be available to the Roseau area as a result.

This program is one in a series of "Grow Your Own" programs which are sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education council. It is one of 13 councils which were established in 1973 by the legislature to bring environmental information to citizens on Minnesota.

For more information, call July Markl at 218-528-3703, or Betty Johnson at 218-463-2181.

The Telephone As Intruder

Few inventions over the years have had as long-standing and immediate affect on people as the telephone. It has been a communications marvel which allows time and travel savings that defy imagination. It is a convenience which is considered by most to be a necessity and access to service in our country is available to nearly everyone.

One should not blame the telephone itself for some of the problems it has created, but it is also a vehicle for some of the more annoying and intrusive acts that are a part ot today's society. People have discovered means to use this marvelous device that make a subscriber occasionally want to smash it on the floor.

One of the little annoyances is the recorded music or radio broadcasts piped into the telephone when a hold button is depressed. If I'm waiting for someone to respond to my call I would rather not have the annoyance of having to listen to music I don't like. A little silence is welcome once in awhile.

We appreciated the following column by Carolyn Thompson in the Anoka County Union. It points out some of the shortfalls of this modern convenience called the telephone:

It had been an exhausting week, emotionally as well as physically. I had left the hospital where my dad lay dying to return home to freshen up before returning for another long vigil. The hospice assured me there would be no change in the few hours I would be gone.

When the phone rang, I jumped a foot. The voice on the other end sounded serious. "Hello, is this Mrs. Thompson? This is the ——— Memorial Cemetery calling." I panicked. Why had I left my mom alone at the hospital? Now it was too late. They had faced the end without me.

The voice continued, "We are notifying you that you have won a free cemetery plot, providing you purchase another of equal value. Have you and your husband purchased your final resting place yet?"

You can well imagine what I told her to do with her final resting place. Unfortunately, the above story is true, and it happened not only that particularly painful time a few years ago but at least twice since. This is just another example of how the telephone is used to torment us, to disrupt our lives and invade our privacy.

Phone abuse isn't limited to those calling you, either. Have you noticed how intimidating the phone call can be to those with whom you deal? I once sat in a doctor's office for 45 minutes past my appointment time, and when I finally got to see him, we were interrupted by a patient calling with a routine question. He didn't have the appointment, I did.

And have you ever been discussing something with a business person, only to lose your train of thought when he answers a phone call from someone? If that person had barged into his office ringing a bell, he would have been thrown out.

Everyone who has a phone has his own horror stories about such abuses. A recent CBS News special told of a national scam whereby salespeople call to announce you have won a free trip to a vacation paradise. All they need is your credit card number to cover certain minimal costs and the trip would be your. Unfortunately, those who gave up their credit card numbers never saw the trip or the $100 the caller charged to it.

How many phone sales people have told that you have won a bag of groceries, a free carpet shampoo, a car wash or a magazine subscription of your choice? All you have to do is let one of their sales people bore you to death for a couple of hours.

Then there are the sales people who play dirty pool. There is one company that takes advantage not only of the customers but also of the people it claims to be helping. This company uses salespeople with severe speech impediments to hawk its so-called long-lasting light bulbs over the phone, with claims of helping employ persons with handicaps. The sales person has difficulty communicating and the customer feels sorry for him and orders the bulbs, which are overpriced and not at all long-lasting.

No doubt you have received the official-sounding phone supplications to support various law enforcement publications, which usually are not associated with reputable police organizations. We've all had the assorted nuisance and crank calls, the wrong numbers and the heavy breathers at one time or another.

And who hasn't been leaned on by various church, charity and school associations for legitimate concerns. The latest intrusion, however, is the non-person call, the auto-dialing computer with the taped message. This was the last straw for one legislator who has proposed legislation that would remove this latest telephone trespasser.

But I think I've found a better solution. Fed up with getting inopportune calls from people, or machines, I didn't want to talk to, I hooked my phone up to a phone answering device recently. Not only is it a good watch dog, but the gadget is smart. When I checked my messages one day, I discovered that my machine had been communicating with a computer surveyor. Apparently the computer liked its beeps because my machine won a five-pound bag of birdseed from the Osseo Feed Store!

Use Of Dedicated Funds

Citizens with special interests or governmental departments with special needs have often succeeded in convincing legislative bodies that dedicated funds should be established. Transportation is one such area, where special taxes on fuel are collected to permit construction and maintenance of roads and bridges. Natural resources is another where license fees and surcharges are earmarked for specific purposes.

Government gets into trouble when these designated funds seem to work too well, and they create financial pools which spenders in all areas can not resist the temptation to tap. One such situation with the airport and airway trust fund is pointed out by the U.S. chamber of commerce.

"While the public and the business community have continued to pay user fees for air transportation," the U.S. chamber reports, "the federal government has diverted the money in a budget charade to make the federal deficit appear smaller. By failing to spend money on airports and the air traffic control system, the administration and Congress create a surplus in the trust fund but leave air transportation needs unmet. This is unfair and irresponsible."

The chamber points out that since deregulation, the number of air passengers has increased by more than 50 per cent and that by 10 years from now more than 650 million passengers will fly on scheduled commercial airlines each year. This represents a 66 per cent increase from last year's level.

If we continue on our present course of growth, some 65 major airports will exceed capacity before the year 2000. In 1985, 17 air carrier airports which account for 43 per cent of total enplanements nationally were seriously congested. By 1990, 13 additional commercial airports will be congested. As congestion increases it will prevent marketplace competition which brings about the best efficiency and therefore the lowest costs.

"The availability of safe and efficient air transportation depends largely on the continued investment in airport and airway capital development," states William Kelleher, manager of community resources for the U.S. chamber of commerce. "This will require lengthening and strengthening runways and building new terminals, gate space, hangars, service facilities and improvements in the air traffic control system.

"The current system of revenues to finance the trust fund is sufficient to meet these needs. The fund will have a $6.5 billion uncommitted balance by the end of the current fiscal year. This surplus is projected to grow to over $12 billion by 1990 if current federal policies continue.

"The flow of money into the trust fund from the eight per cent ticket tax paid by passengers and other aviation user fees will finance a $2 billion a year construction program for five years. This will meet the needs of the traveling public and the business community."

This is a classic case of manipulation and maneuvering with dedicated funds — money which is collected through special fees for a specific purpose and mandated by law to be used for that purpose. Revenues to the trust fund are counted in overall federal revenues. By not spending for needed airport and airway improvements, the government can use the accumulated funds as a paper balance against other programs where spending takes place without dedicated revenues.

"There must be more concrete assurances that the user fee dollars put in the airport and airway trust fund will be spent for capital development in the air transportation system," Kelleher states. "The federal government must recognize its responsibility in a system that relies on federal, state and local government cooperation. Anything less amounts to simple fraud."

We agree wholeheartedly with that assessment. The same principle applies to all governmental dedicated funds. Raids on these funds, or holding them for paper buffers against irresponsible spending in other areas does amount to fraud. Those who pay the fees should not permit their government to play games with the money. It should be used for the purposes intended.

Borrowed Nonsense

March is one of the toughest months for Minnesotans. It's too late for those who stayed to go south and too early for those who went south to come home.

FLOYD FREDRICKSON, commander of the American Legion, post 117 in Thief River Falls, presented a $1,000 check to Bev Rupprecht, program coordinator of the newly started Big Brother, Big Sister program in Thief River Falls. The contribution was raised through charitable gambling. Fredrickson was pleased to make a contribution to a "worthwhile cause for our organization to support." Rupprecht said a survey of a local grade school revealed a large number of single families and a need for this program. Many things need to be completed before pairings are made, but it does look good. A list of younger people has been started already, but a number of volunteers are still needed. Volunteers will spend about two to four hours per week with the youngster assigned to them. The volunteer will be responsible for entertainment costs but discounts at several local stores have been secured.

to the Editor

To The Editor:

I write this letter as we are packing to move to Bemidji. This is a letter about false friendships and the hurt and anger.

We moved to this community about five years ago. The first year was hell; it seemed like it was so hard to meet people and to start friendships and the people seemed so cold and uncaring. Then we started a professional service and had 10 clients; they all seemed like wonderful, caring Christian people. For the next three years it seemed like we had more friends than we needed.

As the relationships grew we shared our secrets, joys, sadness and a lot of tears. It felt great to be needed and appreciated. We never suspected that the relationships could possibly be false — that they only wanted us for our service. There wasn't a week that went by that these clients didn't express their appreciation for us doing a good job.

Then in June of 1986 I was told I had cancer, and the bottom fell out. These so called friends dropped our service like a hot potato, which I understood to some degree. But what we didn't anticipate is that the friendships would also end. When we discussed them changing to another service they all expressed their concern that our relationships continue. We all cried that day and I felt their feelings were real. I was later to learn that it was just a show, nothing more. It has now been 10 months and I haven't heard from any of them. We have tried to make contact but they're always too busy to talk or get together.

We have come to the conclusion that as long as we were doing a good job and they could purchase our services everything was fine. But when they couldn't use us anymore everything ended. What this has done emotionally to our family has been harder to deal with then the cancer itself.

So once again we believe that this community is full of cold, uncaring and non-Christian citizens. You throw friendships away as though they were a piece of garbage and show that friendships are to be purchased, not earned. It will be very hard for our family to trust people again, but in time we will. We only hope that we don't run into any more like you.

Maybe there is a lesson to learn from all of this. We've learned that the only ones you can count on for love and support are yourself and God. When I needed your love and support the most of you walked out. Talk about feeling used and taken for granted.

Maybe at some point in your life you will need a true friend. I hope you won't be treated the way you treated me. My hope is that you change your ways and start treating people like you want to be treated. Good friendships are a rare commodity and when you have them you just don't throw them away.

In the last several months we as a family have become even closer to God. We realize we are a very loveable couple with a lot to offer. We also realize you don't deserve our friendship. If this letter makes you feel guilty you should take a good look at yourself and the way you treat other people. Believe me, you need to.

Hopefully nobody else will have to go through the emotional turmoil we have and that your next attempt at friendship you will earn, not buy. As Christians we have forgiven but not forgotten. We will keep you and your families in our thoughts and prayers.

To The Editor:

"If you could save a child's life tomorrow what would you do today to make it happen?" This is a quote from Douglas A. Cox, founder and chairman of the "Sweet Freedom" program — a non-profit organization sponsored by the Professional Hairstylists of the World. I have had many chances to see and meet with Doug at hair seminars. At the last seminar we were told about Sweet Freedom and it has really touched me emotionally.

In every city of the world we are faced with the problems of "hostages being held" as Doug says — of teenage pregnancy, teenage alcohol abuse, teenage drug addiction and teenage suicide (don't take me wrong — but adults have these problems too). I feel it will take "our" teenagers along with adult help to be rid of this problem and hope for a better future for all of us.

How can we do this? We do not have to be psychologists or doctors to realize what has to be done. Do you think if persons feel great about themselves they will turn to drug abuse, alcohol abuse or suicide? In my mind, I don't think they will. This is where I feel teens really need our help.

We at Hairlines Unlimited have made a commitment. We have five stylists and we are asking for teens to come in, leave their names (parents and grandparents may do this for them), and each of us will pick a name and are offering one hour a week per stylist (or more if that's what it takes) to spend time with them at no cost to anyone. (The cost of their happiness will be our reward.) We will either provide service or if they just want to talk. We are not trying to fix anyone. We are going to offer what we have learned and what caring we have to share as a gift to a new friend.

Teens — If you already feel great, that's wonderful, but don't let that stop you from coming to our salon and signing up. You will be an example to others around you and we can feel great together. We want to help you to feel beautiful and we are requesting the support of this community and hoping others will join us in our mission. If you have any questions you may contact me.

To The Editor:

To the school board, citizens of Thief River Falls and the Lincoln high school students:

We have an accident in our community looking for a place to happen. In fact, it has found the place and is waiting for an appropriate time to occur.

I am referring to the parade that takes place every day across highway 32 south from the service center to Lincoln high school by the Union 76 station.

High school students, who should know how to safely cross the street, step nonchalantly off the curb with the belief that the individual with the "Stop" flag is going to protect them. Often times the flag goes out after the oncoming vehicle has passed the patrol area.

My son, who is now a fifth grader in the school system, attended Legionville school patrol camp last summer and was taught to stop the children and the traffic and to allow crossings only when it was deemed safe.

It is time for our adult school patrol members to accept some responsibility and control the street crossings of our more mature students. If this cannot be done, how about observing our younger school patrols to learn the proper procedures of being a crossing guard. I am sure my son and the other fifth grade captains can show the crossing guards the ropes.

To the students at the high school who must walk to the service center, it is about time you learn how to cross the street safely — "In the Crosswalk," not wherever your heart desires.

Someday someone is going to be injured or killed at this crossing. I feel it can be avoided by controlling the students, the traffic, and educating the crossing guards.

What do you think?

A Concerned Citizen,

Trail Man Injured

Red Lake Falls — Kim Robert Vettleson, 18, of Trail, was in serious condition March 23 in Fargo's Dakota hospital after being struck by a car the evening of March 17. The car was driven by Douglas Peterson of Brooks. He allegedly struck Vettleson around 11 p.m., one and one-half miles east of Oklee on Red Lake county road 6. Vettleson was taken to Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls by Oklee ambulance, and then transferred to Dakota hospital. Investigations continue by the Red Lake county sheriff's department.

Fire Destroys Mobile Home

Oslo — The Gary Olimb mobile home two miles north of Oslo was completely destroyed by fire March 19. None of the family of five was home when the fire began.

"Finian's Rainbow"

Warren — Warren high school will present the musical, "Finian's Rainbow" April 10 and 11. Reserve tickets are available at the Warren high school principal's office or by calling 745-4636.

Tantalizing Tubers

Oklee — Arnold Lillo of Good Thunder has recently become a ginseng farmer. He is the son of Maurice and Alma Lillo of Oklee, and is married to the former Janice Plante. Orientals believe the root of the ginseng plant is possessed of strong medicinal properties and is a cure-all for every sort of ill, and antidote for every poison, and the most powerful of stimulants. Lillo has invested about $40,000 over a five-year period in his ginseng farm, as well as putting in a lot of planning, study and time. He will be devoting one and one-half acres to the herb this year, selling his produce to a businessman in Malaysia. When asked why more area farmers don't consider raising ginseng for consumption in the United States, he replied, "I'm not sure about the consumption aspect, but most farmers don't bother with it because it involves too much hand work. You have to dig, wash, trim and dry it. Most farmers don't want to get off their tractor seat. I know raising ginseng won't catch on, but I'm still going to try and market it over here for consumption." Ginseng can be used in cooking casseroles and soups, chewed like gum or candy, or used to make a stimulating tea.

Bemidji Job Service Problems

Bemidji — The State Department of Jobs and Training has launched an investigation into the Bemidji Job Service office after hearing complaints from several people who are dissatisfied with services provided by the office. Complaint testimony included communications problems with the staff, problems in obtaining retraining assistance, limited hours in which to file claims or seek assistance and red tape involved in dealing through Bemidji to St. Paul.

Cool, Clear Water Soon

Bemidji — The city of Bemidji is planning to try an experiment in an attempt to eliminate the problem of discolored water throughout the city. A small amount of phosphate will be added to the water as it is pumped up from the ground, before chlorine is added. The water discoloration comes as groundwater is brought up in the well. As it warms and chlorine is added, dissolved iron and manganese particles that were colorless begin to oxidize and separate out of the water, causing a brownish color. It is hoped that the addition of phosphate will prevent the iron and manganese particles from oxidizing and hold them in a dissolved state in the water. The phosphate will then be removed at the wastewater treatment plant. The system is used in about 100 Minnesota cities at present. Bemidji officials plan to implement the process as soon as they receive approval from the state Department of Health.

Swinging Into Spring

McIntosh — The city of McIntosh will "Swing Into Spring" Saturday, April 4, with a free pancake and sausage breakfast for area residents from 7 to 10 a.m. in the McIntosh city hall auditorium, and special Town and Country Days promotions and sales in all McIntosh businesses.

100 Sprightly Years

Crookston — Beth Herrmann celebrated her 100th birthday on St. Patrick's Day at Villa St. Vincent in Crookston. She was born on her grandfather's farm near Maple Lake, appropriately enough, a redhead of Irish and English heritage. She entered the nursing home after a stroke in 1978, but remains active in Retired Seniors Volunteers and the Grandparents Program. At the age of 90, she was driving herself to her college classes in Tacoma, WA, in her Corvair.

Horns A-Plenty

Roseau — The number of entries was down this year in the second Roseau Antler Extravaganza sponsored by the Roseau River Chapter of Minnesota Deer Hunters and Adult Hunter Education, but the quality of entries was up. Eleven new typical racks qualified for the Minnesota record book and four qualified for the Boone and Crockett record book. Non-typical first place winner in rifle-killed division was Andy Strief, with Rick Pieper winning first place in the typical category. Muzzle loading winner was Reubin Larson; Archery winner, Gary Orvis; smallest, Tim Schneider; oddest, John Johnson; and best of repeats from last year, Ernie Novacek.

A Little Help Never Hurts

Stephen — The city of Stephen has been named recipient of a $5,000 grant from the Northwest Minnesota Initiative Fund to assist them in obtaining Star City status from the Minnesota Department of Energy and Economic Development. According to Stephen Mayor Lawrence Sunsdahl, the grant will be used to compliment the planning and production of a slide presentation and fact booklet which will be used in the city's self-evaluation, necessary in qualifying for Star City status.

Getting Some Funds

Warren — The city of Warren received a Northwest Initiative Fund grant in the amount of $4,000 to help pay costs of working toward Star City status for the city. The Warren Chamber of Commerce will also kick in $3,000 toward the project. Charles Riesen was elected chairman of the Warren Star City committee, and he will work with a committee composed of Phil Thompson, Nancy Nelson, Ed Turn, Jeannie Ulferts, Harvey Sedlacek, Rita Dalzell and Rick Roley.

Aging In Spotlight As Keston Performs At Northland Sat.

"Expressions of Aging: An Evocative Entertainment About Old Age" will be presented by John Keston Saturday at 8 p.m. at Northland community college. The performance will follow the annual meeting and dinner of the Northland community college foundation and is free to its members.

Keston puts his audience in literary touch with the poignant messages of Yeats, Hardy, Shakespeare, E.E. Cummings, John Donne and Dylan Thomas. The combination of poetry and song, along with Keston's well-trained tenor voice, takes the audience on a journey through the joys and sorrows, triumphs and fears, weaknesses and strengths of the universal condition of aging.

Keston has been a professional actor and singer for 27 years, working in the British theatre. He has performed in Italy, France, Germany, Spain, other Continental countries and the U.S.A. Keston came to Bemidji as artist-in-residence at Bemidji state university and has been lauded for his portrayal of the jester in BSU's Madrigal Dinners.

Art Przybilla of Rainy River community college, says, "This one man show is truly remarkable. The show is beautifully balanced in its content . . . Mr. Keston's sensitivity to the deeper meanings and to the beauty of the language and his gifted voice made the work come alive as it never has before for me."

The arts critic of the Park Rapids Newspaper said, "Sharing the problems of aging, along with the regrets and hopes of the aged, seems to be what Keston's program reaches toward. In spite of its entertainment value, it is also a strong emotional and educational tool that has, with the great literature related, a relevancy in all times and has a place in every community."

Tickets for the performance are $5 for adults and $2.50 for students and senior citizens. Tickets are available at Northland college and at Larson Music company. Fundraising activities of the foundation are responsible for bringing the performances of famous artists such as John Keston, Toni Gillman and Rio Nido to Thief River Falls.

Membership in the foundation is divided into the following clubs: Booster club, $25 per year; Alumni club, $35 per year; Provost's club, $100 per year for five years; Foundation charter, $200 per year for five years; President's club, $500 per year for five years; and Chancellor's club, $1,000 per year for five years.

To The Editor:

On Monday night, March 23, our local school board again had to make some very difficult choices relating to the reduction of expenses for the 1987-88 school year. It is very easy to criticize these decisions and I, for one, don't like to criticize. Much time and thought, and I'm sure some agony, went into the items that were eliminated in order to keep the district in the black.

However, I do feel that one item needed further consideration before it was acted upon at that meeting.

After all the turmoil about "Excellence in Education," I can not understand the justification of cutting: English, math, social studies, computer and elementary art teachers. Then three items later, on the same agenda, they considered the hiring of a "Co-Curricular Director" — in other words, an athletic director. This position has been budgeted with an amount temporarily figured at $40,000.

Now, I've nothing against athletics, and I support these programs. They are important. However, I personally feel that we presently have the necessary personnel to handle this position. I would rather see this money put into the "Excel" program or some other program that will provide quality education for our future citizens.

I really feel that our district's priorities were "lacking" in this decision. Don't you feel the same?

TRF Girls Post 19-2 Basketball Record . . .

Prowlers Have Banner Season

A season-opening 19-game winning streak that captured the attention of the community and produced a sell-out size crowd for the Prowlers' final regular season outing when they were trying to polish off a perfect 20-0 schedule highlighted the 1986-87 season for the Thief River Falls girls high school basketball team.

Toasted as the Belles of the Ball on a popular merchandised fund-raising poster, the Prowlers came up three points short in their bid for that sought-after unbeaten finish, losing a 56-53 ddcision to Fergus Falls that night. And their next start was an even tougher blow when the No. 2-seeded Prowlers lost a 46-45 home court overtime decision to No. 3-seeded Bemidji in the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament semifinals.

Those losses hurt, but time heals wounds, and Thief River Falls coach Tom Schafer hopes most of the memories of the 1986-87 season will be pleasant ones.

"It was a big disappointment when we lost to Fergus Falls," acknowledged Schafer. "And it was an even bigger disappointment when we lost to Bemidji. We had beaten them twice during the year. A trip to the state tournament was certainly within our reach; then to lose out in the first (tournament) game was really disappointing."

"But we had a very successful season, especially when you look at the caliber of teams we played. It was probably our toughest schedule ever. I thought at the beginning of the year we had a shot at winning 13 or so ball games. I never dreamed we'd win 19."

Thief River Falls' 19-game winning streak started November 25 with a 43-40 victory at Marshall County Central. That would be the only regular season loss for the Nordics, who went on a 23-game winning streak en route to a Region 8A title and a berth in the Class A state tournament.

In December the Prowlers beat Warren 46-31 and Roseau 47-31 before picking up back-to-back North Sub-Region 8AA wins over Detroit Lakes 48-39 and Moorhead 47-25. They finished the 1986 portion of the 1986-87 schedule with a championship outing at the eight-team Warren Invitational by beating Ada-Borup 51-24, East Grand Forks 56-54 in overtime, and Hallock-Kennedy 48-35.

January started with a 45-40 North Sub-Region 8AA win over Bemidji, followed by victories over Crookston 48-44, Hallock-Kennedy 43-37, East Grand Forks 56-47, Tri-County 61-46, Plummer 56-33, and Fertile-Beltrami 46-39.

Thief River Falls made it 17-0 in early February with back-to-back come-from-behind wins over Bemidji 43-35 and Crookston 42-37, then crushed East Grand Forks 62-40 and Greenbush 66-20 to set up the season-ending showdown with Fergus Falls.

Lincoln gym doors were locked when the place was filled to standing room-only capacity almost a full hour before varsity game time. It was loud, and it was fun, but the Prowlers missed too many free throws and surrendered the North Sub-Region 8AA tournament top seed to the Otters.

Another large crowd was on hand for the post-season meeting with Bemidji. The Prowlers again struggled, but rallied, forced overtime and just missed a couple of opportunities at the end that could have kept the season going.

Senior Brenda Russell, a 5-3 guard, led the Prowlers in scoring with a 16-point average this winter. She wound up as the No. 3 all-time scorer in school history with 708 career points, finishing behind only Michelle Olson (1,062) and Michelle Puetz (911), 1985 and 1986 graduates, respectively.

Russell also finished with three school records. She made a record 82 free throws this season to go along with a pair of assist marks she set as a junior when she had 13 in one game and 136 for the year. She had 103 this year.

Kelly Cornell, a 5-8 junior guard, carried a 14-point scoring average this year, and Laura Beito, a 6-0 senior center, scored 10 points per game, to go along with a team-high 244 rebounds. Cornell was a distant second on the rebound list with 121. Beito wound up as the No. 5 rebounder on the Prowlers' all-time list with 430. Puetz topped the chart with 703.

The 19-2 record was an all-time best for the Prowlers, who also set a team defensive record by giving up just 38.2 points per game this winter. They averaged 50 points themselves.

"We weren't an overpowering team," admitted Schafer. "We had to fight for every win. One of the big factors in our success was that we played so well defensively. Beito was a very dominant player in the middle, and (Cindy) Kruta played very well defensively out front."

Thief River Falls didn't start the year expecting to open with 19 straight wins. The Prowlers took off, though, when Russell and Cornell opened the year with hot shooting hands from the outside. "That gave us a lot of confidence," said Schafer. "We found out we didn't have to force the ball inside to score."

Confidence soared, he said, after those early-season back-to-back North Sub-Region 8AA wins over Detroit Lakes and Moorhead. Then once the wins started to accumlate, teams became intimidated by the Prowlers' record, hinted Schafer.

Graduation losses of Russell, Beito, and 5-10 starting forward Lisa Lillevold will obviously be felt, but the Prowlers will return Cornell and Kruta at the guards, along with Rhonda Rothschadl, a 5-10 freshman who saw some starting duty this season, plus others off a 13-4 junior varsity team.

"We're losing a lot of talent and game experience," admitted Schafer, "but we have some very good talent coming up. It may take us a while to get going next year but we'll play a faster-paced game. We'll have to rely on our defense. Scoring points will be a lot tougher, but we'll be able to play a full-court pressing defense with out quickness."

Pioneers Lose Games At Dome

Northland Community College baseball team opened its 1987 season with a five-game stint compacted into two playing dates last week at the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis.

The Pioneers, limited to the confines of the Northland gym for preseason practice drills before stepping on to the Metrodome playing surface, lost all five decisions.

Northland lost a tripleheader to Willmar Wednesday, starting with a strong effort in a 9-7 first-game loss, but then dropping not-so-close 9-1 and 8-1 games.

Thursday Northland started with another close contest, losing 3-2 to Fergus Falls, but then fell 9-0 to Hibbing.

"All in all, it was a good experience for us," reported Northland coach Rick Nelson. "Defensively, for only practicing indoors and having a limited throwing area, we did all right. We turned 11 double-plays, which is probably more then we had all year. Offensively, for seeing live pitching for the first time we were pleased, but not satisfied, with what we did at the plate.'

Northland started the season in great fashion, jumping out to a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning of the 9-7 loss to a Willmar team that is expected to be one of the stronger teams in the Minnesota Community College Conference this spring. Danny Cwikla finished the game 3-for-5, while Joe Blankenfeld went 2-for-3, and Dean Brandon was 2-for-4 the plate.

With all 25 players on the Northland roster gaining playing time, consistency was not the Pioneers' strong suit, however, and the scores the rest of the day reflected as much.

Another strong start highlighted Thursday's return trip to the Metrodome as Deon Schmidt pitched a three-hitter in the 3-2 loss to Fergus Falls. The Pioneers led 2-0 until two errors on the same play — Northland's only errors of the game — produced three unearned runs and a Fergus Falls win.

"I think we'll be competitive," said Nelson. "I think we should be right with teams like Fergus Falls and Crookston. Hibbing is definitely the favorite in the Northern Division."

Northland is scheduled to open its outdoor season Saturday with a 12-noon MCCC doubleheader at the University of Minnesota-Crookston.

Weigand To Play For Sioux

Vikki Weigand of Thief River Falls has signed a letter of intent to play volleyball at the University of North Dakota, it was jointly announced last week by the Lincoln High School senior, Sioux volleyball coach Lisa Kissee, and Prowlers coach Helen Anderson.

Daughter of Loren and Roberta Weigand of Thief River Falls, Vikki plans to pursue an education in aviation.

Weigand, a 5-10 power hitter with a 24-inch vertical jump, began her volleyball career in the seventh grade at Franklin Middle School. She was named the most improved player award winner as a freshman on the Lincoln junior varsity, then spent three years as a varsity regular for the Prowlers, earning the coaches' award as a junior and a senior, along with most valuable player honors after her 1986 senior season. She also earned recognition as the most valuable player at the 1986 Mobile Sports Volleyball Camp held in Thief River Falls, and received an all-star player award at the Ottertail Camp in Dent the same summer.

"She is one of the most intelligent players I have seen at the high school level in Minnesota," said Kissee about her new recruit. "She will make a quick transition to the college level."

"Vikki is an all-around player and will be an asset to the UND volleyball team," said Anderson. "We at Lincoln and in Thief River Falls are proud to see Vikki have the privilege of playing volleyball at the college level."

Agassiz Refuge 50 Years Old

by Agassiz NWR Personnel

On March 23, 1937, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order No. 7583 establishing 55,170 acre Mud Lake Migratory Waterfowl Refuge in eastern Marshall County. The refuge has since been renamed Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge (NWR) and now covers 61,449 acres, but the initial objectives, waterfowl production and maintenance, remain the same.

Prior to establishment, the land within Agassiz NWR evolved through several stages. In the late 1800's the land was undisturbed by man. It had a wealth of birdlife with "immense numbers of breeding ducks."

Historical accounts state numerous moose were along the rivers and about the swamps. Bear were common and often shot with 22 rifles and shotguns. Deer were scarce. Elk had been present as indicated by antlers dug from the peat, but were eliminated from refuge lands prior to the arrival of all but the earliest settlers. Beaver were exterminated, but had been present as evidenced by remnant dams. Muskrats, fox and weasels were common. In 1896, 27 deer were reported killed in one locality by lynx where the snow was seven feet deep.

Abundance of wildlife made early settlement possible. Many earned their income from market hunting and trapping. Game was taken out by the wagon load and harvest was unregulated. Populations of vulnerable wildlife species decreased.

Homesteading began in the 1890's and by 1910 about 30 were located on the present refuge. Most early settlers were bachelors, and most of them established their homestead claims, sold them, and moved on.

By 1910 Holt was a booming town. Large scale immigration of settlers occurred and peaked about 1914-1915. By then there were possibly 150-200 homesteads on the present refuge. This dwindled to 50-60 remaining farms just prior to refuge establishment.

In the early 1900's attempts to drain the area for agricultural purposes began. The first major construction was the deepening and straightening of the Thief River beginning in 1909. In 1910, the Judicial Ditch 11 system, draining a watershed of 440 square miles, was approved for construction. It was reportedly the largest drainage project in the United States. By 1933, approximately $1 million dollars had been expended on the inadequate Ditch 11 system.

An era of fire, flooding, and eventually drought of the 1930's took its toll. Tax delinquency was prevalent and nearly all farming unprofitable. Bankruptcy threatened Marshall County due to indebtedness from the drainage attempt. To save Marshall County from bankruptcy, the state legislature passed an act absorbing the drainage taxes. The Minnesota Conservation Department was authorized to purchase lands with funds provided by the United States Resettlement Administration. Following purchase and condemnation procedures the Bureau of Biological Survey obtained the land from the State of Minnesota for development as a National Wildlife Refuge.

On the newly established refuge restoration of the drained wetlands was first priority. By 1941 20,000 acres of wetlands were restored. Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) labor helped accomplish much of the early refuge developments. World War II activities delayed improvements during the 1940's. From the close of the war to the present, improvements to roads, buildings and water facilities continued. Bicentennial Land Heritage Program (BLHP) funding in the late 1970's allowed many significant improvements to occur, including the building of the present maintenance facility and rehabilitation of many vintage water control facilities. Many area youth have been employed in the Young Adult Conservation Corps, Title 10, Youth Conservation Corps, Comprehensive Employment Training Act, Summer Youth Program, Governors Youth Program and On the Job Training programs funded by both state and federal agencies. Hundreds of area residents have close ties to the refuge through direct employment, indirect employment (contract work, permittee, etc.), or as recreational users.

Through the years, restoration of wetlands and protection from hunting resulted in significant increases of native wildlife populations. Moose increased from three animals in 1937 to a current huntable population of 200-300 animals. Re-introduced Canada geese first nested in 1951 and in 1986 produced an all time high of 750 goslings. White-tailed deer populations have never been more abundant. Nearly all native wildlife species thrive on Agassiz.

More than 265 species of birds are known to seasonally occur on the area, many of which nest here during the spring and summer. The refuge attracts 17 species of breeding ducks as well as giant Canada geese. Approximately 15,000 ducks are produced annually. The largest nesting colony of Franklin's gulls in

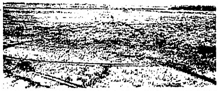
IN JULY, 1938, a Civilian Conservation Corps crew placed stone rip-rap on a road and spillway at Webster Creek on Agassiz Refuge land.



AN AUGUST, 1938, aerial photograph looking east-northeast near the Mud River diversion crossing displays the flat, open treeless terrain of the Agassiz Refuge area at that time.

A GROUP OF Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) open house visitors were on hand at the Agassiz Refuge headquarters in 1938.

Two Mobile Sports Volleyball Camps Are Scheduled For TRF

Mobile Sports will offer two volleyball camps in Thief River Falls this summer — a July 6-10 session for junior high age girls, and a July 27-31 session for senior high age players.

Thief River Falls head coach Helen Anderson will be the camp director for the junior high session, designed for girls who will be in grades 6-through-8 next fall. New London-Spicer head coach Margaret Essler will be the camp director for the senior high session, designed for girls who will be in grades 9-through-12 next fall.

Sessions for both age groups will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday in the Lincoln High School gym.

Cost is $60 per session. Registration forms, along with a $25 deposit, are due May 1. Balance of the camp cost will be due the first day of camp.

Interested camp participants should send their registrations and deposits to Lincoln High School, First and Knight, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, with the junior high registration envelopes going to the attention of Roxi Nicholson. Registration forms are available at your schools.

Mobile Sports Volleyball Camps have been a familiar visitor to Thief River Falls in recent years, offering athletic camping experience at a much lower cost than the advertised live-in camps.

Area Sports Briefs

Wayne Peterson, a 1975 Lincoln High School graduate, was a member of the Fargo Shogren team that won Class A honors in the 1987 North Dakota men's amateur basketball tournament completed Sunday in grand Forks.

His Shogren team defeated Saunder's Sporting of Minot 89-82 in overtime in the title game, but with a very unusual finish. The Shogren team was in the lockerroom for a post-game shower after apparently winning 72-71 in regulation time. However, the clock had malfunctioned, and when officials discovered the problem, they put 10 seconds back on the clock and brought both teams back on the court. Saunder's Sporting then tied it, forcing the overtime.

Shogren lost a first round tournament game, which dropped them from the Class AA to Class A ranks, then won four straight to win championship honors.

Peterson was a 6-10 center on the Prowlers' 1974 state tournament team.

Wolves, Deer, Hunters

A program which will explore the relationships between wolves, deer, and hunters will be held Friday, April 10, at 7:30 p.m., in the Roseau Library assembly room presented by Todd Fuller, a wildlife biologist with the Department of Natural Resources. There is no admission charge, and refreshments will be available.

Few animals have exterted such a powerful influence on the human imagination as the wolf. How much of what we know is based upon myth or reality? Northern Minnesota harbors the only substantial population of wolves in the lower 48 states. Discover where these animals are found, how they behave in packs, what they eat, and how many are found in our area. Learn how these elusive animals communicate through howling. Todd will also explain ways in which deer and wolves are studied and what is known about the effects wolves have upon deer populations and how people affect wolves.

Plans are being made to open an International Wolf Center in Ely, and Todd will discuss some opportunities that may be available to the Roseau area as a result.

This program is one in a series of "Grow Your Own" programs which are sponsored by the Agassiz Environmental Education Council. This council is one of 13 councils which were established in 1973 by the legislature to bring environmental information to citizens on Minnesota.

For more information, call Judy Markl at 528-3703, or Betty Johnson at 463-2181.

Selective Herbicides Used

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Division of Forestry, will be applying herbicides to approximately 650 acres of forestry lands at various northwestern Minnesota locations. Foresters at Warroad, Clear River, Wannaska, and Grygla will supervise the projects.

There will be 572 acres treated from the air and 82 acres treated from the ground. Aerial application will be by helicopter because of the excellent control minimizing the possibility of drift.

Selective herbicides are used to control competing vegetation on areas that have been or will be planted to trees. Ground application of herbicides will begin during May and will continue during June. Aerial application will take place about the end of July. Each site treated with herbicide will be identified with readily visible signs. The signs will indicate the herbicide used, the date the area was treated and a telephone number for additional information.

Herbicide use is only one of several management practices which are part of the Division's forest intensification program. Other intensification practices include planting, site preparation on 1,200 acres, shearing to regenerate aspen on 850 acres, planting seedlings (including jack pine, Norway pine, white spruce, white cedar, black spruce and tamarack) on roughly 1,000 acres and harvest timber on 1,200 acres.

If you have questions regarding the Division's vegetation management program, contact John Stanton, Area Forest Management Specialist, at Warroad, telephone 386-1304.

Birds have been known to use some rather unusual building materials for their nests. According to National Wildlife magazine, a pair of canyon wrens in Fresno, California built a 2½-pound nest entirely of paper clips and other office supplies. And Florida bald eagles have used everything from Chlorox bottles and light bulbs to magazines and tennis balls.

Agassiz Refuge Is 50 Years Old In '87

the state occurs in Agassiz Pool. Other colonial nesters include great blue herons, great egrets, black-crowned night herons, double-crested cormorants, and eared and western grebes.

Approximately 49 mammalian species, ranging from moose and black bear to otters and shews, are residents. A pack of endangered timber wolves has resided on the refuge since 1981. Other endangered species include bald eagles and peregrine falcons which annually visit the refuge during the spring and fall migrations.

Primary and most cost effective management tools used to benefit wildlife are regulation of water levels in wetlands and controlled burning on uplands. Other management activities include waterfowl banding, wildlife studies, brush mowing, law enforcement, farming, and administering public use activities.

National Wildlife Refuge System, which includes Agassiz, is a network of United States lands and waters managed specifically for wildlife. Units of the system stretch across the continent from the icy north shore of Alaska to the balmy Florida Keys and beyond to tropical islands in the Caribbean and the South Pacific.

Refuges provide habitat-food, water, cover, and space-for approximately 60 endangered species and hundreds of species of birds, mammals, reptiles, amphibians, fish, and plants.

Over 400 refuges, encompassing nearly 90 million acres in 49 states and five trust territories, now comprise the system. They range in size from Minnesota's tiny Mille Lacs (less than an acre) to Alaska's sprawling Yukon Delta (almost 20 million acres). Small or large, each refuge provides vital habitat for at least a portion of Americas' wildlife populations. Many refuges are located along the major north-south flyways, providing feeding and resting areas for the great semiannual migrations of ducks, geese, and other birds.

Ironically, ladies' fashions at the turn of the century contributed to the establishment of the first refuges. Herons and egrets were killed in large numbers for their plumes, which were in great demand for ladies hats. Other man-caused and natural calamities also played a part. Market hunting, indiscriminate use of wildlife, drought, and the drainage and development of marshes and tidal wetlands seriously threatened many species.

In 1903, President Theordore Roosevelt signed an Executive Order protecting the egrets, herons and other birds on Florida's Pelican Island, making it the first "national" wildlife refuge. This was part of a concerted effort on the part of the American people to actively protect and manage their irreplaceable wildlife resources.

For over 80 years a succession of federal laws and international treaties have been established to protect wildlife and ensure the acquisition, establishment, and maintenance of secure lands and waters. The very names of the laws reflect their focus-The Migratory Bird Conservation Act of 1929, The Migratory Bird Hunting Stamp Act of 1934, The Fish and Wildlife Act of 1956, The National Wildlife Refuge System Adminstration Act of 1966, The Endangered Species Act of 1973, and the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980. Like building blocks, each law complemented its forerunners-filling gaps and adding strength as time and circumstances dictated.

Recognition of Agassiz's 50th Anniversary will continue through 1987 and will be highlighted with an open house the weekend of September 26-27. Tours, displays, and other activities will be set up for visitors to enjoy. If anyone has photographs or other interesting historical items that might be duplicated or displayed at the open house or the Marshall County Fair, appropriate recognition will be given. Officials at the refuge are also making tape recordings of early settlers recollections of the area during the early 1900's. Contribution arrangements or inquires can be made by calling refuge headquarters.

TRF Walk For The Health Of It Program Ends Its First Season

Walk For The Health Of It, the first walking-exercising program of its kind in this area, ended its first season on Thursday, March 26.

The program began last October. It was designed and implemented to encourage people to walk on a regular basis as part of their exercise and fitness program. Walk For The Health Of It was held in the Thief River Falls Sports Arena so that anyone, regardless of age, could undertake a walking exercise program during the winter. The program was sponsored by the Falls Clinic div. of Dakota Clinic, Ltd., Northwest Medical Center, Northwest Radiology Associates, and the Ramsay Eye Clinic and in cooperation with the City of Thief River Falls Park and Recreation Department.

Thief River Falls Sports Arena provided an area protected from the wind and cold for 191 walkers over the last six months. As an added incentive, awards were offered for walkers reaching the 10, 100, and 500-mile mark. Of the 191 participating, 117 walked over 10 miles and received a pin, 25 walked over 100 miles and received a T-shirt and two walked over 500 miles and received a trophy. A total of 8,225 miles were walked this winter in the arena by all the participants.

Because of the extremely enthusiastic response to this program sponsors hope to offer it again next winter. Plans are under way now to develop a similar program for this spring and summer with 1, 2, and 3 mile courses mapped out around the city for walkers. More details will be available on this program within the next few weeks.

Questions regarding Walk For The Health Of It can be referred to Gail Holland at Northwest Medical Center, 681-4240, ext. 210

Imagine a lawn that repels weeds, resists disease, dislikes fertilizer, stays green late in the season and -- best of all -- barely grows! According to International Wildlife magazine, a Canadian geneticist says he has produced 35 lines of such a miracle grass from 17 alpine species. The Canadian government is already using the slow-growing grasses along highways, but it will be another four years or so before they're available commercially.

'87 STREET PROJECT. Ron Lindberg, consultant to the city of Thief River Falls from Stewart and Walker Engineering, points out the effects of shifting soil around a pipeline to city streets. Lindberg and Fourth Ward Alderman Don Barron are looking at the damage to Kendall avenue south. Barron and Alderman Dale Wennberg were among the city councilmen touring the area scheduled for construction this summer. They took the tour to prepare themselves for a public hearing on the proposed project 7 p.m. March 31 in the city auditorium. The main portion of the project is bounded by Conley avenue on the east, Annie street on the south, Crocker avenue on the west and Gulf street on the north. Lindberg told the councilmen that without a new overlay on these streets which were constructed in 1965, they will deteriorate quickly within the next few years.

Northwest Area Property Values Decrease 25.2%

State Auditor Arne Carlson's special report on local government finance and fiscal stress to the Minnesota House committee on taxes, division of property taxes, recently noted that the 13 regions in the state have not been impacted uniformly by the state economy.

"Indicated market value decreased 25.2 per cent in the northwestern region and 12.5 per cent in the Arrowhead region. Southwestern and Southeastern regions show declines ranging from eight per cent to 21 per cent on a regional basis. The metro-area showed an increase of eight per cent for this period, compared to a statewide decrease of 3.5 per cent," Carlson testified.

The report shows increases over 26 per cent in the number of AFDC recipients in the Northwest and Arrowhead regions. "This is well above the statewide average of 7.8 per cent," Carlson said. "Clearly there are areas of the state that are experiencing higher unemployment and greater needs for welfare, health and social services programs."

"Welfare fund reserves declined 63 per cent in one region, Arrowhead, while increasing in all other regions," Carlson said. "Reserves are exected to show further decline in 1986, according to projections furnished recently by county auditors, with the largest per cent decline again anticipated in the Arrowhead region," Carlson said.

The report examines counties by regional development districts for the years 1982 through 1985 with projections for 1986. There are areas of the state with high unemployment and increasing welfare recipients. The metro area generally remains stronger.

"Where the local economy is faltering, especially in the mining and farm-dependent areas, local government is feeling the same stress," Carlson said.

"Counties have been under particular pressure because their welfare, health and social service programs feel immediate impact when people need help," Carlson reported. "They cannot cut spending in the welfare programs under such circumstances, when human service needs are growing"

National Arbor Day Foundation Gives Away Free Trees

National arbor day foundation is giving ten free Colorado Blue Spruce trees to everyone who becomes a Foundation member during April, 1987.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit foundation's effort to encourage planting for conservation and beautification throughout America.

"Colorado Blue Spruces were selected for this campaign because of their many uses in the home landscape," John Rosenow, the foundation's executive director, said. "They lend beauty to their surroundings with their silver blue-green color and compact conical shape. They can be used as individual ornamentals, an energy-saving windbreak, a privacy screen, or as living Christmas trees."

The ten free Colorado Blue Spruces will be shipped postpaid in April or May with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow, or they will be replaced free of charge. The Foundation will give the ten free trees to each new member contributing $10 during April.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Ten blue Spruces, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by April 30, 1987.

Thief River Falls Swimming Pool committee will hold an auction of new and used goods and various celebrity items beginning at 10 a.m. April 4 in the Thief River Falls Sports arena.

Celebrity items include pins, autographed pictures, and mugs from Ed McMahon, Carol Burnette, Wayne Newton and Johnny Carson and others. A 4-H concession stand will be set up during the auction. All proceeds will go to the Swimming Pool Committee.

Since the Swimming pool committee began its fundraising efforts at the end of June, it has raised about $50,000. The organization has begun requesting applications for various grants. They hope to raise the expected $500,000 needed to build the pool within a couple of years.

The organization has held a variety of fundraising events including a dunk booth and raffle at the county fair, raffling off of a Kitty Cat, booths at craft shows and many others. Last Friday night it held a dance for sixth through eighth graders at the Roller Rink. Besides the upcoming auction they also plan to continue with the 500 club fund drive and a telethon before the school closes for the summer.

Miss TRF Attends Girl Talk Session

Miss Thief River Falls of 1986, Debbie Erickson, will participate in the first official event of the Miss Minnesota pageant Saturday when she attends "Girl Talk" in Austin. The one-day event is required of Miss Minnesota candidates and provides them with information on the pageant and an introduction to the other contestants.

Debbie, the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Carroll Erickson of Thief River Falls, is a junior at Bethel college in St. Paul where she is studying for a BA degree in speech-communcations with business and music minors. She is leaning toward a career in financial planning.

The "Girl Talk" session which begins at 8:30 a.m. and continues throughout the day will include presentation of a new scoring system for selection of Miss Minnesota. Also involved during the day will be viewing of video tapes of 1986 contestant interviews; a meeting on local pageants; session with Kristine Faulks, Miss Minnesota 1986; review of what is expected of Miss Minnesota; hair and make-up clinic; production interview; television taping for pageant promotion; and a closing session.

Parents are invited to the evening banquet and Rev. and Mrs. Erickson and their daughter Marcia will join Debbie at that event. The Ericksons also plan to be in attendance at pageant events during the week of June 13-20.

Debbie said that her preparations for the state pageant are coming along well despite a busy school schedule. She has memorized the music for piano solo which will be her pageant talent number. She will play Beethoven's Sonata Opus 2, No. 3, selected for its fast pace, opportunity for dramatic interpretation and notable for its variations.

"I have had my photos taken for the pageant program and publicity and completed the application and talent forms to be turned in to the state pageant," Debbie said.

"My evening gown for that phase of competition is done, my interview dress is ready and the gown for use during my talent presentation has been ordered. This week (March 22-28) during spring break has given me a chance to be home and get a few more things done in preparation."

Debbie said she will complete this year's studies in late May and that she will have about three weeks at home before leaving for the week of state pageant competition.

Because of her attendance at college in St. Paul and infrequent trips back to Thief River Falls during the school year, her activities locally as Miss Thief River Falls have been somewhat curtailed. She has been a guest and speaker at the chamber of commerce annual banquet and is scheduled to assist at the Women of Today installation and awards banquet in Thief River Falls April 24.

"I have had a few opportunities to meet people and have been doing my best to be a good representative of the Thief River Falls community," she said. (Debbie's thoughts on her reign as Miss Thief River Falls are presented in the "YOUR Times" column on Page 5 of today's Times.)

DEBBIE ERICKSON, Miss Thief River Falls of 1986, will attend the Miss Minnesota pageant "Girl Talk" session Saturday at Austin.

Positive Comments Aired At '87 Project Hearing

Some referred to it as a bird bath and others referred to it as a new waterfront. Many people attending the public hearing on the 1987 Thief River Falls street and utility improvement project Tuesday night were not concerned with how much it will cost them, but collections of water that have appeared in front of their homes since the streets were constructed in 1965.

Approximately 60 people turned out for the public hearing at the city auditorium. Most of the comments made to the city council and engineering representatives were positive.

Mayor Bob Carlson said at the end of the meeting that he was pleased to see so many turn out and was somewhat surprised to hear so few negative comments.

About 500 notices were sent out to property owners, many of whom live in the fourth ward where most property owners will be assessed $6 per lineal foot for the improvements. Carlson said he was pleased with the cooperation the city received from the media in announcing the hearing.

Alderman Don Barron, fourth ward representative, said he was pleased to see so many of the fourth ward property owners turn out. He said that he personally visited the affected areas twice in the fall and twice in the spring to see the differences, if any. He said he was surprised to see how much the problem worsened.

He said the warmer than usual winter contributed to a worsening of the problem. Barron later seconded a motion to go ahead with the project after the hearing was adjourned.

The project plan was approved by the council shortly after the hearing was adjourned. Total estimated cost of all proposed improvements is $991,900. It is subject to the addition of other projects, which will require other public hearings.

The project is known as the third phase of a five-phase plan which was developed several years ago in an effort to improve rapidly deteriorating city streets.

Phase three is broken down into several components: bituminous resurfacing, which will cost approximately $403,900 (assessed to recover about 50 per cent of the costs); street construction on Barzen

NW Medical Center Among Hospitals With Charity Care

Minnesota hospitals responding to a recent survey provided an estimated $19 million in free or low cost "charity care" during 1984, to patients otherwise unable to pay for it. At Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls, each credits come under the general heading of "bad debts", according to Rihcard Spyhalski, president.

When asked to describe the financial burden of providing that care, 48 per cent of the 119 responding hospitals said the impact on them was "moderate," while another eight per cent called it "significant." About 70 per cent of all hospitals in Minnesota participated in the statewide survey, the first of its kind in the state.

About 91 per cent of survey participants — including hospitals in all parts of the state — indicated that they provided some type of free or low cost care during 1984.

In addition to the $19 million in charity care, they provided $7 million worth of care under the federal Hill-Burton program. Hill-Burton requires participating hospitals to offer a specified amount of "uncompensated" care to eligible patients. Northwest Medical center paid about $90,000 in Hill-Burton funds last year and has allocated $96,000 for FY 1988 ending April 30, 1988.

The survey was conducted jointly by the Council of Hospital orporations, the Minnesota Hospital association and the Minnesota department of health.

Charity care was defined in the survey as free or low cost care, provided to patients unable to pay for it. Not included was "bad debt," owed to hospitals by patients who were simply unwilling to pay.

On average, hospitals responding to the survey provided charity care equal to about one per cent of their

Swimming Pool Auction Offers Unusual Items

Items from used appliances to personalized celebrity items will be on the block Saturday when the Thief River Falls swimming pool committee conducts its benefit auction beginning at 10 a.m. at the sports arena.

A large number of items has been donated to the auction, both new and used, and some of the offerings tend to be a bit unusual, according to Charlie Oakes, chairman of the swimming pool committee.

Among the items are a belt buckle and T-shirt from Kenny Rogers, autographed photos from Carol Burnett, Bob Hope, Ed McMahon, Richard Simmons and Johnny Carson; and black scarf and phonograph record from Wayne Newton. Also offered will be a signed poster of the Minnesota North Stars hockey team and signed pennant from the Minnesota Vikings football team.

Locally-donated items include furniture, tool boxes and tools, new and used television sets, a new waterbed, six months of Home Box Office viewing and a wide assortment of small and large items.

Members of the Thief River Falls Rotary club will assist in setting up goods for the auction and members of the Knights of Columbus will aid in the clean-up efforts. Lunch and refreshments will be served by Pennington county 4-H clubs with proceeds to be donated to the swimming pool committee. Auctioneering services will be donated by Auction-2-Sell.

There will be a $1 admission to the auction to add to the fund-raising event and public participation is encouraged by the sponsoring committee.

Community College-AVTI Merger Proposal Aired

Proposed merger on a state level of community colleges and area vocational-technical institutes received no major support at the biennial conference of community college advisory committees Friday and Saturday at Brooklyn Center.

Representing Northland community college at the meeting were Dr. Alex Easton, president; Dr. Allen Nichols, provost; and Marvin Lundin, vice chairman of the college advisory board.

Main speakers at the conference were Gerald Christenson, chancellor of the Minnesota community college system and Joe Graba, state director of the Minnesota board of vocational-technical education. Several round-table discussion sessions for advisory board members from throughout the state were conducted for discussion of concerns and interests.

In addressing a Friday evening banquet crowd, Chancellor Christenson emphasized the importance of the word "community" in the community college program. He reviewed how the system had developed from the first local junior colleges established at Rochester in 1915 and Hibbing in 1916 to creation of a state junior college system in 1963 and change to the community college concept in 1973.

Christenson said that the first question legislators asked him when he succeeded Dr. Phil Helland as chancellor in 1983 was, "Christenson, when are you going to start closing campuses?" He said there were expectations of enrollment declines as numbers of high school graduates decreased following the post-war baby boom.

But the community colleges adjusted their focus to meet community needs, he said, and demonstrated their importance to a rapidly expanding group of students.

"Forty-five per cent of students now enrolling at community colleges are over 25 years of age," he said. "Sixty per cent are female and 55 per cent are part-time students. High school graduates have declined 23 per cent in the last eight years but our campus enrollments continue to set records." He also noted that the mix of students makes budget funding more important because costs are higher to serve varying needs of a more diverse student population. "College is not only for the especially gifted or the educationally elite," he said. "We have to remember that 80 per cent of the people who will be in the labor force in the year 2000 are there now. They need continuing training and upgrading."

Graba stressed the strong points of the AVTI system which involves 34

NORTHLAND COMMUNITY COLLEGE president Dr. Alex Easton (left) and provost Dr. Al Nichols met with Clarence Harris, president of the Minnesota board for community colleges, at a conference of community college advisory committees Saturday in Brooklyn Center. A number of community college concerns were discussed at the conference, not the least of which was the legislative proposal for merger of the state's community college and post high school vocational-technical institute operations.

PROPOSED MERGER of the state's community college and area vocational-technical institute systems was discussed at a community college advisory committee conference Friday evening and Saturday in Brooklyn center. Marvin Lundin, vice chairman of the Northland community college advisory committee, is shown with Joe Graba (left), state director of the Minnesota board of vocational-technical education and Gerald Christenson, chancellor of the Minnesota community college system. Graba and Christenson both spoke during the biennial conference, stressing the need for and willingness to provide cooperation in accomplishing what is best for students at the state's community colleges and vocational-technical institutes.

Helen Samuelson Is 1st Merit Mother

Helen And Richard Samuelson

—Helen Samuelson of Crookston has been named Minnesota 1st Merit Mother of the Year. She and her husband, Richard, are the parents of Dr. Charles Samuelson of Thief River Falls, Robert and Roger Samuelson of Crookston and Lester of Albert Lea. Mrs. Samuelson was also a special mother to four of her grandchildren after the death of Robert's first wife.

Her church activities include president of the ladies' group (TLCW), and 20 years as a member of the wedding committee. She also served as 4-H club leader for Sunnyside 4-H club and was a 40-year member of South Lowell homemakers' club.

There will be an honor luncheon Saturday at 11:30 a.m. at the Merriott inn in Bloomington to honor Mrs. Samuelson and Mrs. Ray (Ruby) Reine of Crystal, who was named Mother of the Year. All friends and relatives are welcome to attend the event.

Mrs. Samuelson will also be honored at Trinity Lutheran church in Crookston April 12 with a reception from 2 to 5 p.m.

The following composition by Idella Samuelson of Thief River Falls is an indication of why Helen Samuelson was chosen 1st Merit Mother. It makes a refreshing statement about her from the viewpoint of a daughter-in-law. Idella is Mrs. Charles Samuelson.

"About Helen"

"After Charlie and I were married and settled in our home, my mother-in-law looked at me and said, 'Now, use your nice things.' I've often said that was the best piece of advice I have ever received. I think it was also the only piece of advice I was to receive from her.

"On one of my first visits to the Samuelson home I noticed a framed poem — 'To Helen' — it said. It was a lovely tribute from the 4-H club.

"There was also the newspaper clipping of their wedding that was among the pages of an old album. It referred to the 'sterling character' of the bride.

"That word 'sterling' seems to fit. Through the years I have watched this woman. Quietly and efficiently she managed her home. Never losing her cool, it seemed there wasn't anything she couldn't fix — even with a bobby pin!

"Many a bride from Trinity Lutheran church had her wedding plans made and carried out with the patient help of Helen Samuelson. The church women presented her with a plaque honoring her for her years of service on the wedding committee.

"Her church was always important. She served as president of the women's organization, on the altar guild, and spent hours in the kitchen preparing and serving the various functions of the church. It was her hobby and a labor of love.

"On her buffet is a small silver tray, 'Homemaker of the Year — 1984,' presented to her by her club, those who knew her so well.

"I'd often marvel at how she could turn out a big meal with seemingly no fuss. She's that 'salt of the earth' type of person, slow to anger, patient, kind, a friend to all, never gossipy, an optimist, a true Christian.

"Helen and Richard have four sons — all successful in their chosen fields.

"However, I think that the most outstanding feature of my mother-in-law, Helen Samuelson, is her role of Helen the grandmother! How the children loved to go to Grandma's house. They would bring their little suitcases and there they'd stay! What all they did, I really don't know, but they loved it there.

"Helen could take the crying baby and quiet it to sleep. She could humor the impish child to obedience — telling them she'd put them on the hang-a-bine! Hang-a-bine — how they'd laugh at that one! With a cookie jar full of cookies and a box of well-worn toys, Grandma's house was a fun place to be.

"As the years went by the grandkids grew up — college, then marriage, and now a few great-grandchildren.

"I notice no matter how short the time, they always stop at 702 Stuart for a visit, a word of encouragement, and a friendly smile. They're all Grandma's kids. In her they have a true friend and we all love her.

"They say that behind every successful man there is a woman. This can be reversed and certainly in this case there was always Grandpa. Married March 28, 1925, they have been a team for many wonderful years. What a rich heritage for us, their family."

Edythe Solberg And Heritage Design In Twin Cities Magazine

Project Heritage Design, Inc. of Thief River Falls, and Edythe Solberg, home sewer from Goodridge, were recently featured in an article in Twin Cities magazine. The magazine stated:

"Edythe Solberg lives on a farm 27 miles from Thief River Falls, Minnesota. When the farm economy became especially bleak several years ago, Solberg looked for ways to supplement the family's income. But getting a job in town meant paying for transportation, buying meals in town, and purchasing a work wardrobe. To Solberg, getting a job just wasn't worth the expense.

"Like many other women, Solberg found a solution in Project Heritage Design, Inc., a cottage industry in northern Minnesota. PHD produces a wide range of textile products, including duvet covers, quilts, and pillows. PHD was formed in 1983 and was initially funded by the Governor's Rural Development Council to provide low-income women with work they could do in their homes.

"Currently, about 400 women are sewing for PHD, 30 of them working regular hours, according to Linda Bentson, driector of sales and marketing. The products are sold in retail strores across the country. Scandia Down stores are the project's largest account.

"Although sales have been good so far, Bentson notes that the company is still operating with some grant monies. Bentson hopes to reach her goal of economic independence within two years.

"Solberg is pleased with her working arrangement with PHD. 'It's a very good opportunity for women in the home to earn some extra income,' she says. 'I love to sew. As long as I'm able to, I'll do it.'"

Positive Comments Aired At 1987 Project Hearing

avenue and Greenwood street, which will cost about $477,000 total with an assessment to abutting and benefiting property owners of about $28 per foot to recover about 25 per cent of the cost; wastewater system replacement and repair at approximately 20 locations throughout the city at a cost of about $48,200 (unassessed); water main replacement from Nora street to Greenwood street and a fire hydrant installation at Horace avenue at Fourth street for a total cost of about $65,000 (unassessed); and storm sewer repair at the Baken strteet outlet for a total cost of about $5,000 (unassessed).

Negative comments about the project were most noticeable from residents on Knight avenue and Zeh street. Residents in the area complained that the street did not appear to need repair except at a stop sign. Most added that if repairs were needed it was because of heavy trucks traveling on the streets to Hartz warehouse.

These streets are posted to prevent trucks from using them. However, Police Chief Ken Froschheiser said the signs and ordinances say "trucks" and do not define weight categories. If the law enforcement center was to attempt to enforce the ordinance it would apply to all trucks, whether they were school buses, semi-trailers or small pickups.

Mayor Carlson said he was sure those at Hartz were very level-headed and would take measures to try to prevent further heavy truck traffic in posted residential areas. He added that problems with buses traveling down streets near Knox school would be addressed also. He said he thought this topic would be a good item for the agenda of a joint meeting among school officials, city officials and county officials.

Other complaints lodged at the public hearing Tuesday night included requests for repairs to water lines that have shown consistent freezing problems; a request for more speed bumps around the Tindolph park drive; and a request for repairs to the boat landing near Third street bridge.

Jim Stewart of Stewart and Walker Engineering, consultants to the city, said there is no reason why repairs to the streets this year wo[illegible] add 20 years to their life expectancy, provided heavy truck traffic is reduced.

After the hearing was adjourned the council held a regular meeting. First order of business was to adopt the 1987 street project which was discussed at the public hearing. The motion was made by J.J. Womack and seconded by Don Barron to adopt the project, which was then unanimously adopted.

In other business the council approved special bills of $4,754.15; designated Northwest Capital Management as an investment source for city funds; added a delinquent utility bill of $1,118.22 to the list turned over to the Credit Bureau; and turned over a resolution pertaining to required traffic counts to the street committee. Next meeting of the city council will be April 7.

campuses under 30 administrative units in Minnesota and offers some 700 occupational programs in 200 different occupations to 32,000 full-time equivalent students. An extensive part-time program involves some 275,000 to 300,000 (with some duplication) students each year in training for specific occupations.

He said that if inflation was not considered, the average worker in 1987 is earning less than the equivalent worker in 1964. We have improved our general standard of living by adding a second income since that time — either by a spouse working or by a person working two jobs — and at present are maintaining the living standard by borrowing against the future.

Graba said that the nation's trade deficit can be balanced in only one of two ways — by reducing the standard of living or by increasing the productivity of the workforce. "Bangladesh has approximately an even trade balance," he said.

The state AVTI director said he had been pleased with the increased cooperation in post-secondary institutions, and that in his opinion the state governance structure needs to be changed. There is more to be gained by working together, he said, than to quibble over whether or not the system is broken, if it is broken which parts need repair, and then trying to decide whose responsibility it is to fix it.

"Change in an educational system is like trying to move a cemetery," he said. "You don't get much internal support for it."

Both Graba and Christenson said they didn't expect the current merger bill to be adopted by the legislature, but that community college and AVTI systems must act as professionals and be committed to what is best for the state and the people of the state.

"The key to the future is our ability to adapt to change," Christenson said.

NW Medical Center Among Hospitals With Charity Care

gross revenues — although three hospitals had charity care expenses amounting to more than three per cent of revenues.

Not included in the charity care figures is the $7 million in Hill-Burton care provided by hospitals in the survey. Hospitals are required to provide the care if they received construction grants under the program, which operated between 1946 and 1974. Northwest Medical center received Hill-Burton funds in its building projects during that time.

A number of hospitals — primarily in the economically troubled northeastern and southwestern regions of the state — indicated that they expect to see an increase in the demand for charity care in the future.

Lack of insurance or health care coverage was the reason most commonly given by hospitals for patients' use of charity care services. In addition, some patients had already used up their health care benefits — or were unable to pay their part of the bill, under health plans that require patients to share part of the cost.

Process Underway For Accreditation Of St. Bernard's

St. Bernard's school in Thief River Falls is in the process of applying for accreditation through the Minnesota Non-Public School Accrediting association (MNSAA) under the direction of the Minnesota Department of education.

The process involves a self-study of the school in which all areas of school life are examined. The school's philosophy, goals and objectives were revised and evaluated. Two curriculum areas were studied in depth along with several supplemental and special programs. Administrative, instructional, pupil services and physical plant areas were evaluated.

The students, school support staff, parents and members of St. Bernard's parish were surveyed and the results were compiled. Finally, the primary and intermediate teachers assessed their respective areas as to the strengths and areas of growth needed.

On April 9-10, a team consisting of teachers and administrators from other schools in northwestern Minnesota including local School District 564 will visit St. Bernard's school to validate the self-study, affirm what is being done and make recommendations for improvement. The visit will consist of the study of all pertinent documents, observation of classes, individual interviews with personnel, meetings with student representatives, meeting with primary (K-3) and intermediate (4-6) units and a final exit meeting with staff, parents and board, at which commendations and recommendations will be made.

After the self-study, a final report will be made to the MNSAA office with recommended actions. St. Bernard's school will be granted accredited status provided it meets the required standards of the MNSAA.

It was also reported at the meeting that Minnesota Beautiful had selected the historical society to be a recipient of paint needed for painting of several buildings and other items at the village this summer.

YOUR TIMES

by Debbie Erickson
Miss Thief River Falls 1986
Junior at Bethel College
In St. Paul

It is a tremendous thing to wear a crown and represent a city. One gains recognition and acknowledgement that could never be received if it were not for this honor. I have found how exciting it can be to meet so many people. In January, it was my privilege to be seated with one of our Minnesota state senators at a banquet. As Miss Webster, WI 1983, I was able to attend a banquet for Gov. Anthony Earl. Being able to meet these and others have added to the privilege of this position. Doors are open and opportunities become available that I had never dreamed of. For all of these things I am very grateful.

Wearing a crown and representing a city also helps one to grow as a person. Learning how to meet people with dignity becomes a must. One gains poise and confidence in dealing with new and, occasionally, unusual situations.

Sometimes, however, wearing a crown and representing a city can be a lonely task. I have a coach in St. Paul who helps me prepare for the Miss Minnesota pageant. One of the first questions she asked me was how many close friends I had. When I told her, she said, "Hang onto them, you'll need them."

Somehow, once one has a title, some people become afraid to associate with that individual. This is easily understood, but it does not make it easier. At times I feel that I must prove myself again to remind people that I am still the same person as before. Yes, I have gained new and wonderful experiences that might be hard to relate to, but the inner me has not changed.

In spite of the difficulties that sometimes arise, I feel that these situations have been some of the best learning experiences I have had. Being a Christian and knowing that I want the characteristics of the Bible — love, joy, peace, patience, gentleness, and self-control — evidenced in my life, help me to keep things in perspective and to keep striving toward a balanced life.

I am constantly reminded that if it were not for the city of Thief River Falls, the Women of Today and my sponsors, I would never have had the opportunity to wear a crown and represent a city and I thank you.

Week Of The Young Child Activities To Be Held In Area

Week of the young child is a national observance to emphasize the needs of young children, services available to them and the many people involved in the field of early childhood, according to Mary Ann Hodge, director of Discovery Place child care center.

"Young children are among the most precious commodities that the United States has today. These young children are our future and their early years, to a large part, will determine what kind of a future they have, and therefore the future of the Unites States," Hodge said.

"The formative years of their lives are the responsibility of every citizen. Our children today have a selves as they are; the love, security and encouragement from a security and encouragement from a stable home; health and nutrition to ensure proper growth; protection from physical and emotional dangers; and stimulation, guidance and love from the adults in their lives," she added.

During the Week off The Young Child, April 6-10, many activities will be happening. April 3 is grandparents day at Discovery Place. Grandparents come and visit with their grandchildren and have cookies and punch. Some grandparents live far away, so they call or send letters to Discovery Place for their grandchildren to read and share.

On April 9 there is a "Young Families Parenting Fair" at the Lincoln high school cafeteria in Thief River Falls from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. There will be displays, activities, toys, crafts, food and more. The concert is sponsored by the Thief River Falls Early Childhood Family Education program. Tickets can be bought at Larson Music company and at Discovery Place and ECFE of Thief River Falls. Children and students are $2 (infants and lap babies free) and adults are $3. Tickets are 50 cents more at the door. Both general admission and reserved seat tickets are available. The concert starts at 6 p.m.

April 8 the Northwest regional library in Thief River Falls is having a special grandparents day. During storytime, 10 to 10:30 a.m., children and their grandparents can enjoy stories, songs and finger plays. People from the Heritage community center will be there as adopted grandparents.

TRF Development Director Testifies To Subcommittee

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Don Stewart, community development director in Thief River Falls, testified Tuesday before a state senate subcommittee on economic development and housing. Stewart and several representatives for cities with competitive enterprise zone credit were before the committee in an attempt to save the program, which has not been scheduled for continuation under Governor Rudy Perpich's new tax reform proposal.

"We can, in the case of Thief River Falls, state with almost no qualification that without the enterprise zone program at least 400 of the 800 jobs created or retained in our community would now be located in South Dakota or Texas," Stewart told the subcommittee.

"What is good for the economic well-being of Thief River Falls affects many of our surrounding communities such as Goodridge, Oklee, Red Lake Falls, Newfolden and Middle River, many of whose citizens work in our city. We believe that we have a binding agreement with the State of Minnesota for credits totalling $1.75 million and that the city has performed to date in accordance with this agreement," Stewart said.

Stewart said time was very limited and this was the first discussion held by Senate members regarding the enterprise zone program and they limited the testimony. They allowed two people from the border zone cities and they were pitching for themselves, Stewart said.

Competitive zone cities were also allowed one speaker and the other cities caucused. Stewart was allowed to testify for the outstate competitive zone cities.

Stewart told the subcommittee that Thief River Falls, one of the competitive enterprise zone cities, was originally allocated $1.75 million in enterprise zone tax credits. The community development advisory board and the city council judiciously administered the program locally, working largely with existing established manufacturers, processors and wholesalers and to date have approved $884,000 worth of tax credits.

To date, Thief River Falls has made tentative commitments of $1.374 million to 14 participating businesses, leaving a balance, if the businesses perform as projected, of $377,000 in enterprise zone credits that the city of Thief River Falls would lose if the governor's proposal to sunset the program was approved.

Thief River Falls has one of the best records for success among enterprise zone cities. With the tax credits they have created over 450 full-time equivalent jobs and retained around 400 full-time equivalent positions.

Stewart told the subcommittee that "with the $884,000 of enterprise zone credits, which for the most part have been given in the form of new employee credits and exemption on state sales tax for fixed asset acquisition and for construction materials for expansion, businesses ranging in size from Land O'Lakes and Arctco, Incorporated (the new company manufacturing Arctic Cat snowmobiles) to a new three-person company which manufactures batteries, over 450 full-time equivalent jobs have been created and around 400 full-time equivalent positions retained.

"All of the 14 businesses except one, or possibly two, to which we have made credits available are healthy, viable, growing industries. These accomplishments have taken place in a community of 9,000 that five years ago had lost 1,800 jobs from the closure of one business," Stewart said.

Members of the Senate and House tax committees have recently received a cost benefit analysis survey, which was prepared by the state enterprise zone cities. The survey indicated that the State of Minnesota will receive in the form of additional individual income taxes and sales taxes from the new jobs created approximately $1.50 for every $1 of tax credit issued in the program.

Stewart said, in the case of Thif River Falls, the cost benefit analysis indicated that because of the manner in which they utilized the program, the state will receive $2 for every $1 given under the program. Stewart said Minnesota's return on investment would be significantly higher if taxes generated from the businesses, multiplier effects and savings on social costs from decreasing unemployment were included in the analysis.

Stewart stated, "The governor and his commissioner of revenue may argue that the enterprise zone program is lousy tax policy and that the answer to our economic development woes is in major tax reform. We would not argue that reform which would drop Minnesota out of the top 10 taxing states nationally is not the answer. We believe however, that if the economic development professionals on the department of energy and economic development staff could speak freely, off the record, they would substantiate the success of the enterprise zone program. The very fact that the program is seriously being considered at the federal level of government suggests its success," he concluded.

STEEL SHELVING seems virtually endless at the Arctco Inc., warehouse in Thief River Falls but it will be filled as parts arrive from Certified Parts corporation of Janesville, WI. The company installed nearly a quarter of a million dollars worth of shelving to handle the approximately 75 to 100 truckloads of parts and tooling equipment to be received over the next 45 days. Arctco purchased the Arctic Cat parts inventory from the Janesville firm to provide better service to its dealers and maintain control of as many phases of the dealer network as possible. Parts numbers handled by Arctco will increase from about 3,500 to 14,000 when the transfer is completed.

Estimated Tax Payment Is Due At IRS April 15

Internal Revenue service reminds taxpayers who are required to make federal estimated tax payments that the deadline for making the first installment for 1987 individual income taxes is April 15.

Taxpayers who are required to make estimated tax payments should send their installment to the IRS service center where they file their tax return. The installment should be submitted to IRS along with the April payment voucher that is contained in the Form 1040-ES estimated tax for individuals.

Taxpayers who need to obtain copies of the 1040-ES and payment vouchers can order them by calling the IRS toll free 800-424-3676.

Seek Comment On Backyard Septic System Rules

Public information meetings on the revision of Minnesota rules that cover the construction and maintenance of septic tanks and drainfields will be held around the state in April by the Minnesota Pollution Control agency (PMCA).

The Detroit Lakes meetings will be held in the city hall offices at 1025 Roosevelt Avenue at 1:30 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Thursday, April 9.

The rules (Minnesota Rules — Chapter 7080) need to be updated, the MPCA said, to incorporate technical advances and experience gained since the existing rules took effect in 1978. MPCA staff are scheduling the meetings in order to give the public a chance to participate in discussions on the rule revision.

Some of the items to be considered at the meetings will be suggestions for rule changes from the MPCA's individual sewage treatment systems advisory committee; distance between drainfields; levels of low requiring a state permit; mandatory adoption of Chapter 7080 by local governments; statewide certification of installers, inspectors and pumpers; and septage handling and disposal.

MPCA staff invite interested individuals or groups to participate in the public information meetings by speaking at any of the scheduled meetings (oral presentations should be less than 10 minutes); submitting written comments at any of the meetings; or mailing written comments by May 1, 1987 to Chapter 7080 Rule Revision, John Hensel, Municipal Wastewater Treatment Section, Division of Water Quality, Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, 520 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Formal public hearings will be scheduled when the MPCA completes its recommendations for the revision of Chapter 7080. MPCA staff anticipate the hearings will be held in late 1987 or early 1988. For more information on the rule revision, contact John Hensel at 612-296-7213 or Larry Zdon at 612-296-9274.

100,000 Acres May Be Soils Mapped In Marshall Co.

Soil survey progress in Marshall county has been slow. Last year the field work started and this season should see at least 100,000 acres spot mapped, according to Ralph Rundell of the Marshall-Beltrami SWCD.

The past year the soil scientists were pleased with the cooperation of farmers in getting permission to be on their farms. "They will be working on farms this year again so please continue to be cooperative when they ask to map your farm," Rundell said.

The soil survey contract calls for soils mapping every acre of Marshall county. To do this they will be on everyone's farm at some time. The conservation reserve program (CRP) and sodbuster-swampbuster provisions of the 1985 food security act requirements mean there is a need to know soils on a particular field and farm.

"It's too bad we started so late on the soil survey. We could have made good use of it!" Rundell added.

Sparby, Tunheim Sponsor Elk Bill In Legislature

Because of impossibility of the department of natural resources to carry out a legislative directive for capture and removal of the elk herd in the Grygla areas, state representatives Wally Sparby and Jim Tunheim have introduced a bill establishing an elk season and providing for compensation for crop damage.

According to Representatives Tunheim of Kennedy and Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls, the legislature should take action to "solve the problem once and for all."

The bill directs the commissioner of agriculture to compensate farmers whose crops are damaged or destroyed by elk. Farmers will be entitled to the target price of the damaged or destroyed crop plus adjustments for yield loss on an annual basis. It would be up to the commissioner of agriculture, working with the county extension agent, to determine whether the crop damage or destruction is caused by elk and if the value of the damage or destruction makes the farmer eligible for the program. Only crop damage from 1985 on will be compensated.

The bill also directs the department of natural resources to establish dates for a limited elk season, to set the number of licenses to be issued and the cost of a license. Owners of at least 160 acres of agricultural or grazing land in the elk hunting areas are to be given special consideration on 20 per cent of the licenses issued.

"Since the DNR failed in its attempts to remove the herd, and since a court ruling has determined that the animals would be too stressed by additional round-up attempts, another means for addressing the crop damage is necessary," Sparby said. "Rep. Tunheim and I believe this bill will solve the problem."

Spare Time Achievement

Bagley — For the past 10 years, Curtis Johnson of Badger has spent his spare time building an airplane. Now that he is finally able to fly the plane, he says he finds the flying boring compared to the excitement of building it. Johnson used a 100-horsepower, four-cylinder, Lycoming engine to build his Sports Trainer, increasing the fuel capacity to 28 gallons in order to have a flying ability of 450 miles. He worked in an empty dairy barn, which he had to insulate and heat with a gas heater in order to get the several coatings of dope lacquer and aluminum powder finish to dry.

Polish Refugee Reveals Difference In Lifestyle

by Sharon LaCoursiere
Times Reporter

This country was founded by people who had the courage to leave all that was dear and familiar to them; people who fled persecution, tyranny, poverty, to seek a land where they could be free to prosper, to plan, to hope. These people were refugees.

Maria Wisniewska is also a refugee. She came from Warsaw, Poland, where she was born and lived her life, to Hallock, with her son Paul and their cat Casper, to escape the restriction of a communist-controlled country and make a new life for her family in America. They came with the few clothes they could carry and very little money, leaving behind family, friends and security to seek freedom in an unknown country about which they knew very little.

After spending four months in a refugee camp in Italy, Maria was told that she had an American sponsor in St. Patrick's Catholic church of Hallock. When she was told that Hallock was to be her destination, Marie and her friends in the camp began to search a map for this place that would be her new home. They couldn't find it.

In the spirit of "make the best of it" that prevailed at the camp, her friends began to make up stories about little western towns they had seen in American movies — the girl sitting on her suitcase at the railroad station at the end of nowhere, waiting for the once-a-week train to come. Behind the girl were a post office, a bank, a little store and a saloon.

When Maria arrived in Hallock, July 25, 1985, she saw the post office...the bank...the little store. Needless to say, it took some explanation to relieve her hosts' concern when her first question was, "Where is the saloon?"

Maria, Paul and Casper left Poland March 18, 1985, on a "holiday" to Italy. She had been preparing for her holiday for several months, by trading and selling her possessions and scraping together as much American money as she could.

Her own passport was easily obtained, but the authorities would not give one to Paul, probably suspecting that the family would not return to Poland once they left together. To get his passport, Maria had to "pad-a-palm" with $1,500 hard-gotten American dollars. They arrived in Rome with $400 and their cat.

Their Italian holiday was spent in a refugee camp called Latina, just outside of Rome. When they weren't filling out various forms for agencies and organizations, the family explored the city, escaping from conditions in the camp as best they could.

A highlight of Maria's stay in Italy was speaking with the pope and shaking his hand. "But," she said, "I was so embarrassed because I started to cry. He asked if we were on holiday and I said, 'No, I am a refugee,' and I started to cry. Then he patted me on the head and said to be strong. Everything would turn out all right. He is such a wonderful man...he is a holy man."

Casper the cat spent the summer in a handbag, enjoying a Roman holiday. When the time came for the plane trip to America, Maria made sure he had the proper shots and papers from a veterinarian, and then settled him comfortably in the bag, dosed with sleeping tablets for the trip.

Sleeping tablets only last so long. Half-way through the trip, Casper awoke to find he needed to stretch his legs. Maria and Paul were having a meal at the time, captured behind little airplane dining tables on their seats. As Maria struggled to extricate herself from the confines of the seat after feeling the cat's friendly rub on the way out, Casper was enjoying a leisurely stroll down the center aisle, drawing exclamations of surprise from the other passengers. As quickly as she could, Maria scooped him up, popped him back into the bag, and administered another sleeping tablet.

This pill lasted until they were in front of the immigration officer at Kennedy Airport in New York. Disgruntled at all this enforced cat napping, Casper stretched his paw out of the bag and loudly gave voice to his disapproval. Maria's heart sank as she foresaw instant deportation or jail. Imagine her relief when the officer just laughed and said, "So, Kitty wants to live in America, too?" and passed them through.

Maria was a journalist in Warsaw. She began her career writing sports stories and then moved on to general news coverage and she also wrote for magazines. At times she worked at three jobs to keep her family in a middle class subsistence.

The economy of Poland is based on a thriving black-market system that is secretly endorsed by the Communist-controlled government. Rationing of food limits purchase of basic necessities, such as flour margarine, meat, sugar, soap. And stores simply do not have items to sell, even if people have the money to spend. So nearly everyone finds other places to buy what they want, paying many times more than what the items are worth.

The comic image of Polish people standing in long lines before a store is not just a joke. In Poland there are very few department stores, as we know them. Lining the streets, little stores each sell specific items: one bread, one meat, one cheese, etc. In order to prepare a meal for her family, the Polish homemaker may have to visit five or six stores to obtain everything she needs — if the stores have anything to sell.

When word is passed that a store has a certain item for sale, everyone who can get away from their job immediately rushes to that store. Men and women carry shopping bags and briefcases and plenty of money to be ready for these shopping frenzies, often buying more of the item than they can possibly use because they know that they can sell or trade with friends for other necessities.

Maria's profession made it easier for her to shop, and she often walked the few blocks from her apartment to her first job so that she could take advantage of early morning commodities and the shorter lines. Maria said her family had little trouble in obtaining food, even though it was rationed. What couldn't be found in the shops was always available through the black market. There were always some items that were just unobtainable, like bananas. When they left Poland, Paul said the one thing he wanted most of all was to eat his fill of bananas.

Paul is a sophomore at the Hallock high school and Maria attends school, too, taking a journalism class at Northland community college. Paul is planning to attend college some day, and Maria will continue with courses at Northland until he graduates. She would like to find a job, but hasn't had much luck in Hallock.

She said people in Hallock are very friendly and kind, "like a big family." And the town itself is very nice, "But I have never before lived in a small town. This is hard for me." And she is ready to get back to work. After the hustle and bustle of work in Poland, this time is like a holiday, but she said, "This is not for me. This is too long a vacation."

Maria is planning for the future. After Paul graduates, she hopes to be able to move to a bigger city where she can find work. She would like to write again, or would like to own her own shop. She will continue to bide her time with classes and making a home for Paul, learning all she can about her new country.

She also plans to become an American citizen. To do this, she will have to officially give up her Polish citizenship in a legal procedure almost like a divorce. But by this procedure she would be able to some day return to see her parents, brother, friends and her "sweet Warsaw" once more.

Require Children Five And Older To Get S.S. Numbers

Children age five or older must get social security numbers to be listed on federal tax returns for the year ending Dec. 31, 1987, the district manager of the Grand Forks social security office has announced.

The change, dictated by the tax reform act of 1986, means that social security offices face an increased workload in signing up the dependents, district manager Howard Kossover said.

Deadline for signing up the dependents isn't until April 15, 1988. The numbers are not needed for 1986 tax-year returns due in April, but Kossover wants to alert the public now so the work can be done gradually. "We much prefer for people not to wait until the last second," Kossover said.

More than nine million new numbers are expected to be issued, according to the social security administration. Children who already have numbers will not need to re-apply.

To apply, a parent needs the child's original birth certificate plus an additional proof of identity for the child. The latter might consist of a school ID card, a vaccination certificate, or a hospital or clinic record. Parents must also have identification for themselves. There is no charge to apply.

Currently children may get a social security number if a savings account is started in their name or if they are military dependents. The change to having a child's social security number on the tax return is an IRS, not social security, requirement, Kossover said. Until now, a social security number was not required until an individual started to work.

Applications for the new numbers are available at post offices and at any social security office. People are encouraged to apply by mail to the Grand Forks office at P.O. Box 1678, Grand Forks ND 58206. For more information or to get an application phone toll-free in Minnesota 1-800-462-5360.

Say Tax Relief On Farm Property Is Major Concern

Farm property tax relief is the number one priority issue for the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation (MFBF) in 1987, president Merlyn Lokensgard told a House tax committee.

Lokensgard told the property tax division of the House tax committee that the concern for tax relief is shared by other farm groups in Minnesota. "We have met previously and agreed that our primary effort during the 1987 legislative session should be farm property tax relief," he said.

The St. Peter area farmer distributed figures comparing his farm property taxes with the market value of his farmland throughout the past several years. Although property taxes have dropped as land values have declined, the amount of the tax decline has not kept pace with the drop in land values.

"It is easy for you to see that the market value of my farm has dropped faster than my farm property taxes," he pointed out. "This same problem confronts many of our members from other parts of the state, and they cannot continue with this great burden."

The farm organization is working during this legislative session to ensure that farmers do not pay a disproportionate share of property taxes as compared with ther classes of property.

"Right now, I believe farmers pay more than their share of real estate taxes, as we compare ourselves with urban, commercial and industrial taxes, and we believe that adjustments — such as removal of the school maintenance levy — should be made. The children who attend schools come from the houses, not the farmland," he said.

Farmers also spend a considerable amount of money on sales tax for supplies and certain kinds of equipment to keep their farms operating, he mentioned.

Another important goal of the Farm Bureau during the 1987 session is to urge the legislature to "quit holding the motor vehicle excise tax (MVET) as hostage."

"This $220 million annual fund, collected from the sale of cars and trucks, belongs in the state highway fund, not the general fund," Lokensgard said. "The legislature made the decision in 1981 to gradually transfer these dollars but has acted to delay the transfer every session since, except one."

The funding transfer is crucial to farmers who rely heavily on state highways to move farm products and supplies, the Farm Bureau leader said.

Medical Center Recognized For Energy Saving

Northwest Medical center in Thief River Falls was recently honored for its entry in the 10th annual energy saver's award of excellence competition, started 10 years ago to recognize Minnesota employers who have implemented energy saving programs.

The entries serve as an information exchange about innovative and effective programs of wise energy use. The competition is co-sponsored by the department of energy and economic development and Northern Natural Gas company and supported by a number of professional organizations.

A wide variety of ways to save energy was looked at in this competition. Northwest Medical center was recognized in the energy usage identification lighting, power demand control, building retrofit and alternative energy source categories. By using alternative fuel, Northwest Medical center is helping to support a new industry in this city. The medical center converted its 300 horsepower boiler to burn a fuel made out of garbage and manufactured by Future Fuel Inc. of Thief River Falls. The medical center also uses all the burnable trash generated in the hospital as an alternative fuel source.

Energy conservation is for everyone, the contest sponsors note. For America, the time is now to plan for future energy requirements. Energy saving ideas can hold direct and immediate benefits for small rural schools as well as a corporate giant. In addition, these institutions are leading the way as America maps its energy strategy to meet the needs of generations to come.

Quin County CHS Will Have Special Funding Available

Nelson Earns Post-Season Honor

Quin County community health services has been notified that the Minnesota department of health will have special funds available for the 1988-89 biennium in the following grant programs: Special supplemental food program for women, infants and children (WIC); family planning; maternal and child health; nonsmoking and health; Native American health; and emergency medical services (EMS) special projects.

Of these the maternal and child health, nonsmoking, and Native American grants must be submitted to the community health service agency and WIC, FPSP and EMS may be submitted either through the CHS or directly to the department of health.

Maternal and child health special project funds are by state law targeted to serve high-risk and low-income (200 per cent of poverty) persons. The law establishes three program priorities: Improved Pregnancy outcome program, family planning program, and handicapped or chronically ill children's program.

Public and non-profit agencies in Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake or Roseau Counties may apply to Quin County CHS for funding.

Smoking continues to be the largest preventable cause of death and disability in the United States and in Minnesota.

Purpose of the nonsmoking and health special project grants is to reduce smoking prevalence in Minnesota. A limited number of projects will be funded on a competitive basis. The funds are earmarked for projects having either (1) community-wide or (2) state-wide scope. Only local boards of health are eligible to apply for grants for community-wide projects. Non-profit and public agencies may submit proposals to Quin County community health services.

The Native American health grant is to assist local agencies in establishing or subsidizing clinic facilities and services to provide health care for American Indians who have not established county of residency, who do not reside on Indian land, who are members of an organized tribe, band or other group of aboriginal people of the United States having a treaty relationship with the federal government and who are regarded as Native Americans by the group in which they claim membership. Eligible applicants are local boards of health. Non-profit and public agencies may submit proposals to the Quin County community health services.

Purpose of the emergency medical service special project is the ultimate reduction of death and disability due to medical emergencies. The department of health intends to fund projects which have potential statewide impact on Minnesota's EMS system. Notices of intent to apply for EMS grants should specify whether the proposal is to be in injury control or in EMS system improvement. Community health service agencies, organization, institutions and individuals are eligible to apply. Application may be made directly to Minnesota department of health or through Quin County CHS.

Any organization interested in applying for funds must submit a notice of intent to: Viola L. Rud, administrator, Quin County Community Health Services, Box 248, Newfolden, MN. 56738 no later than 4:30 p.m. Friday, May 1.

Notice of intent must include the following information: Name of applicant organization; type of organization; name, address and telephone number of a contact person; name of grant program(s)

(proposed geographic area and-or special population of project for WIC), (injury control or general EMS improvement for EMS); maximum funds requested for two-year period; and short description of proposed project.

Any grant application direct to Minnesota department of health must have a letter of intent submitted before April 24. Instructions may be requested from MDH or Quin County CHS.

Grant application receipt deadlines are no later than 4:30 p.m. on the following dates: WIC, May 15; family planning special project, July 3; maternal and child health special project, August 20; nonsmoking and health, August 20; Native American health, August 15; and emergency medical services, June 1.

More information is available through Quin County CHS, phone 874-7845.

Say Genetic Weak Points Are Targets For Cancer Agents

Genes have weak points that are targets for many cancer-causing agents, University of Minnesota researchers have found.

"This new finding could lead to the development of a sensitive and inexpensive test that would screen compounds used in food, drugs, industry and agriculture," said Dr. Jorge J. Yunis, laboratory medicine and pathology professor. "Each year, thousands of new compounds are manufactured and some need to be screened because they could be carcinogenic."

Yunis and his colleagues found that the 16 different mutagens and carcinogens used in their study break genes at weak points along chromosomes. The study was reported in the premiere issue of "Oncogene," published in England by the Macmillan Press, which also publishes the journal "Nature."

The cancer-causing agents used in the experiments included those found in tobacco smoke, industrial solvents like benzene and carbon tetrachloride, chemotherapy treatments and radiation like that released from the damaged nuclear reactors at Three Mile Island and Chernobyl.

Yunis and technologists Lee Soreng and Ann Bowe took blood samples from eight healthy adults, made 16 separate cultures from each sample and treated each culture with a different mutagenic agent. Chemicals that don't attack genes were used as controls and produced no chromosome breaks, compared to hundreds of breaks for compounds toxic to genes.

The researchers discovered that in vitro, or test tube, chromosomes damaged by these agents showed defects microscopically identical to those seen in actual cancer cells. One such defect was a missing piece of chromosome number three found in some patients with lung cancer and a history of smoking. Another was a missing piece of chromosome number seven known to occur in people who are exposed to solvents or radiation in their work and later develop leukemia.

Each normal human cell has 23 pairs of chromosomes.

Different types of chemicals produced different breakage patterns at the weak points and that may help explain why they produce certain types of cancer, Yunis said.

In a previous study, Yunis found that many weak points, also called fragile sites, are at the same places where chromosomes break cancer cells where cancer genes, or oncogenes, are located on the chromosomes.

The most reliable screening test now available measures genetic damage by chemicals to bacterial rather than human cells and detects gene mutation but not chromosome defects. Yunis and his colleagues reported in the New England Journal of Medicine in January that the common types of human cancer may have multiple specific chromosome defects.

Yunis predicts that "the chromosome fragile site test will be widely used along with the bacterial test to screen potential carcinogens."

Testing a new compound for its ability to produce fragile sites could be completed in two days and cost approximately $200 once a test is refined, he said.

MINNESOTA HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

by Rep. Wallace Sparby
District 1B

For those of you who are trying to figure out how to finance your education next year, this might be good news. A new scholarship fund could be established under a bill that is now moving through the Minnesota House of Representatives.

The chairman of the House higher education committee has proposed investing some money from a special fund that is used for endowing professional chairs and using the investment income to fund student scholarships instead.

Under current law, part of the state's income from taconite taxes — $75 million — goes into a fund at the University of Minnesota that creates endowed professor's chairs within the university system. Endowed chairs were established as a device to attract teachers with special skills who work in the private sector. The fund provides money for salaries and other benefits for people in private business or practice as incentive to leave their jobs temporarily and teach for a year.

This bill answers two concerns of some legislators: that student scholarship money is getting scarce, and that the university's main campus in Minneapolis gets the lion's share of the endowed chairs. So this bill would take $15 million of the $75 million and invest it, and use the income for scholarships exclusively for all students in state higher education institutions. Students on the main University of Minnesota campus are excluded. The fund is expected to generate about 1.2 million, which could provide scholarships worth $2,000 for 600 students.

The bill was approved by the House higher education committee.

Many of us recognize that attracting highly qualified instructors who are well-paid in the private sector is difficult. We know they bring special information and skills to students. Providing endowed chairs is a good way to lure them from the private sector for a year so they can share their knowledge and experience with students.

But I think we can accomplish another important goal, too. I don't see anything wrong with taking a fraction of that money and dedicating it to the most important people in our state college system — the students.

CAPITOL COMMENTARY

by LeRoy Stumpf
State Senator — District 1

With the ever-decreasing opportunities in family farming, rural Minnesotans have to look to other alternatives for their livelihood. That's especially true of our young people. And, given all the advances in the communication and technology industries in recent years, higher education has become a near-necessity for the job market.

Yet, as higher education has become more important, it has also become more expensive. At the same time — and as a result of the farm crisis in rural Minnesota — the resources of rural Minnesotans to pay for higher education have become scarce.

Historically, the federal government has taken the main responsibilty for providing financial aid to students so that no one is deprived of a college education because of financial need. However, in attempting to reduce the budget deficit, the federal government has made substantial cuts in student financial aid.

Because of Minnesota's commitment to providing equal access to quality education for everyone, our state government is now providing more financial aid than the federal government. To continue this commitment, Governor Perpich has announced that he plans to restore the $28 million for student financial aid that had been cut from his original budget.

The changing financial needs of college students, as well as the changing roles played by the state and federal governments in helping out with those needs, appear to be statewide trends that include institutions like Northland community college and Bemidji state university. And specific information provided by Concordia college in Moorhead bears this out.

The enrollment by rural students at Concordia for 1986-87 was 61 per cent. Between 1985 and 1986, the average annual parents' income declined from $28,701 to $28,536, and the average parents' contribution for one year of college declined from $2,638 to $2,500. This is the first time in Concordia's history that the parents' contribution has declined, even though student budgets increased from $8,950 to $9,500 per year.

Federal contributions to Concordia for grants totaled $1,305,913 in 1985-86, and it is estimated that those contributions will decline to $1,214,411 for 1986-87. On the other hand, state contributions for 1985-86 totaled $1,421,043 and are expected to increase to $1.8 million for 1986-87. Therefore, not only does Minnesota state government already contribute more for student financial aid than the federal government, the difference is rapidly escalating.

Given Minnesota's tough budget constraints, the fact that we continue to provide for our students is a strong indication of our continuing commitment to educational opportunities for all Minnesotans.

If you have questions or comments, please call me at (612) 296-8660 or write 306 State Capitol St. Paul, MN 55155.

VA Guarantees Its 12 Millionth Home Loan This March

Veterans administration is guaranteeing its 12 millionth home loan this month. St. Paul VA regional office director Morris Nooner Jr., who administers the home loan guaranty program throughout Minnesota as well as North Dakota and South Dakota, calls it "one of the most significant veterans benefits ever, for the entire nation as well as veterans."

It began in 1944, when President Franklin Roosevelt signed the serviceman's readjustment act, a measure designed to help returning World War II veterans re-enter and adjust to civilian life.

It set off the biggest home construction boom in history. Since then, the VA has backed home loans for veterans totaling more than $275 billion.

"In Minnesota alone, more than 264,643 home loans have been guaranteed by the VA since the end of World War II and it is still going strong," Nooner said.

The first guaranty was for an army veteran's purchase of a home in Washington, D.C., on Nov. 17, 1944. Within four years, one million home loans had been guaranteed.

This month, VA guaranteed the 12-millionth "GI Home Loan" in Phoenix, AZ, for a young post-Vietnam era army veteran.

The VA does not make loans directly to veterans, Nooner said. It guarantees the lender against loss of up to 60 per cent of the loan, with a maximum guaranty of $27,500. For many lenders, this government guaranty is enough to assure low interest rates and no down payment. In January, VA lowered its maximum home loan interest rate to 8.5 per cent, the lowest since February of 1978. This latest trend in falling interest rates is the largest and longest sustained drop in the 43-year history of the VA home loan program, he said.

Veterans interested in learning more about their loan guaranty eligiblity can phone the St. Paul VA regional office toll-free at 1-800-692-2121.

Rules For Farm Workers' Wages Are Available

Minnesota department of labor and industry, labor standards division, has adopted rules (effective March 29) defining agriculture, farming unit or operation and salary for purposes of the Minnesota fair labor standards act. An agricultural worker is exempt from the minimum wage and overtime regulations of the Minnesota fair labor standards act, provided the worker meets one of the following conditions:

(a) The worker is one of two or fewer specified workers employed at any given time and is paid on a salary basis (not hourly or piece rate), or

(b) The worker is paid a salary (not hourly or piece rate) in excess of $246.23 per week, or

(c) The worker is under the age of 18 (other than a field hand working with a parent or guardian).

If an agricultural worker does not meet one of the above conditions, he or she must be paid the state minimum wage of $3.35 an hour for up to 48 hours per week and one and one-half times the minimum wage for each hour of overtime after 48 hours per week.

To obtain a copy of the rules that apply to farm worker, contact the labor standards division of the Minnesota Department of Labor and Industry, 444 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101, phone (612) 296-2282.

NORTHERN PRAIRIE ARTISTS association, represented by Thelma Terrian, president, received a check for $500 from the Eagles club, represented by Melvin Johnson, president. The funds are from the charitable gambling fund at the club. The money will be used to bring Marv Espe and Russel Norberg to Thief River Falls to conduct two separate seminars. The seminar to be conducted by Espe is tentatively planned for May 8 and 9 and Norberg's seminar is tentatively planned for August 14 and 15. Each artist will conduct three sessions. Each session will cost $5 for members and $8 for non-members. Thelma said the organization was very excited to have the money to bring such fine artists to Thief River Falls.

NORTHWEST REGIONAL LIBRARY in Thief River Falls recently received a new computer purchased from a donation from the L.B. Hartz Foundation. The foundation donated $10,000 to the Northwest regional library system to purchase new computers. The microcomputers are IBM PCs with 256K memory. The public will have access to the new computer, which comes equipped with a printer. Appointments are necessary, however. Library staff pictured with the new computer, which was assembled Tuesday afternoon are (from left) Jean Heinrichs, Pat Rustad and Deana Swanson.

Eligible applicants are public and not-for-profit agencies conducting their activities in a 12-county area of northwestern Minnesota.

Organizations interested in submitting grant requests are invited to attend one of seven information meetings. Since December, the NWMIF board has awarded $556,000 in grants to 32 organizations that address social and economic problems.

During information meetings NWMIF staff will discuss the board's future funding priorities and will be available to meet with prospective applicants after the information sessions.

Public meetings for this area are as follows,

Tuesday, April 7 — 10 a.m., Karlstad community center, 2 p.m., Warroad city hall;

Thursday, April 9 — 10 a.m., Red Lake Falls city hall; 2 p.m., Fertile community center,

Friday, April 10 — 10 a.m., East Grand Forks city hall council chambers.

A private organization, the Initiative Fund is particularly interested in projects that show innovation, foster regional cooperation and leverage other funding sources. Deadline for submitting grant proposals is May 5, 1987. Prospective applicants are encouraged to contact NWMIF staff before submitting their grant applications.

Projects that will be considered by the NWMIF board in June must meet one of two funding strategies:

(1) Respond to the unique needs of Northwest Minnesota, particularly to needs of farm families, by providing services not sufficiently available through regular providers, or

(2) Provide supplemental assistance to human service providers who can demonstrate their unique role in meeting critical human services needs.

For further information, contact the Bemidji office at 759-2057 or the Crookston office at 281-6528. The 12-county area served by the NWMIF consists of Beltrami, Clearwater, Hubbard, Kittson, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

Nelson Named Prowlers' MVP

Chris Nelson, a 6-4 junior, was named the Most Valuable Player Award winner as the Thief River Falls boys high school basketball team closed out its 1986-87 season with the Prowlers' annual post-season banquet Tuesday.

Nelson was also recognized as the team's top rebounder this winter.

Jarrod Kalsnes, a 6-2 senior, was another double-award winner. He was presented with the varisty Inspirational Award, and was honored as the team's top free throw percentage shooter.

Other individual awards went to senior Griffin Newland, presented with the Defense Award; junior Joel Swanson, selected as the Most Improved Player Award winner; Ryan Walseth, named the Most Valuable Player Award winner among the sophomores; and Jason Kempert, picked as the Inspirational Award winners among the freshmen.

Athletic letters were presented by head coach Tom Hunt to seniors Jon Erickson, Tom Knoff, Quincy Lofberg, Todd Solsten, Brian Stark, Kalsnes, and Newland; juniors Chris Bjorgaard, Todd Hornseth, Jason Tangquist, Nelson, and Swanson; sophomores Todd Brandon, Dean DuChamp, Todd Prickett, and Walseth; plus student managers Jennifer Lane and Shelly Vedbraaten.

Newland and Kalsnes served as 1986-87 Thief River Falls co-captains, but the Prowlers did not vote on their successors.

Rest of the squad included Rick Eidsness and Mike Bjelland of Moorhead, James Landsem of Detroit Lakes, and Chip Sauer of Fergus Falls.

Plummer, Oklee Join Forces In Basketball

Mike Lundgren Sports Editor

Plummer and Oklee school boards voted Thursday to apply to the Minnesota State High School League for cooperative sponsorship of boys and girls high school basketball programs in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Their application was submitted to the MSHSL in time to beat today's April 1 deadline.

Although the framework has been set for the joint venture, Plummer athletic director Gary Brantl said there are still a ton of things to do before the merger is completed. Scheduling is already underway, but the two schools must come up with a coaching staff for the boys and girls, and will have to work out such matters as team name and a team nickname, and must iron out administrative-type details.

Plummer and Oklee have been talking cooperative venture for some time, with the subject debated at school board meetings and community meetings at both sites. But it's nothing new. Plummer nad Oklee have been wrestling partners the past five years under the coaching of Brantl and Charles Bishop of Oklee.

Together Plummer and Oklee have put together some pretty good teams, pointed out Brantl. The Mustangs have been competitive team-wise, and they've had four Class A state tournament individual champions during their five-year marriage, which has to be renewed every two years with the MSHSL office in Anoka.

Without the cooperative program wrestling wouldn't exist at the schools, indicated Brantl.

And that's why they're getting together in basketball. Plummer had an outstanding girls team in 1986-87, going 20-2 and winning a District 31A tournament title for the first time. The Cardinals would probably be competitive again next year. But Oklee's prospects didn't look as bright because of declining enrollment figures that eliminated the Bobcats' junior varisty program this year and threatened their varsity program in 1987-88.

"Our big concern was Oklee girls basketball," explained Brantl. "We wanted to provide those girls with an opportunity to participate." And to be honest, he said, Plummer's future numbers weren't that impressive, either.

It wasn't quite as crucial right now, but the numbers in the boys programs presented the same type of future problems.

A Plummer-Oklee cooperative in football has been mentioned in the past, and the subject was brought up again, acknowledged Brantl, and it that would occur in the not-to-distant future — then volleyball would probably follow. "It's coming, no question," said Brantl.

"I see this basketball cooperative as a real opportunity for our students to increase their basketball skills and competitiveness," pointed out Plummer Superintendent James Christianson, whose office sent out the official notice of the planned venture.

The new cooperative programs petitioned the MSHSL for membership into District 30A. Oklee is a current District 30A member, but Plummer is grouped in District 31A. Geographically, District 30A membership was more logical, said Brantl.

School officials have also discussed sharing classes between Plummer and Oklee schools in an attempt to offer more opportunities for the juniors and seniors in course offerings. By cooperating and sharing, say officials, it would be possible to double the opportunities for the students.

Brainerd CC Drops Hockey

Brainerd Community College officials have announced that the Red Raiders have dropped their hockey program.

School officials cited the inability to attract quality hockey players as the reason for dropping the program after just a two-year run. Brainerd won just one game in those two seasons using mostly high school products from Brainerd and Crosby-Ironton.

Brainerd's decision to drop the sport will leave the Minnesota Community College Conference with eight hockey-playing members next winter — all located in northwestern or northeastern Minnesota: Northland in Thief River Falls, University of Minnesota-Crookston, Itasca in Grand Rapids, Mesabi in Virginia, Hibbing, Rainy River in International Falls, Fergus Falls, and Vermilion in Ely.

Fergus Falls plans to have a team on the ice in 1987-88 even though the Spartans suspended its hockey program near the end of the 1986-87 season because of a reported split between the players and coaches.

Brainerd will offer wrestling in place of hockey next year.

TRF Boys Compete At MSU Indoor Meet . . .

Track Season Starts Friday

Thief River Falls boys will open their 1987 high school track season Friday by participating in the annual Shocky Strand Indoor Invitational at Moorhead State University. The meet starts at 4:30 p.m.

Rest of the squad includes senior Joe Drevlow; juniors Shayne Anderson and Brian Moyer; sophomores Rick Looker, Chad Numedahl, Shawn Heinze, and Mike Fisher; along with freshmen Luke Soine and Paul Kezar.

Thief River Falls coach Tim Olson hoped for a bigger turnout this spring, but he's pleased with the quality of the performers who are on hand. "We won't blow anybody away," he admitted, "but we'll do our best to score some points. It's going to be fun finding out just how these kids can do."

There's little doubt about how somenone like Brandt will do. He'll be one of the top sprinters in Region 8AA this spring after a banner junior season when he was a third place finisher in the Region 8AA meet 100-meter dash in 11.47 seconds, and was sixth in the 200-meter dash in 23.5. He was nosed out for a state meet berth by a fraction of a second in the 100.

"Paul will be in the hunt this year," said Olson about his sprinter's chances in Region 8AA. "We'll have him ready."

Stark is expected to be a strong point-producer in the hurdles this spring. "Brian came a long ways last year," explained Olson. "He's just now starting to enjoy running hurdles; last year we had to talk him into it."

Christianson is expected to be a solid performer in the long jump; Grove should fare well in the 400 meters, while Anderson, Sisler, and Rondorf provide the Prowlers with long distance depth.

Lack of overall team depth, though, will cost the Prowlers points when they try to build relay teams.

Thief River Falls' second start of the 1987 season will be Thursday, April 9, at the Northwest Indoor in Crookston's Winter Shows Building.

DNR Announces '86 Record Fish Award Winner For State Waters

At a recent ceremony at the Department of Natural Resources office in St. Paul, nine Minnesota anglers were awarded certificates by Commissioner Joe Alexander for catching record fish in eight categories during the 1986 fishing season. The most notable award went to a Maple Grove man who caught a world record 92-pound, 4-ounce sturgeon in the Kettle River last September.

DNR reported that nine records fell, in eight species categories, including record splake, sturgeon, and largemouth bass. With the growing public interest in record fish caught in the state, the DNR decided in 1982 to initiate a formal procedure for claiming fish-catching records.

"Our intent is to encourage recreational fishing as a quality sport and not merely as a meat-gathering enterprise," said DNR Commissioner Joe Alexander in presenting the awards. "This is not only an excellent opportunity to show the public what sizes of fish were caught in the state last year, but more importantly it allows us to show the angling public the kind of species' diversity that exists and the range of angling opportunities in Minnesota."

Alexander noted that among the nine records caught were: an 8-pound, 9.5-ounce largemouth bass; a 10-pound, 4.3-ounce splake; a 92-pound, 4-ounce lake sturgeon; a 3-pound, 6-ounce yellow bullhead; a 3-pound, 7.5-ounce quillback; a 3-pound, 2-ounce longnose sucker; a 2-pound, .5-ounce menominee (round) whitefish; and a 10-pound, 14.5-ounce greater redhorse.

Following is a listing of the record fish taken last year by angler:

+James DeOtis, Maple Grove — 92-pound, 4-ounce lake sturgeon in the Kettle River on Sept. 11, 1986.

+Daniel Etlick, Marble — 10-pound, 14.5-ounce greater redhorse in the Prairie River on May 24, 1986.

+Joel Anderson, Little Canada — 3-pound, 2-ounce longnose sucker in Rainy River on April 11, 1986.

+ Ronald Goldbeck, Hastings — 3-pound, 7.5-ounce quillback Carpsucker in the Mississippi River on April 23, 1986.

+ Jeremy Liebig, Tofte — 2-pound, .5-ounce menominee whitefish in Lake Superior on May 12, 1986.

+ David Leitten, Burnsville — 10-pound, 4.3-ounce splake in Birch Lake in May 19, 1986.

+ James Abers, Osakis — 3-pound, 6-ounce yellow bullhead in Osakis Lake on August 16, 1986.

+ Gabriel Wright, Buffalo — 8-pound, 4-ounce largemouth bass in Kego Lake on August 30, 1986.

+ Timothy Kirsch, Albert Lea — 8-pound, 9.5-ounce largemouth bass in Fountain Lake on Sept. 6, 1986.

DNR has an "Application For Minnesota State Record Fish" available which anglers are required to use in order to register for a record fish taken in Minnesota waters. The fish must be positively identified by a DNR fisheries manager or biologist, and weighed on a scale certified by the State Public Service Department, Weights and Measures Division.

Other instructions are included on the application which can be picked up at any DNR Fisheries office in the state or by writing to the department at: 500 Lafayette Road, St. Paul, MN 55155-4012.

Minnesota State High School League Task Force studying non-school athletic and training and summer camp and clinic rules has presented its findings to the League's Board of Directors.

Forty-member task force, which was established last April, completed its study after holding 16 statewide hearings, conducting student interviews, soliciting oral testimony, and interviewing officials from other state associations.

Members of the Task Force included superintendents, principals, athletic directors, school board members, coaches, state legislators and representatives of the public sector from all geographical areas of the state.

Following is a summary of the proposed changes:

Proposal 1. During the summer, there shall be no limitation on the number of students from any one school who wish to participate on a non-school sponsored team. (The current rules that govern coaches of sophomore, B squad, junior varsity or varsity teams will not change.)

Proposal 2. Summer, for all students, shall be defined as the day following the fourth Friday in May through Labor Day. A waiver process is provided for schools to use their sophomore, B squad, junior varsity or varsity coaches during the summer for boys and girls tennis, boys and girls gymnastics, boys and girls swimming, baseball and softball. The current waiver rule will continue through the summer of 1987, and a new waiver application will become effective for the summer of 1988.

Proposal 3. Prior to and following the high school sport season, students shall be allowed to participate on a non-school sponsored teams.

A student may not participate on a non-school team in an athletic activity which is sponsored by the MSHSL during the time the student is a member of any sophomore, B squad, junior varisty or varsity team in that student's school.

Membership on non-school teams, during the school year, shall be limited as follows: baseball — five players; basketball — three players; football — seven players, including four linemen and three backs; volleyball — four players; hockey — four players, plus goalie; soccer — seven players; and softball — five players.

Team and individual sport athletes may receive training through private lessons from people who are not members of the sophomore, B squad, junior varsity or varsity coaching staff from the student's school in that sport.

Proposal 4. A salaried or non-salaried member of the sophomore, B squad, junior varsity or varsity coaching staff in a sport may not own, organize, administer, direct or coach the camp or clinic that is attended by players from the coach's school in that sport.

Proposal 5. A system of fines shall be imposed for schools whose personnel exert undue influence on students to participate on non-school teams or to attend camps or clinics.

Members of the MSHSL Board of Directors, Executive Staff and Task Force will present the proposed amendments to the Representative Assembly at a special meeting on March 27. Written information will be sent to all member schools, and each school is encouraged to conduct a local hearing to discuss the amendments that will be considered at the Assembly meeting.

Proposals will be voted on at the regularly scheduled meeting of the Representative Assembly on April 30. All amendments that receive a two-thirds majority vote will become effective on May 23, 1987.

THIS GROUP of Thief River Falls bowlers in grades K-through-12, plus adult supervisors, left Saturday at 9 a.m. for a junior tournament in Fargo, ND. The annual trip made through the Family Bowl is partially funded by a candy sale by the youngsters, plus a financial contribution from the Thief River Falls Men's Bowling Association. The bowlers competed for trophies and scholarships. Last year the group made a trip to the Twin Cities.

DNR Makes Payment

Department of Natural Resources has sent more than $200,000 in partial payments for ditch assessments levied by the Consolidated Conservation (Con-Con) counties composed of Aitkin, Beltrami, Lake-of-the-Woods Mahnomen, Marshall, Roseau, and Koochiching counties.

"All of the counties with consolidated conservation districts in the state have received payment from the DNR," said Rod Sando, DNR Land Bureau administrator. The 1985 Legislature asked the department to develop rules to determine what, if any, benefits the ditches might have for DNR. That rule-making should be completed following a public hearing process this summer.

The Con-Con areas were established by the Legislature in the 1920s and 1930s, when the state paid off the ditching bonds sold by the counties to prevent the default of the bonds. In return for payment, the Legislature required that all tax-forfeited land in specific areas become conservation areas administered by the DNR.

In all areas of the state except those designated Con-Con areas the DNR is required to pay the amount assessed by the county for drainage ditch benefits, the same as a private landowner. In the Con-Con areas the commissioner of DNR determines the benefits and pays that amount when funds are appropriated for that purpose.

Since 1980, the DNR has been assessed just over $1 million by Con-Con counties for ditch benefits. The DNR has not paid any specific assessments, but has made partial payments to the counties as funds were appropriated.

DNR has paid approximately $548,000 to the Con-Con counties for ditch assessments since 1980.

The DNR notified Con-Con counties that the following payments will be sent to them, Aitkin — $133.52 (payment in full); Beltrami — $81,000.00 (partial payment); Lake of the Woods — $18,804.69 (payment in full); Mahnomen — $3,156.60 (payment in full); Marshall — $45,000.00 (partial payment); Roseau — $54,000.00 (partial payment).

All other ditch assessments to DNR administered lands are paid up to date, including ditch assessments that benefit lands outside of the Con-Con areas.

The DNR has requested funding allowing it to remain current on its ditch assessments, and make additional payments to the Con-Con counties as benefits are determined under the new rules that will be adopted.

Bear Season Reminder

Department of Natural Resources Wildlife Division this week issued a reminder and a correction regarding the 1987 bear hunt.

The 1987 statewide bear season will open Sept. 1 and close Oct. 18. While most bear hunting will continue to be by permit, selected in a computerized drawing, portions of the bear range are also being opened to unlimited hunting in response to increased bear depredation problems.

Also the DNR Wildlife Division noted a misleading statement included in the official 1987 Bear Hunt Information (yellow pamphlet), according to DNR Assistant Wildlife Chief Tom Isley. "Only applicants under the age of 16 need to possess the Firearms Safety Certificate to be eligible for the license drawing," he explained.

Anyone planning on entering the drawing will have until April 15 to submit their application, which is earlier than last year, Isley said. Hunters are urged to closely study the map of the permit areas and the new no-quota area where no license limit will be in effect.

Hunters are limited to taking one bear. The cost of a bear hunting license for residents is $25.75, and the non-resident fee is $150.75, including a 75-cent issuing fee.

Ducks Unlimited Donation

Minnesota Chapter of Ducks Unlimited (DU) recently presented Governor Rudy Perpich and Department of Natural Resources (DNR) officials with a check for $80,000 to use in acquiring and restoring a 773-acre Anderson Lake Wildlife Management Area in southwestern Minnesota.

In a brief ceremony held in the Governor's office at the State Capitol DU Vice President L.W. Samuelson and State Cahirman Warren Stefanski presented a check to the governor DNR Commissioner Joe Alexander and DNR Wildlife Chief Roger Holmes.

"We are fortunate to have private organizations capable of fulfilling public needs in such a significant way," Perpich said. "Ducks Unlimited is an example of the active volunteer work which exemplifies Minnesota, especially in the area of natural resources preservation."

The donation is the second of DU's three-part involvement. The first was to gain approval of former owners who sell their property for wildlife development. The second effort is the $80,000 payment, which will partially offset the DNR's land cost, and the third will be $75,000 of construction work.

Alexander thanked DU members for their generous support and pointed out that restoration of the 800-acre Anderson Lake area will be a triumph for the entire conservation community. "It is not often that a damaged environment can be restored, but with everyone working together, great results can be obtained. We're proud to be partners in this endeavor," he said.

Stefanski said this was the first of a $1.5 million habitat investment being made in Minnesota in 1987. "This helps us celebrate the 50th anniversary of DU's Wetland Conservation Program," he added.

Holmes said the Anderson Lake project began in 1984 when 373-acres was acquired by the Nature Conservancy. Money for the purchase came from the Verdi Sportsmen's Club, the Minnesota Waterfowl Association, the Otto Bremer Foundation and many local clubs and individuals.

The $80,000 from DU is part of a nationwide program known as MARSH—Matching Aid for Restoration of State Habitat), under which DU matches funds from state wildlife agencies for wildlife habitat.

Anderson Lake, when fully developed, will be the largest and highest quality wetland in Lincoln County and one of the finest in southern Minnesota, Holmes said.

Butterfly Transparencies

Department of Natural Resources Division of Nongame Wildlife, has acquired two new sets of media programs highlighting butterflies in the United States.

Nongame Supervisor Carrol Henderson explained that a set of 40 transparencies on "Butterflies in the Eastern United States" and a slide show on "The Monarch Butterfly" have been received and are available for use by schools and other educational organizations by calling 612-296-0700.

"The first program brings many species of butterflies into the classroom, and the second is a full-color photographic account of the Monarch Butterfly," Henderson said.

Aspen Stands

Creating wildlife habitat and saving aspen stands is the goal of a new program implemented this winter. The program is part of the "Reinvest in Minnesota" (RIM) bill legislators enacted last session.

The idea is to regenerate old aspen stands before they lose their ability to regenerate by sprouting. Aspen that is allowed to grow old, will often die and fail to regenerate. Overmature aspen often converts to undesirable brush or other trees. By removing the old aspen before it dies, the roots will have enough stored energy to sprout a brand new revitalized stand of trees.

A rejuvenated stand insures wood for the future and habitat for wildlife. In recent years there has been a boom in factories using aspen. Though two such factories have been constructed in Bemidji, the demand has not reached extreme northwestern Minnesota. This is due in part to transportation expense and abundant supplies of aspen close to the mill.

By the time aspen stands being re-established under RIM are again mature it is anticipated that markets will demand aspen from northwestern Minnesota. Poor markets in the past lead to the current abundance of over-age aspen. Overmature aspen has less food or cover value for most species of wildlife than a young stand.

Aspen regeneration is one of the most valuable cover types for wildlife in the forest. Deer, moose, ruffed grouse, and beaver are a few of the animals that depend on helthy aspen stands.

Goal of the RIM program is to restore aspen. Therefore, most overmature aspen cut on this program will be left in the forest. Loggers must obtain timber from separate stands to supply the wood using industry demand. This will recycle even more areas for future timber needs and create more quality habitat for wildlife.

Fourth annual Lieutenant Governor's Bike Ride this year will be held on Saturday, May 9, near Rochester, marking the grand reopening of the newly blacktopped Douglas Trail and including an on-road trip to the historic town of Mantorville.

"The 36-mile, circular route we have chosen in southeastern Minnesota will not only feature this newly reopened facility, but will also draw public attention to this beautiful region of the state, with its mixture of rolling farmland, dairy cattle operations and hardwood forests," said state bicycle coordinator Jim Dustrude.

The ride is being coordinated by the Department of Natural Resources and other state agencies that deal with bikes, including Public Safety, Transportation and the Lieutenant Governor's office. Local towns and bike groups like American Hostels and the Minnesota Coalition of Bicyclists are encouraged to join in the festivities.

week, but weather in northwestern Minnesota will delay the start of the Pioneers' Minnesota Community College Conference Northern Division schedule.

The Metrodome appearance produced an 0-5 Northland record. The Pioneers lost three times to Willmar last Wednesday by 9-7, 9-1, and 8-1 scores. A Thursday doubleheader included a 3-2 loss to Fergus Falls and a 9-0 defeat at the hands of Hibbing.

Northland's next outing is scheduled Wednesday, April 15, a Northern Division doubleheader against Fergus Falls starting at 1 p.m. on the Northland diamond.

Sylvia Olson

Sylvia Olson, a frequent winner in Thief River Falls Golf Club women's city tournaments in the 1960's, continues to play strong golf. She was a participant in the women's pro-am tournament that preceded the LPGA Turquoise Classic at the Moon Valley County Club in Phoenix, and her five-golfer team placed third in a 26-team field.

Olson's group shot an 8-under par 65 in the event that was staged March 23.

Section 8

Three Section 8 players — forwards Jon Helgeson of Roseau and Shane McFarlane of Warroad, plus defenseman David Marvin of Warroad — have been named to the Team Minnesota roster for the National Junior Olympic tournament April 8-11 in East Lansing, and Ann Arbor, MI.

Team Minnesota was selected from players who participated in the Maroon and Gold high school all-star series, played Saturday and Sunday in Warroad and Grand Rapids. The Maroon team, featuring high school seniors from Sections 2, 5, 7, and 8 - basically northern teams — won both games, 4-3 in overtime and 5-3. Goalie Cory Chwialkowski of Bemidji joined Helgeson, McFarlane, and Marvin as Section 8 representatives on the Maroon team.

Rest of the Team Minnesota selections included goalies Damien Rhodes of Richfield and Dale Roehl of Minnetonka; defensemen Kris Miller of Greenway, Sean Fabian and Craig Quinlan of Hill-Murray, Luke Johnson of Osseo, and Steve Haataja of Mountain Iron-Buhl; plus forwards Jason Miller and Joe Decker of Bloomington Kennedy, Lance Werness and Dan Brettschneider of Burnsville, Ken Gernander and Derek Vekich of Greenway, Jake Enebak of Northfield, Mike Vukonich of Duluth Denfeld, Darrin Amundson of Duluth East, and Grant Bischoff of Grand Rapids.

Craig Sarner will be Team Minnesota coach. The National Junior Olympic tournament consists of six teams in two pools. Team Minnesota will open against New England April 8, will face the West at-large team April 9, and finish against Michigan April 10. The championship game will be held Saturday, April 11, in Ann Arbor.

Team Minnesota won last year's tournament with an 11-10 overtime title game decision over Michigan.

Service Officer Cautions About VA Transportation

Effective April 13, all travel mileage (except for schedule VA compensation and pension examinations) for veterans to and from the VA hospital will be subject to a 100-mile one-way and 200 mile round trip deductible, according to John Ellison, Pennington county veterans service officer.

Ellison also issued a caution. "Before transporting any veteran to a VA medical center, make sure that your local physician or hospital has received prior authorization from the recieving VA facility," he said.

"Sometimes the veteran is not in a stable enough condition to be transported, and sometimes the VA medical center can not provide the immediate care needed. In these cases, it is often advisable to have the veteran treated locally with VA assistance."

Two Farm Rescue Workshops Slated In NW Minnesota

Northwest Region emergency medical services is sponsoring two farm rescue workshops designed for emergency care and rescue personnel in the northwest region.

Topics covered will be equipment safety and disentanglement of trapped victims, rescue of a person pinned under heavy farm equipment, high voltage demonstration and presentation of electrical hazards, hazardous farm chemicals and how to handle the scene and victims (this includes anhydrous ammonia), and a hands on workshop in the use of small fire extinguishers that are carried in ambulances.

The workshop is being presented in Warren on April 4 at the Warren fire department and rescue service and on April 11 at the Twin Valley civic center.

Since the northwest region of Minnesota is largely an agriculture area, and farming equipment presents some unusual challenges to the rescuer when confronted with a farm rescue situation, the workshop is presented to familiarize the rescuer with the equipment and unique rescue techniques that are encountered.

Robert Fanning, who has taught farm equipment rescue with NDSU for several years, will be presenting part of the program. The electrical demonstration is being handled by PKM Electric of Warren and Ottertail Power company. Bruce Roed, a fire protection specialist, is teaching the afternoon sessions.

Cost of the workshop is $5; the balance of approximately $35 per participant is being paid by a subsidy from Northwest Minnesota emergency medical services. Approximately 90 persons from the communities in the northwest region are expected to attend the two workshops.

Canada-United States Goodwill Week was first celebrated in 1922 and is now the oldest continuing Kiwanis program. Kiwanis clubs will mark the week with exchanges of messages and visits between clubs on each side of the border, speakers on US-Canadian relations, and joint service projects.

MN Road Rescue Supports More Funds For State Roads

Results of a survey of motorists from across the state show that two-thirds of them believe additional money should be provided to improve the general condition of state, county and city highways. The poll was conducted for the Minnesota road rescue committee.

According to Bill Parmeter, spokesman for the Minnesota road rescue committee and a Twin Cities businessman, the survey also shows that 40 per cent of today's drivers felt *the general condition of state road*ways is worse than five years ago. The MRRC is a privately funded organization of contractors and businessmen devoted to providing information on road and bridge needs. MRRC is a state sponsor of the road information program.

When questioned on where funding for roads should come from, motorists overwhelmingly suggested the transfer of the motor vehicle excise tax from the general revenue fund to the highway users tax distribution fund. Of those surveyed 83 per cent believe the vehicle excise tax — a six per cent tax currently paid on the sale or transfer of new and used vehicles — should be used to fund highway work in Minnesota.

As far as other funding options, Parmeter said, "the survey indicated that drivers feel an increased tax on gasoline would be more appropriate than applying the state's six per cent sales tax to gasoline purchases."

Major findings of the mid-continent survey include:

— 40 per cent believe state highways are in worse shape than they were five years ago . . . 67 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 40 per cent believe county roads are in worse shape than they were five years ago . . . 66 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 47 per cent of those polled believe city streets are in worse shape than five years ago . . . 67 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 59 per cent of those surveyed believe something should be done to relieve congestion on city streets.

Parmeter concluded that "this survey shows people across the state are concerned with protecting the state's roads and bridges."

Of the drivers interviewed by Mid-Continent research for the study, 49 per cent were from the seven-county metropolitan area, and 51 per cent were from greater Minnesota; 47 per cent were men and 53 per cent were women. Their median age was 41. Mid-Continent research said the survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 4.3 per cent.

According to Minnesota road rescue committee, Governor Rudy Perpich and many legislators and others involved in seeking ways to adequately finance highway, road and street construction and maintenance are at odds on the matter. While several proposals merit consideration for the longer term, the immediate issue is to quickly fund road work for the next two years so that projects may get underway all around the state during this construction season.

Such a funding mechanism already exists and would provide some $230 million in the 1987-88 biennium not only for state projects but for county and municipality roads and streets as well. Indeed, this revenue — derived from the motor vehicle excise tax — could be a stable source of road-construction funds for all units of government.

The motor vehicle excise tax is a tax paid on the sale or transfer of all motor vehicles in Minnesota. Although the tax is based on the sale or transfer price, it is described in

Wastewater Plant In TRF Gets Award From Gov. Perpich

Governor Rudy Perpich was on hand to pass out certificates of commendation to staff members of 41 wastewater treatment facilities at the opening day of the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) annual wastewater operations seminar. The seminar was held March 18 - 20 at the Thunderbird motel in Bloomington.

The wastewater treatment plant in Thief River Falls was one of the 41 wastewater treatment facilities to receive commendation for achieving exceptional compliance records in meeting water quality objectives for calendar year 1986. Gary O. Anderson and Mitch Hams were at the seminar and were presented the award on behalf of the Thief River Falls wastewater treatment plant. Leland Engo is the supervisor at the wastewater treatment facility in Thief River Falls.

The awards ceremony marked the 50th anniversary of wastewater operator training in Minnesota. In his speech at the seminar, Governor Perpich noted that a community's wastewater treatment plant is often its single largest public investment. "To be worthwhile . . . that investment must be accompanied by a commitment to training of plant operators. Dollars can be spent and wastewater treatment plants can be constructed. But without skilled plant operators, we won't have clean water . . . which is one of the most valuable assets in our state," the Governor said.

MPCA staff said that the first operator training siminar in the state was held in March 1938 at the University of Minnesota. The University and the State department of health sponsored the annual training, called the water and sewer school, until the legislature created the MPCA in 1967 and gave it responsibility for the annual sewer school. The department of health continued to handle training for water works operators.

The MPCA invited a participant in the 1938 school, retired operator Earl Carter of St. Paul Park, to be a guest speaker at this year's anniversary seminar. Governor Perpich proclaimed March 19 Earl Carter day in acknowledgment of the dedicated efforts of Carter and treatment plant operators around the state during the last 50 years.

The MPCA began giving out certificates of commendation to outstanding treatment facilities and their operators in 1977. MPCA Executive Director Tom Kalitowski talked about the reason for the commendations at the awards ceremony this year. "We need to do more of telling people what they are doing right . . . to express our appreciation to the municipalities and operators who have expended significant effort to meet our water quality objectives.

"Minnesota is not only recognized as the land of over 10,000 lakes, but also as a leader in wastewater treatment. We owe much of this recog-

Wheat Producers Vote In Commodity Council Elections

Minnesota wheat producers voted in state-wide commodity council elections on March 17 to fill three open positions on the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council.

In wheat council district number 1, Jerry Kruger of Warren was re-elected to a third term on the Minnesota wheat council, representing producers in the northern region of the state. Don Stensrud, of Clarkfield was re-elected to a second term on the wheat council in district number two, representing wheat producers in the central portion of the state. And, in district number three, representing producers in the southern third of the state, Robert Starr, of Redwood Falls was re-elected to his third term on the council.

All three members have been elected to serve three-year terms on the council, which will begin July 1, 1987.

The Minnesota wheat council is responsible for administering the one cent check-off assessed on each bushel of wheat sold in the state. These funds are used to carry out programs to enhance export and domestic market utilization, and to support a variety of wheat-related research activities. Other wheat council members include—Francis Buschette of Renville; Don Frederickson of Murdock; K.C. Kuznia of Stephen; Don Loeslie of Warren; John Oberg of Ulen; and Charles Swanson of Hallock.

The extended forecast, however, includes temperatures in the 40's by Friday.

Mayors For Property Tax Relief . . .

Property Tax Relief Gains Support

House file 847, a bill that would provide property tax relief for farmers, small businesses, industries in distressed regions, and for all property tax payers in cities with low taxable wealth, was heard recently before the property tax division of the house tax committee.

The bill's author, Representative Paul Ogren, Aitkin, presented the bill to the committee and described the property tax relief that it would provide to the state's property tax payers. Representative Ogren indicated that he had received many letters of support from throughout the state for this bill.

Mayor Bob Carlson of Thief River Falls, Mayor Jack Murray of International Falls and Mayor Earl Laugenburger from Winona each testified in support of the bill on behalf of the Coalition of Outstate cities.

The coalition of outstate cities is a group of 46 cities located throughout greater Minnesota. They have an interest in the legislative process, and during the last two years have focused their resources on property tax and property tax relief issues. The coalition urged the committee to pass the property tax relief programs in House file 847.

The Mayors presented examples of why the programs in House file 847 are important for property taxpayers in greater Minnesota. For example, in International Falls, the mill rate has risen from 140 mills in 1984 to 189 mills even though the city levy has not increased. Businesses in International Falls are now paying nearly eight per cent of their market value in property taxes each year — one of the highest tax rates in the state. The property tax relief programs in House file 847 would reduce taxes on those business properties to 5.8 per cent of the market value.

The Mayors testified that property tax burdens for many taxpayers outside the metropolitan area are rising dramatically because of declining local and county tax bases. Even if local levies remain constant, the rapid decline of farmland market values will result in tax increases of 20 per cent or 30 per cent per year for many outstate property taxpayers.

The coalition and its members believe the Governor's tax and budget proposals would shift more of the costs for state and local government to the property tax. Because federal revenue sharing has also been eliminated, these changes will put greater pressure on local budgets and will probably result in larger than normal increases in local government levies.

The cities of International Falls, Waseca and Crookston were used as examples of the problems associated with the current property tax system. In Crookston, for property taxes payable in 1986, the total mill rate in the City of Crookston was 144 mills. This means that a $60,000 small business in Crookston pays $2,421 in property taxes — an effecitve tax rate over four per cent.

Because Crookston's per capita assessed value is low ($3,688 per capita), all taxpayers in Crookston would be eligible for the tax base equalization credit. In addition, the small business credit, which is targeted to businesses with very high tax rates, would provide additional property tax relief for the $60,000 business. In total, the programs in house file 847 would reduce the effective tax rate on a $60,000 business in Crookston from four per cent to 2.8 per cent. This property tax relief is important to help maintain the economic viability of small businesses in communities like Crookston.

The Coalition of outstate cities support House file 847 because they believe the bill includes the following four property tax relief advantages:

A tax base equalization credit that will help equalize the ability of local governments to finance public

Libraries Get Computers

Northwest regional library received a $10,000 grant from the L.B. Hartz Foundation to purchase microcomputers for each of the seven branch libraries in the Northwest regional library system.

The microcomputers, IBM PCs with 256K memory, will be located at branch libraries in Roseau, Warroad, Greenbush, Hallock, Warren, Red Lake Falls and Thief River Falls. The computers also come equiped with printers.

The public will be given access to the computers. Library staff asks only that appointments for one-hour periods be made prior to use. There is no charge for using the microcomputers, however, each patron must sign a user's agreement before using the equipment. The agreement specifies responsibilities for using the equipment. Parents must sign the agreement for their children under 18 years of age.

The main objective in offering the microcomputer equipment to the public is to have them available as learning tools in each community. The public uses the library's print and non-print collection for their education and recreational needs. They may now use the new format of microcomputer software in much the same way. The Northwest Regional library is in the process of building a software collection for the microcomputers.

The grant included funds for a word processing system and an education piece of software for children. The public is invited to use these, or to bring their own software for use on the equipment.

Branch librarians will be available for limited assistance only in use of the equipment. Patrons are encouraged to read the use manuals which will accompany the equipment.

The public is invited to visit the library and see the new computer in Thief River Falls this week and next week. The library will be celebrating national library week April 7-11. A number of activities are planned and refreshments will be served all week during national library week.

On Tuesday, at 2 p.m., Henrietta Ness will speak on "How to Make Your Life More Exiting.", Virginia Carriere will then talk on the Green Thumb program and then a representative from Heritage community center in Thief River Falls will tell about the activities at the center.

Grandparents are invited to visit the library during the story time on Wednesday. This event will be held at 10 a.m.

On Thursday, 2 p.m., Howard Person, Pennington county extension agent will speak on spring horticulture. His discussion will focus on

Two Farm Rescue Workshops Slated In NW Minnesota

Northwest Region emergency medical services is sponsoring two farm rescue workshops designed for emergency care and rescue personnel in the northwest region.

Topics covered will be equipment safety and disentanglement of trapped victims, rescue of a person pinned under heavy farm equipment, high voltage demonstration and presentation of electrical hazards, hazardous farm chemicals and how to handle the scene and victims (this includes anhydrous ammonia), and a hands on workshop in the use of small fire extinguishers that are carried in ambulances.

The workshop is being presented in Warren on April 4 at the Warren fire department and rescue service and on April 11 at the Twin Valley civic center.

Since the northwest region of Minnesota is largely an agriculture area, and farming equipment presents some unusual challenges to the rescuer when confronted with a farm rescue situation, the workshop is presented to familiarize the rescuer with the equipment and unique rescue techniques that are encountered.

Robert Fanning, who has taught farm equipment rescue with NDSU for several years, will be presenting part of the program. The electrical demonstration is being handled by PKM Electric of Warren and Ottertail Power company. Bruce Roed, a fire protection specialist, is teaching the afternoon sessions.

Cost of the workshop is $5; the balance of approximately $35 per participant is being paid by a subsidy from Northwest Minnesota emergency medical services. Approximately 90 persons from the communities in the northwest region are expected to attend the two workshops.

Kiwanis Sponsors Canada And U.S. Goodwill Week

Kiwanis clubs throughout North America will mark the 65th annual observance of Canada-United States Goodwill Week, April 26-May 2.

"This annual observance is designed to remind Americans and Canadians of the nearly two centuries during which our two nations have lived together in peace," says Frank J. DiNoto, Kiwanis International president. "Our 5,000 miles of undefended border symbolizes the friendship between our nations and is an example for all the other nations of the world."

Canada-United States Goodwill Week was first celebrated in 1922 and is now the oldest continuing Kiwanis program. Kiwanis clubs will mark the week with exchanges of messages and visits between clubs on each side of the border, speakers on US-Canadian relations, and joint service projects.

MN Road Rescue Supports More Funds For State Roads

Results of a survey of motorists from across the state show that two-thirds of them believe additional money should be provided to improve the general condition of state, county and city highways. The poll was conducted for the Minnesota road rescue committee.

According to Bill Parmeter, spokesman for the Minnesota road rescue committee and a Twin Cities businessman, the survey also shows that 40 per cent of today's drivers felt the general condition of state roadways is worse than five years ago. The MRRC is a privately funded organization of contractors and businessmen devoted to providing information on road and bridge needs. MRRC is a state sponsor of the road information program.

When questioned on where funding for roads should come from, motorists overwhelmingly suggested the transfer of the motor vehicle excise tax from the general revenue fund to the highway users tax distribution fund. Of those surveyed 83 per cent believe the vehicle excise tax — a six per cent tax currently paid on the sale or transfer of new and used vehicles — should be used to fund highway work in Minnesota.

As far as other funding options, Parmeter said, "the survey indicated that drivers feel an increased tax on gasoline would be more appropriate than applying the state's six per cent sales tax to gasoline purchases."

Major findings of the mid-continent survey include:

— 40 per cent believe state highways are in worse shape than they were five years ago . . . 67 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 40 per cent believe county roads are in worse shape than they were five years ago . . . 66 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 47 per cent of those polled believe city streets are in worse shape than five years ago . . . 67 per cent believe additional money should be provided to improve those conditions.

— 59 per cent of those surveyed believe something should be done to relieve congestion on city streets.

Parmeter concluded that "this survey shows people across the state are concerned with protecting the state's roads and bridges."

Of the drivers interviewed by Mid-Continent research for the study, 49 per cent were from the seven-county metropolitan area, and 51 per cent were from greater Minnesota; 47 per cent were men and 53 per cent were women. Their median age was 41. Mid-Continent research said the survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 4.3 per cent.

According to Minnesota road rescue committee, Governor Rudy Perpich and many legislators and others involved in seeking ways to adequately finance highway, road and street construction and maintenance are at odds on the matter. While several proposals merit consideration for the longer term, the immediate issue is to quickly fund road work for the next two years so that projects may get underway all around the state during this construction season.

Such a funding mechanism already exists and would provide some $230 million in the 1987-88 biennium not only for state projects but for county and municipality roads and streets as well. Indeed, this revenue — derived from the motor vehicle excise tax — could be a stable source of road-construction funds for all units of government.

The motor vehicle excise tax is a tax paid on the sale or transfer of all motor vehicles in Minnesota. Although the tax is based on the sale or transfer price, it is described in

Mayors For Property Tax Relief . . .

Property Tax Relief Gains Support

House file 847, a bill that would provide property tax relief for farmers, small businesses, industries in distressed regions, and for all property tax payers in cities with low taxable wealth, was heard recently before the property tax division of the house tax committee.

The bill's author, Representative Paul Ogren, Aitkin, presented the bill to the committee and described the property tax relief that it would provide to the state's property tax payers. Representative Ogren indicated that he had received many letters of support from throughout the state for this bill.

Mayor Bob Carlson of Thief River Falls, Mayor Jack Murray of International Falls and Mayor Earl Laugenburger from Winona each testified in support of the bill on behalf of the Coalition of Outstate cities.

The coalition of outstate cities is a group of 46 cities located throughout greater Minnesota. They have an interest in the legislative process, and during the last two years have focused their resources on property tax and property tax relief issues. The coalition urged the committee to pass the property tax relief programs in House file 847.

The Mayors presented examples of why the programs in House file 847 are important for property taxpayers in greater Minnesota. For example, in International Falls, the mill rate has risen from 140 mills in 1984 to 189 mills even though the city levy has not increased. Businesses in International Falls are now paying nearly eight per cent of their market value in property taxes each year — one of the highest tax rates in the state. The property tax relief programs in House file 847 would reduce taxes on those business properties to 5.8 per cent of the market value.

The Mayors testified that property tax burdens for many taxpayers outside the metropolitan area are rising dramatically because of declining local and county tax bases. Even if local levies remain constant, the rapid decline of farmland market values will result in tax increases of 20 per cent or 30 per cent per year for many outstate property taxpayers.

The coalition and its members believe the Governor's tax and budget proposals would shift more of the costs for state and local government to the property tax. Because federal revenue sharing has also been eliminated, these changes will put greater pressure on local budgets and will probably result in larger than normal increases in local government levies.

The cities of International Falls, Waseca and Crookston were used as examples of the problems associated with the current property tax system. In Crookston, for property taxes payable in 1986, the total mill rate in the City of Crookston was 144 mills. This means that a $60,000 small business in Crookston pays $2,421 in property taxes — an effecitve tax rate over four per cent.

Because Crookston's per capita assessed value is low ($3,688 per capita), all taxpayers in Crookston would be eligible for the tax base equalization credit. In addition, the small business credit, which is targeted to businesses with very high tax rates, would provide additional property tax relief for the $60,000 business. In total, the programs in house file 847 would reduce the effective tax rate on a $60,000 business in Crookston from four per cent to 2.8 per cent. This property tax relief is important to help maintain the economic viability of small businesses in communities like Crookston.

The Coalition of outstate cities support House file 847 because they believe the bill includes the following four property tax relief advantages:

A tax base equalization credit that will help equalize the ability of local governments to finance public

Wastewater Plant In TRF Gets Award From Gov. Perpich

Governor Rudy Perpich was on hand to pass out certificates of commendation to staff members of 41 wastewater treatment facilities at the opening day of the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency (MPCA) annual wastewater operations seminar. The seminar was held March 18 - 20 at the Thunderbird motel in Bloomington.

The wastewater treatment plant in Thief River Falls was one of the 41 wastewater treatment facilities to receive commendation for achieving exceptional compliance records in meeting water quality objectives for calendar year 1986. Gary O. Anderson and Mitch Hams were at the seminar and were presented the award on behalf of the Thief River Falls wastewater treatment plant. Leland Enge is the supervisor at the wastewater treatment facility in Thief River Falls.

The awards ceremony marked the 50th anniversary of wastewater operator training in Minnesota. In his speech at the seminar, Governor Perpich noted that a community's wastewater treatment plant is often its single largest public investment. "To be worthwhile . . . that investment must be accompanied by a commitment to training of plant operators. Dollars can be spent and wastewater treatment plants can be constructed. But without skilled plant operators, we won't have clean water . . . which is one of the most valuable assets in our state," the Governor said.

MPCA staff said that the first operator training siminar in the state was held in March 1938 at the University of Minnesota. The University and the State department of health sponsored the annual training, called the water and sewer school, until the legislature created the MPCA in 1967 and gave it responsibility for the annual sewer school. The department of health continued to handle training for water works operators.

The MPCA invited a participant in the 1938 school, retired operator Earl Carter of St. Paul Park, to be a guest speaker at this year's anniversary seminar. Governor Perpich proclaimed March 19 Earl Carter day in acknowledgment of the dedicated efforts of Carter and treatment plant operators around the state during the last 50 years.

The MPCA began giving out certificates of commendation to outstanding treatment facilities and their operators in 1977. MPCA Executive Director Tom Kalitowski talked about the reason for the commendations at the awards ceremony this year. "We need to do more of telling people what they are doing right . . . to express our appreciation to the municipalities and operators who have expended significant effort to meet our water quality objectives.

"Minnesota is not only recognized as the land of over 10,000 lakes, but also as a leader in wastewater treatment. We owe much of this recog-

Wheat Producers Vote In Commodity Council Elections

Minnesota wheat producers voted in state-wide commodity council elections on March 17 to fill three open positions on the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council.

In wheat council district number 1, Jerry Kruger of Warren was re-elected to a third term on the Minnesota wheat council, representing producers in the northern region of the state. Don Stensrud, of Clarkfield was re-elected to a second term on the wheat council in district number two, representing wheat producers in the central portion of the state. And, in district number three, representing producers in the southern third of the state, Robert Starr, of Redwood Falls was re-elected to his third term on the council.

All three members have been elected to serve three-year terms on the council, which will begin July 1, 1987.

The Minnesota wheat council is responsible for administering the one cent check-off assessed on each bushel of wheat sold in the state. These funds are used to carry out programs to enhance export and domestic market utilization, and to support a variety of wheat-related research activities. Other wheat council members include Francis Buschette of Renville; Don Frederickson of Murdock; K.C. Kuznia of Stephen; Don Loeslie of Warren; John Oberg of Ulen; and Charles Swanson of Hallock.

Daylight Saving Time

That phrase bothers me, and it plays havoc with some people's internal clocks!

Daylight can be altered by turning of clocks, but saved? People are always telling us how to "save time." We are encouraged to purchase "time-saving devices," "time-saving machines," and "time-saving schedules."

But can you actually "save time?" Where do you store it? How do you file it? Or bank it?

You cannot save time but you certainly can waste it. The only thing we can do with time is MANAGE IT. And I'm convinced that in most cases the difference between success and failure, accomplishment and striking-out is found precisely at the point of time-management. The person who manages TIME has learned how to manage life. Because life is time and time is life. Get your time in focus and much of life focuses.

"The clock upbraids me with the waste of time," said Shakespeare. And La Bruyère added: "Those who make the worst use of time most complain of its shortness."

Property Tax Relief Bill Gains COOC Support

services. This credit will provide provide property tax relief to businesses, home owners, and other property in communities with low taxable wealth.

— A new property tax credit for small businesses will reduce tax burdens on small businesses with high tax burdens.

— A property tax credit for industrial property in regions of the state with unemployment above the statewide average would provide property tax relief for industries that bring jobs to communities in greater Minnesota.

— A farmland valuation adjustment and credit for agricultural land would provide farmers with property tax relief to reflect the rapid decline in farm land market values.

The Coalition testimony also opposed the Governor's tax and budget proposals that would shift more of the cost for state and local government to the local property tax. Cuts in property tax relief and other state budget changes that would raise the costs for local governments would result in even higher property taxes.

The Coalition representatives stated that they believe there is considerable public support for property tax relief programs like those in House file 847. They urged the legislature to pass those programs and stated the Coalition's support even if funding for those programs had to come from cuts in other state spending programs or increases in other state taxes.

nition to the outstanding work done by the treatment plant operators who have made significant contributions to environmental quality in this state," Kaltowski said.

The 41 facilities presented awards on March 18 had achieved exceptional compliance records in meeting water quality objectives for calendar year 1986. To be eligible for the awards, the facilities had to perform within their permitted discharge limit every month during 1986, submit all monitoring reports correctly and on time, show no problems in compliance monitoring surveys or operations and maintenance surveys, and be run by certified operators.

Also considered in the criteria were whether facilities were constructed and operated according to approved plans and specifications and if the efforts to properly treat wastewater were adequate and cooperative. The size of the community, institution or treatment plant was not a criterion.

The MPCA's citizen board approved certificates of commendation for the 41 facilities at its February 24 meeting. This was the seventh consecutive year that New Ulm and Alexandria received commendations and the fifth consecutive year for Blue Mounds State Park and Tracy. All 720 wastewater treatment facilities in the state were eligible for the award.

The wastewater treatment facilities that received MPCA Certificates of Commendation for 1986 are: Anoka (MWCC), Austin, Alexandria Lake Area Sanitary District, Bemidji, Blue Lake (MWCC), Brainerd, Breezy Point, Chaska (MWCC), Cottage Grove (MWCC), Department of Military Affairs-Camp Ripley, Department of Natural Resources - Blue Mounds State Park, Helmer Myre State Park, Lake Bronson State Park, Fairmont, Faribault, Fertile, Gilbert, Goodhue, Grand Rapids, Hartland, Hastings (MWCC), Hazelden Foundation, Hokah, Hoyt Lakes, Inland Steel Mining Company, Little Falls, Marshall, Melrose, Montgomery, Monticello, Mountain Iron, New Ulm, Olivia, St. Joseph, Sanborn, Savage (Savage), Silver Bay, Sleepy Eye, Thief River Falls, Tracy, and Zumbrota.

FmHA Can Help Some Families To Home Ownership

Countless American families dream of owning their own home. For many it will remain a dream, but for some it can become a reality. The local Farmers Home administration (FmHA) office, located at North Dale street, can provide affordable loans to enable qualified, low income families or individuals to buy their own home.

FmHA financing is available for the purchase of recently built existing housing, new construction and mobile-manufactured homes, located in rural communities having central sewer and water systems, according to Randal E. Hemmerlin, county supervisor.

Qualifications for FmHA credit vary, depending upon family size and annual family income. For the Pennington county area, which includes the towns of Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire and Goodridge, the adjusted family income limits range from $13,150 for a family of one to $22,350 for a family of seven. Adjusted income can be calculated by taking total gross income from all sources and deducting $480 for each child under the age of 18 living at home.

"Ability to pay back the loan within a maximum period of 33 years must be clearly demonstrated by a sound credit rating and solid employment history," Hemmerlin said.

By use of interest credit, qualified borrowers may have part of their payments deferred. Payments may be reduced to as low as one per cent interest. The payment of principal, interest, real estate taxes and insurance typically runs 20 per cent of a family's adjusted income. A portion of the interest payments deferred may be repaid from equity generated from the proceeds when the family decides to sell the property and repay the loan.

The FmHA, an agency of the United States department of agriculture, is charged with administrating Title V of the Housing Act of 1949, the law authorizing rural housing loans. Using primarily loan funds that must be repaid, FmHA has been helping to stabilize and develop rural communities for the past 50 years.

FmHA has held the reputation for providing credit to families who live in rural communities that otherwise would have been unable to purchase their own home. "Currently, FmHA has financed over 13,000 homes to residents of rural Minnesota. In the Pennington county area, presently 165 borrower families are indebted to FmHA for home loan assistance. These home owners pay an estimated $500,000 in real estate taxes annually," Hemmerlin said.

Minnesota has been allocated $26 million for 502 rural housing loans in fiscal year 1987. Further information can be obtained by contacting the Farmers Home administration office at Box 486, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or by calling 681-2843.

MN Road Rescue Wants More Funds For State Roads

statute as an excise tax, not a sales tax. MVET is not a new tax, but an extablished one which until 1981 went into the State's General Fund.

The 1981 Legislature decided that the revenues should more appropriately be used for transportation purposes, and passed a four-phase schedule to gradually allocate increasing increments of the MVET for transportation — 75 per cent to the Highway Users Distribution Fund and 25 per cent to the Transit Assistance Fund. As the accompanying schedule shows, all of the MVET eventually would be used for road work and transit. Unfortunately, in only one year — 1985 — has any MVET money actually been transferred according to schedule.

Gov. Rudy Perpich once again is proposing to help balance the budget with MVET revenues, totaling for the next two years some $230 million. Instead, he has instructed Transportation Commissioner Leonard Levine to recommend replacement funds from other sources. Accordingly, there have arisen a number of suggestions for such funds within the administration and the legislature — among them, increased gasoline taxes, a sales tax on gasoline, higher license fees.

Under the four-phase schedule, MVET would provide an ever-greater percentage of road construction funds; moreover, MVET would provide sorely-needed stability to state, county and municipal construction program planning. For the long term, then, the use of MVET revenues for transportation purposes remains logical. And for the immediate need, MVET has wide support that is virtually free of controversy among legislators, the construction industry and the public — unlike the other funding ideas advanced.

Because highway funds are distributed 62 per cent to the state, 29 per cent to counties and nine per cent to municipalities, the delay in the MVET transfer that took place in 1986 has already cost the state $49 million, counties $23 million and municipalities $7-million.

According to figures compiled by the Minnesota road rescue committee, Pennington county has lost $143,632, Red Lake $125,496, and Marshall county $331,630.

Thus, MVET is a grass-roots issue affecting every locality in the state. What happens to Minnesota's highways, roads and streets affects every business and citizen. That there is a demonstrated need for adequate spending to build and maintain the road system seems beyond dispute, according to the Minnesota road rescue committee

Burn Center Has Tips To Prevent Injury From Fire

Staff of the burn center at St. Paul-Ramsey Medical center has sounded an urgent warning to parents and children in the wake of a large number of house fires recently.

"It's estimated that 75 to 80 per cent of burn injuries could be avoided," said Lynn Solem, M.D., director of the burn center and Ramsey clinic surgeon. "That is why teaching about burn prevention is a critical part of our burn center mission of teaching, caring, research and prevention."

Among those being treated at the burn center are victims of three fires, caused by children playing with matches.

Each year two million people suffer burn-injuries, 70,000 are hospitalized and another 12,000 die. Children, the elderly and the disabled represent a majority of burn victims, Dr. Solem said.

The following suggestions are from the St. Paul fire department:

—Do not leave children unsupervised.

—Encourage school or day care facilities to include fire safety education.

—Keep matches and lighters out of children's sight and reach.

—Talk to your children about fire, explaining that fire can be beneficial, but that it can be deadly when not used correctly

—When your children are mature enough to light matches, take time to teach the proper way to light a match. Teach them that it should be done only with an adult watching.

—Eliminate home fire hazards such as broken or worn electrical cords, oil rags, trash and litter.

—Be careful when smoking. Never smoke in bed. Use large ashtrays. Check for cigarette butts that may have fallen on furniture or floor.

—Store flammables properly, in a garage or shed, not in the house.

—Know how to use supplemental heating devices properly.

—Install one smoke detector on each level of the house, making sure one is located near bedrooms. Check regularly to assure they are in working order.

—Maintain electrical appliances. Scalding is one of the major causes of burns in youngsters, the elderly and the disabled. To help prevent these burns, turn down your water heater to its lowest setting, keep pot handles on stove tops turned in, pretest bath water temperature and watch toddlers underfoot when carrying hot liquids.

The burn center has a toll-free number, (1-800-922-2876). Registered nurses in the center are available to answer questions about burn care and burn prevention 24 hours a day.

Women Helicopter Pilots Form Whirly-Girls Group

by Rita Cipalla
Smithsonian News Service

She's a brain surgeon, a helicopter pilot and France's first woman general. In 1950, she became the world's first woman to fly helicopter rescue missions in combat and is credited with saving 165 lives during the war in Indochina. The Legion of Merit and the Croix de Guerre are among her many medals and awards.

Sounds unbelieveable? Some would find Valerie Andre just that. A helicopter pilot for 37 years, "Madame le General" is indeed a remarkable woman.

But for those who know that Andre is a charter member of the Whirly-Girls, her exploits may not seem all that unusual. For the Whirly-Girls, an international association of women helicopter pilots, counts among its numbers a bush pilot, a movie stunt pilot and concert pianist, a pediatrician and a deputy sheriff.

"The Whirly-Girls began in 1955 to provide a support network for women who flew helicopters," explains Deborah Douglas, research assistant at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., and curator of an exhibit on the Whirly-Girls, which will open at the museum in September.

The organization was the brainchild of Washington, D.C., native Jean Ross Howard, who today serves as its executive director. Howard received her helicopter rating in 1954 and, thinking she was the eighth woman in the world to fly helicopters, decided to find out for sure by writing to flight schools and manufacturers around the world. "I discovered instead that I was lucky No. 13," Howard says.

Today, the 570 Whirly-Girls hail from 24 countries. The major membership requirement: a certified helicopter rating from the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration or its foreign equivalent.

Andre is Whirly-Girl No. 6. In spite of her "superwoman" image, she insists that her career has followed a predictable path. "As a child, looking at airplanes in the sky," she recently recalled, "I used to say, 'I shall be a pilot.' Some time later, I asserted: 'I shall be a physician.' The only thing I had not thought of was to become a servicewoman."

In the late 1930s, Andre took flying lessons in Strasbourg, France. Later, she entered the neurosurgery program at the University of Paris. After graduating in 1948, she volunteered for the Paratrooper Medical Team in Indochina, where she saw a need for helicopter rescue pilots. She began training immediately.

This remarkable woman flew 120 helicopter missions and also made 121 parachute jumps under combat conditions, astounding ground crews by "a girl, of all things, falling out of the sky," she says. In her Red Cross-marked Hiller 360 helicopter, she flew through enemy gunfire, received some direct hits, landed in the jungle or in rice fields, picked up the wounded and flew them to hospital areas. Then pilot Andre became surgeon Andre, performing many life-saving operations. "She was a one-woman MASH unit," executive director Howard says.

Andre spent 33 years on active duty before retiring in 1981 as France's medical inspector general. She is now a member of the French air force reserve.

This spirit is a common trait among the Whirly-Girls. "They are doers," Howard says with pride. "They are adventuresome and thoroughly professional."

Andre's desire to combine medicine with flying echoed the dream of Hanna Reitsch, another young woman, who lived in Germany at about the same time and who later became the first Whirly-Girl. Partly to please her father, an eye surgeon, Reitsch decided at the age of 13 to become a physician, but not an ordinary one. Instead, she planned to be a flying missionary doctor.

Still in her teens, this 5-foot-tall, 90-pound woman enrolled in a training course in gliding. The exhilaration she felt in the cockpit is evident in her later writings: "Potent, yet gentle, like some seductive wine, the fever of flying descended on me, coursing through me to my very finger-tips." She was hooked — and eventually gave up on a medical career.

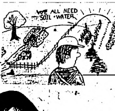
Reitsch became a glider pilot in 1931, going on to win numerous world records and awards. She made the first glider crossing of the Alps, a feat that required her to soar to 13,000 feet. She was so numb upon landing that she had to be lifted out of the craft. In 1937, she was asked to serve as a test pilot for the growing Luftwaffe, flying every type of military aircraft in its arsenal. She became the first woman to pilot a helicopter.

The test flights of the Focke-Achgelis FW-61, the world's first successful helicopter, so impressed the Germans that Reitsch was asked to demonstrate it again — this time for the public inside the Deutschlandhalle, Berlin's giant enclosed stadium. Reitsch played the moment to the fullest, demonstrating the helicopter's maneuverability and preciseness of operation. She took off straight up, flew backwards, sideways, around in circles and landed — all inside the big indoor arena. Her unprecedented flight greatly impressed those who realized its military implications.

After a serious airplane crash in 1942, in which she suffered six fractures to her skull, Reitsch resumed test flying and received the Iron Cross, First Class. Taken prisoner by the Americans for 15 months when Germany fell, she returned to flying upon her release and continued to set aviation records. She died in 1979 in Austria at the age of 67.

The first woman in the United States to earn a helicopter rating was Ann Shaw Carter of Airfield, CT, Whirly-Girl No. 2. Carter had flown with the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASPS) during the war. In June 1947, she soloed in a Bell helicopter at New York's Westchester Airport. Hired soon after as a pilot by the Metropolitan Aviation Corp., one of the first helicopter passenger services in the country, she became the first woman helicopter pilot to fly for a commercial outfit.

Firsts are not uncommon for the Whirly-Girls. Take Dr. Dora Strother, a human-factors engineer at Bell Helicopter. In 1961, according to the Smithsonian's Douglas, Strother, a former WASP, obtained her helicopter pilot's license and within a few months had set two international records for distance and altitude. Today, Douglas says, Strother is the most prominent woman engineer in the helicopter industry. One of her most recent projects involves designing a new "head-up" display helmet for combat pilots that uses a stereo television display system to flash flight data on a screen inside the helmet. Thus, the pilot does not have to look down at the instrument panel.



WE ALL NEED SOIL WATER

LESLEY HELGELAND, sixth grade student at Franklin Middle school and the daughter of Robert and Linda Helgeland of Thief River Falls, was one of the conservation poster contest winners selected by the Pennington county soil and water conservation district. Winners were presented with a $25 award at the Pennington county soil and water conservation district banquet recently. Sponsors for the contest included: Northern State bank, Norwest bank, First Federal Savings and Loan, Farm Credit Services and the Pennington county soil and water conservation district.

Another record-setter is Gay Maher, who in 1965 became the first pilot — male or female — to fly solo coast-to-coast in a helicopter. Maher was aloft for more than 35 hours during the 10-day, 80 mph flight, which included 33 stops to refuel her Hughes Model 300 helicopter.

Then there's Nancy Miller Livingston, Whirly-Girl No. 4. Livingston received her helicopter rating in 1947, becoming the first woman pilot on the West Coast and the second woman commercially rated in the United States. Her husband, Arlo, and she ran a crop-dusting operation and flying school in Oregon during the 1950s.

In 1960, the husband-and-wife team relocated to Juneau, AK, where they took on a variety of flying jobs. They transported skiers, surveyed snow and water levels, flew rescue missions, took passengers on glacier sightseeing tours, even counted bears. The Livingstons retired in 1977.

Breaking new ground is not the only work of the Whirly-Girls. As an organization, it gives scholarship funds to young women (assisted by its men's auxiliary, formed in 1974) and provides stand-by pilots for helicopter rescue missions in emergencies. And these extraordinary women often save lives.

Such was the case one overcast spring day in 1958 in Morristown, TN. A helicopter had crashed soon after take-off. One man was dead; the pilot was badly injured. The engine continued to run with the blades beating the ground. Smoke poured out and an explosion seemed imminent. Evelyn Bryan, airport manager and Whirly-Girl No. 20, crawled with a fire extinguisher under the beating rotors, turned off the ignition and put out the fire. The pilot was saved; Bryan was awarded the Carnagie Hero Medal.

Heroines and more, the Whirly-Girls have one important bond: the love of helicopters. "In fact," Howard says, "we even have a term for it: We call it love at first flight."

New Battalion Headquarters For Guard To Be Built

All Building Corporation of Fergus Falls, has been awarded a $1.7 million contract for the construction of a new Minnesota Army National Guard armory in Moorhead. The award announcement was issued jointly today by Governor Rudy Perpich and Major General James G. Sieben, Minnesota's Adjutant General.

"This award, especially when considered with a similar award of $408,000 announced for Detroit Lakes this past Monday, is a real plus for both the National Guard and the citizens of northwest Minnesota," said Gov. Perpich. "I have always supported the guard and am pleased to see this improvement in their facilities."

The new building's design encompasses 33,000 square feet for administrative areas, a 7,000 square foot assembly hall, classrooms, storage, locker rooms, a kitchen area and a rifle range. The grounds also include 170 parking spaces. Foss Associated of Moorhead is the architect for this project.

The headquarters for the Guard's 2nd Battalion, 136th Infantry will make its new home in the new armory. This unit, which has more than 200 members, overseas the battalion's subordinate units located in Fergus Fals, Detroit Lakes, Wadena, Thief River Falls, Crookston, Bemidji and Park Rapids. The "Bearcats" of this battalion, some 900 strong, serve in one of the nation's most combat-ready reserve units.

1987 Predicted To Be Boring - But Not All Bad

by Walter W. Heller
U of M Economist

As we peer into the murky recesses of our economic future, the dominant theme for 1987 comes out as one of moderation: Moderate growth, moderate inflation, moderate shrinkage of both our budget and trade deficits, moderate movement of interest rates and so on. One could almost say it looks like a pretty boring year for the U.S. economy — not bad, just boring.

A fifth straight year of expansion without a recession isn't all that bad a prospect, is it? No, but economic growth is likely to putt-putt along at a monotonous pace of two and one-half to three per cent for the year, not enough to bring more than a slight down tick in unemployment or up tick in profits.

What about the fear that with the birth of tax reform, the economy will suffer a postpartum slump during this first quarter of the year? It is said that people rushed to buy cars last month to get the sales tax deduction while businesses hustled to finish construction projects before year end so they could lock in higher depreciation rates. The result would be an air pocket in this quarter.

My view is that while the tax-reform slump makes great copy and will bring some softness, it won't live up to its advances notices. I'll hazard a guess that growth will proceed at a two to two and one-half per cent rate this quarter and then move to three per cent plus the rest of the year. In other words, there's still no recession in sight.

What will sustain that kind of moderate advances?

— Consumers will pull in their horns a bit but won't head for the hills.

— Business will boost its capital spending a bit but won't scale any mountains.

— Housing, even with under 10 per cent mortgage rates, will be a little below this year.

— The make-or-break factor will be the trade deficit; as it shrinks by $30 billion or $40 billion, U.S. output will rise.

Meanwhile, inflation will behave rather well. With import prices rising and wages advancing a bit more than this year, inflation will move back toward its underlying rate of about four per cent as the year progresses.

Chances are that the budget deficit will also shrink by about $40 billion from last year's record $221 billion. That will be restrictive.

But at the same time the Reaganized Fed will keep its foot off the monetary brakes, especially as it eyes 1988. There is something to the politics-economic cycle, and unless Reagan is crippled by Iran and all its Contra-dictions, (as Nixon was by Watergate in 1974,) we should probably plug some political voltage into the 1987-88 economic picture.

All in all, we face a pretty boring but not too bad year for the U.S. economy.

SOCIAL SECURITY QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Provided by the Social Security District Office in Grand Forks, ND

Q. I will be returning to Canada after retirement. Can I direct deposit my social security check to a Canadian bank?

A. Currently direct deposits can only be with United States banks. At present there are a few Canadian banks that operate in the United States and those can use direct deposit.

Q. I am representative payee for my brother's disability benefits. How should the authorized names appear on his checking account?

A. Usually account titles such as John Doe (beneficiary) by Mary Smith (payee) or Mary Smith (payee) for John Doe (beneficiary) are acceptable.

Q. How can the state request my social security number for a driver's license? Is that really proper? Portland, ND

A. Originally, the social security number was meant to be used only for social security programs; now, however, the number is being used as a means of record-keeping by a variety of organizations. Undoubtedly the best known of these is the Internal Revenue service, which collects federal income taxes. But the military, schools, banks and other agencies also use the social security number for record-keeping purposes.

Any State or local agency is permitted to use the social security number for general public assistance programs, tax administration and issuance of drivers' licenses or motor vehicle registration. The use of the number by these organizations does not affect the confidentiality of social security records.

Q. When a disabled person receiving supplemental security income gets a job, how do you assess how much will be cut from his or her monthly check? University of North Dakota

A. Usually the first $65 of wages received per month will not affect an SSI recipient's check. Someone with low earnings, such as our clients in sheltered workshops, may never reach this level. Other income exclusions can apply also.

Q. Are any social security publications available in Braille or on recordings? Grand Forks, ND

A. Yes. General information about social security, supplemental security income and medicare is available. For more information, North Dakota residents can contact South Dakota library for the Handicapped, State Library Building, 800 North Illinois, Pierre, SD 57501, phone South Dakota, 605-773-3514 or North Dakota 701-781-2604.

Minnesota residents can contact Minnesota Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, Braille and Sight Saving School, Faribault, MN 55021, phkne, 507-332-3279.

Q. How is the percentage of disabiltiy determined by social security? University of North Dakota.

A. Social security does not pay a disability percentage, such as 10 or 50 per cent. To be medically eligible you must be fully disabled (100 per cent) and unable to engage in any substantial gainful activity (work) based upon factors such as medical condition, age, education and vocational background. The actual medical decision is made by state employee using social security guidelines.

Tax Reform Act Has Aspects For Farmers

"Overall, the Tax Reform Act of 1986 will not greatly affect agriculture," according to Bernie Hardiek, director of taxes for a major farm equipment manufacturer. "Farmers who keep good financial records will work to maximize after-tax profits. That hasn't changed.

"To me, the most significant aspect of the new tax law is the repeal of investment tax credit. Farmers and other business people who make major, long-term investments will no longer receive a direct, 10 per cent of purchase price tax credit.

"Also, repeal of this provision has been made retroactive to Jan. 1, 1986. No machinery purchased in 1986 will be eligible for any sort of investment tax credit.

"In addition, if you have any investment tax credits carried forward from previous years, you will lose 17½ per cent of those credit carry-forwards in 1987, and another 17½ per cent in 1988. So, in 1988, every $100 of investment tax credit carried forward will be worth only $65."

But Hardiek said there was some good news that helps offset the loss of investment tax credit.

"A farmer can now write off an initial $10,000 of the cost of any new equipment during the year of purchase. The remaining amount can be depreciated in normal fashion," he explained. "The only restriction is that you cannot deduct more than the taxable income derived from the business for that year."

In another area of tax reform, Hardiek said that farmers are asking questions about accounting procedures.

"During the initial phase of the tax legislation, pressure was applied to force farmers to switch from cash accounting to accrual accounting. Fortunately, this restriction was deleted from the final legislation. For federal income tax purposes, farmers can still use the cash method of accounting."

Deduction of pre-paid farming expenses is another area of confusion that Hardiek clarified. "A farmer using cash accounting will still be able to deduct any amount for expendable supplies within the year they are purchased — providing the cost of those supplies does not exceed 50 per cent of total farming expenses for the year, including depreciation and interest.

"This will primarily affect off-farm investors who have previously used such deductions to shelter non-farm income. Operating farmers will feel little effect from this new restriction on prepaid expenses," Hardiek said.

An area that can affect operating farmers, though, is the change in tax treatment of capital gains. "Currently, capital gains are taxed at 20 per cent," Hardiek said. "In 1987, that rate will be increased to 28 per cent.

"So in the future, as the individual tax rate of 28 per cent comes into effect, profits from long-term investments will be taxed at the same rate as ordinary income.

"This can dramatically change the after-tax profit on sales of long-term assets. If a farmer is now planning such a sale, a trip to the tax accountant to outline the best strategy is imperative — the sooner, the better."

Finally, Hardiek said that a soil and water conservation plan must have received prior approval by either a state or federal conservation agency if a farmer is to be able to deduct the cost of any conservation improvement as a cash expense rather than as a capital item.

Thought Provoking Comment On Subjects Of Public Interest

Not A Fair Statement

There is nothing wrong with Rep. Wally Sparby of Thief River Falls and Rep. Jim Tunheim of Kennedy introducing proposed legislation regarding a limited hunting season and payment for depredation in regard to the small elk herd in the Grygla area. Legislators are supposed to bring their ideas to the law-making body.

There is a touch of unfairness, however, in releasing information on that proposed legislation while charging failure by the department of natural resources to remove the elk herd. That idea — removal of the herd to another area or areas — wasn't the DNR's idea, it was the legislature's idea.

The legislature too frequently has the idea that a solution is reached when a law is passed. Never mind that the implementation of the law's directive is impossible; that doesn't seem to be a major legislative concern. The idea is to issue a directive and, having done so, consider the task to be completed.

In the case of the ill-fated elk capture and removal project, the legislature asked the impossible and now seems critical that the impossible wasn't accomplished. "Here, son," the legislature said in effect, "take this sieve down to the lake, dip out a five-gallon bucket of water and be back in five minutes."

A news release from Reps. Sparby and Tunheim began, "In response to the failure of the department of natural resources to remove the elk herd that has been causing problems for area farmers . . . " That strikes us as unfair. Failure is a harsh word for not accomplishing an objective which was impossible to achieve.

A sieve doesn't hold much water. Neither does the complaint about DNR project failure.

Hot Air Kept Do-Gooders Warm

Columnist Raymond Coffey of the Chicago Tribune recently hit the nail on the head with this recent column:

Young Joe Kennedy and a herd of political and show business celebrities and would-be celebrities spent one night sleeping out on some of the grates through which warmth rises from Washington's underground steam heat pipes.

Their alleged purpose was to draw attention to the sorry plight of the homeless who spend every wintry night sleeping on those grates in the nation's capital and of the homeless everywhere.

What they accomplished, though, was to demonstrate that epidemic brainlessness among the chic may be a greater blight on America than homelessness.

The show of alleged concern and compassion for the homeless was advertised as "The Grate American Celebrity Sleepout" (the pun on great passes for wit and cleverness among such people), and it was timed to coincide with congressional consideration of a $500 million homeless-relief bill.

What it amounted to, however, was another of those silly, phony, self-indulgent, self-serving, self-promoting exercises in which the oh-so-liberal well-off relieve their consciences and make themselves feel good — superior, even — by playing a one-night stand as St. Francis or Mother Teresa.

I hesitate to single out young Kennedy for his part in the fraudulent goings-on, since he was accompanied by such a collection of other celebrated jerks, including: some colleagues from Congress; Mayor Marion Barry of Washington, D.C., whose administration is far more renowned for its scandals than for having done anything effective for his city's homeless; and some of the usual People magazine suspects from Hollywood.

But Kennedy, who was elected to his Uncle Jack's old seat in Congress at age 34 last fall and who was joined for the night on the grates by his wife Sheila, probably managed best to sum up the fatuousness of the misadventure.

Here is a guy who is by inheritance a multimillionaire, who spent $1.8 million on his campaign for Congress, who is now paid $89,500 a year and who has at least two homes.

He turns up for his night on the grates, warmed not only by the rising steam heat but also, of course, by the array of TV lights, and he pronounces that "Sheila and I hope by participating in this event more Americans will work to seek an answer to this affront (homelessness) to human dignity."

Having left their kids with a babysitter back home (their Massachusetts home, that is), they bedded down in the sleeping bags they brought with them.

"We have sleeping bags and each other; that's more than most people have," Kennedy said, in a line straight out of soap opera, which also grievously understated the Kennedy assets.

Did it ever occur to them that some of the homeless who spend every night on the grates might have liked it more if the Kennedys had invited them home for the night, for a hot bath, clean sheets, a warm bed and a big breakfast?

With the money he blew on his campaign, Kennedy wouldn't even have had to take the wretched and unwashed into one of his homes. He could put up the homeless population of Washington in a fancy downtown hotel for the night.

Sleeping on the grates is not a fun night out with the TV crews for the people who do it regularly. They are not there because they don't like the service at the Ritz.

Kennedy might have just given a couple of them his and his wife's sleeping bags. Most of the homeless don't have any.

Now that "The Grate American Celebrity Sleepout" is over, the fundamental question is this: Who got more out of it, the miserable homeless or the "gosh, aren't we warm and wonderful human beings" celebrities and self-promoters who got their names in the newspapers and their faces on TV?

The answer is obvious. All the grandstanders did, for instance, for Ronnie King, an unemployed painter who has been homeless for a year, was lead him halfway through the evening to a move a few blocks to another grate near Union Station to make more room for celebrities and TV cameras.

It was an exploitive mockery of the misery of the homeless. The Salvation Army does more real good for the homeless every 20 minutes than the likes of all the celebrity sleepers-out will ever do.

Life Learned In Kindergarten

Robert Fulghum refined life to its basics in a column entitled "All I Ever Really Needed to Know I Learned in Kindergarten", published in the Kansas City Times in September of 1986. We borrowed it as follows from the Plummer school newsletter:

Most of what I really need to know about how to live, and what to do, and how to be, I learned in kindergarten. Wisdom was not at the top of the graduate school mountain, but there in the sandbox at nursery school.

These are the things I learned. Share everything. Play fair. Don't hit people. Put things back where you found them. Clean up your own mess. Don't take things that aren't yours. Say you're sorry when you hurt somebody. Wash your hands before you eat. Flush. Warm cookies and cold milk are good for you. Live a balanced life. Learn some and think some and draw and paint and sing and dance and play and work every day some.

Take a nap every afternoon. When you go out into the world, watch for traffic, hold hands, and stick together. Be aware of wonder. Remember the little seed in the plastic cup. The roots go down and the plant goes up and nobody really knows how or why, but we are all like that. Goldfish and hamsters and white mice and even the little seed in the plastic cup — they all die. So do we.

And then remember the book about Dick and Jane and the first word you learned, the biggest word of all: LOOK. Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. The Golden Rule and love and basic sanitation. Ecology and politics and sane living.

Think of what a better world it would be if we all — the whole world — had cookies and milk about three o'clock every afternoon and then lay down with our blankets for a nap. Or if we had a basic policy in our nation and other nations to always put things back where we found them and cleaned up our own messes. And it is still true, no matter how old you are, when you go out into the world, it is best to hold hands and stick together.

Borrowed Nonsense

Among thousands of letters received by a hosiery manufacturing company, one from a champion golfer stands out as a favorite: "Dear Sirs," the letter read, "Half an hour after I put on a pair of your socks I got a hole in one."

Great White Hunter: "While wandering deep into the African bush in the scorching heat of mid-day, I suddenly spotted a leopard."

Sweet Young Thing: "Oh, don't be silly . . . They grow that way!"

Boss: "So you took a two-hour lunch break. Were you out looking for a new job?"

Worker: "No, sir, I don't need another job."

Boss: "You do now."

Judge: "You say you have known the defendant all your life. Tell the jury whether you think he would be guilty of stealing this money."

Witness: "How much was it?"

YOUR TIMES

by Vicki D. Brown
Thief River Falls

I was happy to see that Dan Peters was in the area again with his "Truth About Rock" seminar. I was at that seminar a few years ago when they were in Thief River.

I can't impress on parents how important it is that we are aware of what our children are listening to. I'm not just referring to our teenagers, either. We must also be concerned with our younger children, even the infants and babies.

I remember when one of my daughters was about a year old. She was in her crib sleeping and her favorite commercial came on. She stood up, held on to the sides of her crib and danced until the commercial was over. Then she laid back down and finished her nap.

I still laugh when I think about it because it was cute. But, also, it makes me really think. If music has that much influence on a sleeping person, we know it has to be influencing them when they are awake.

Let's make sure the music our children (young and old) are listening to will be influencing them in a positive way.

It is a tremendous thing to wear a crown and represent a city. One gains recognition and acknowledgement that could never be received if it were not for this honor. I have found how exciting it can be to meet so many people. In January, it was my privilege to be seated with one of our Minnesota state senators at a banquet. As Miss Webster, WI 1983, I was able to attend a banquet for Gov. Anthony Earl. Being able to meet these and others have added to the privilege of this position. Doors are open and opportunities become available that I had never dreamed of. For all of these things I am very grateful.

Wearing a crown and representing a city also helps one to grow as a person. Learning how to meet people with dignity becomes a must. One gains poise and confidence in dealing with new and, occasionally, unusual situations.

Sometimes, however, wearing a crown and representing a city can be a lonely task. I have a coach in St. Paul who helps me prepare for the Miss Minnesota pageant. One of the first questions she asked me was how many close friends I had. When I told her, she said, "Hang onto them; you'll need them."

Somehow, once one has a title, some people become afraid to associate with that individual. This is easily understood, but it does not make it easier. At times I feel that I must prove myself again to remind people that I am still the same person as before. Yes, I have gained new and wonderful experiences that might be hard to relate to, but the inner me has not changed.

In spite of the difficulties that sometimes arise, I feel that these situations have been some of the best learning experiences I have had. Being a Christian and knowing that I want the characteristics of the Bible — love, joy, peace, patience, gentleness, and self-control — evidenced in my life, help me to keep things in perspective and to keep striving toward a balanced life.

I am constantly reminded that if it were not for the city of Thief River Falls, the Women of Today and my sponsors, I would never have had the opportunity to wear a crown and represent a city and I thank you.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Takoma Park, MD, a small municipality in the suburbs of Washington, D.C., has enacted an ordinance forbidding the city to do business with any company involved in nuclear arms, no matter how marginal that involvement may be.

This was not an isolated event, but rather one that appears to be part of a growing trend. Several other local governments around the country have enacted similar laws.

To fulfill this mandate, Takoma Park has produced a list of offending firms that reads like a "Who's Who" of American industry, including some of the oldest and most respected names in commerce. The clear inference is that the corporations are doing something unethical or immoral, though it doesn't actually say so. It reminds me very much of the repugnant "blacklists" of the McCarthy era when many innocent citizens saw their good names besmirched without justification.

I can understand how sensible people could awake one morning and decide that nuclear weapons are dangerous. What I cannot comprehend is the infantile arrogance that prompts them to believe they have detected some great truth unavailable to others.

Yes, nuclear weapons are dangerous. So are tanks, artillery and machine guns. Twice in this century we have seen great powers preside over the slaughter of tens of millions of people using conventional arms. It is highly likely that were it not for the threat of nuclear war, the United States and the Soviet Union would have gone at it before now using Western Europe as a battlefield. That is the reason leaders of western Europe reacted with such dismay when President Reagan and Soviet leader Gorbachev discussed abolishing nuclear weapons at their Iceland meeting. They understand the regrettable fact that the nuclear deterrent is effective.

The stark fact is that the nuclear genie is out of the bottle and not apt to be put back in again. I share the horror of nuclear war that so agitates the anti-nuclear zealots, but I am no less troubled by the prospect of all-out conventional war. For the time being, at least, the nuclear stalemate forces the great powers to live in peace with each other and to address their differences with words instead of combat.

If the world were a logical place and human beings inclined to resolve their quarrels amicably, perhaps we could destroy all nuclear weapons. But than again, if the world were like that, there would be no nuclear weapons.

We can only hope and pray that eventually our kind will find its way to lasting peace based upon friendship, cooperation and mutual respect for basic human values. Until that day, we must stay alert and maintain our defenses.

The businesses that participate in the nuclear arms industry are honorable, performing a patriotic duty. The anti-nuclear activists who are attempting to "blacklist" them are doing a great disservice to these firms, and the people who work for them.

"By working faithfully eight hours a day," poet Robert Frost wrote, "you may eventually get to be a boss and work 12 hours a day."

Frost penned those words back in the good old days when U.S. business and industry reigned supreme in the world marketplace and the nation's trade balance was solidly in the black. Today, in the wake of our worst trade deficit ever, executives are working more like 16 hours a day and getting nothing but grief and criticism for their trouble. It seems as if just about everyone has something negative to say about management.

Fair enough. People who can't stand the heat should get out of the kitchen and management must bear some of the responsibility for our current trade dilemma. Still, it seems to me that much of the criticism is overdrawn and irrelevant in our quest to make our nation more competitive.

Let me cite as examples two of the most common criticisms of management which occur frequently in the media. The first is that management is too attuned to short-term profits and does not give proper attention to long-term planning. The second is that because of inept management, corporate stock is undervalued and susceptible to corporate raiders.

The critics cannot have it both ways. If management were really obsessed with short-term profits, stock would not be under-valued and raids would be infrequent. It is precisely because managers are taking the long view, sacrificing short-term profits for the sake of future growth, that stock sometimes appears undervalued, attracting raiders.

Perhaps just as common are unfavorable comparisons of our management with the Japanese version. We hear a great deal about the "lifetime employment" guaranteed Japanese workers who respond with dedication and superior performance.

What you do not often hear is that such security is available only to a few Japanese workers. Japanese industry relies heavily upon temporary workers for labor in peak production periods, many of whom are women who do not enjoy equal status with men. Such a sexist policy would be unacceptable in our society.

More important, as we have seen in Japanese plants in this country, the Japanese do not accept the restrictive influence of independent labor unions and the inefficient work restrictions that inevitably accompany unions. If U.S. business were unburdened by unions, it would become remarkably more competitive overnight.

To be sure, management has made some mistakes that have contributed to our dilemma over the years. So has labor and so has government. There is enough blame to go around, but recriminations won't get us very far. What we need to do now is buckle down and work together. Through cooperation and oneness of purpose, we can compete wity anyone successfully. We have done so in the past and will do so again.

The Tower commission let President Reagan have it with both barrels, of that there can be no doubt.

The commission determined that the resident erred in sending arms to Iran and that he did not exercise sufficient diligence in supervising activities of certain members of the White House staff.

For his part, President Reagan has accepted the commission's report with humility and graciousness. He has faced up to his own mistakes, acknowledged them before the American people and is now acting aggressively to install a new crew and resume his responsibilities with renewed energy.

I am well aware that there are certain individuals in the news media and Congress who would like nothing better than to continue this inquisition, but we cannot permit it. Our country is confronted by many formidable challenges at home and abroad. It is imperative that we have an effective and dynamic chief executive in the White House.

Despite the recent lapses, we must keep in mind that President Reagan has proved himself to be precisely that kind of chief executive. Consider:

+ That when he assumed office in 1981, inflation was running at 13.5 per cent. In 1986, consumer prices increased 1.3 per cent, the smallest such increase in more than two decades.

+ That when he assumed office, the prime interest rate was 20.5 per cent. Today it is 7.5 per cent and falling.

+ That by the end of 1986, civilian employment hit a new peak with well over 110 million Americans working, 10 million more than when President Reagan took office.

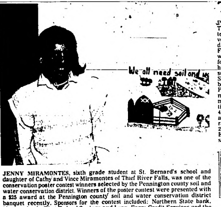
+ That in the last two years, more than 2.5 million people have been removed from the poverty rolls and the growth of poverty has been limited to the overall growth of population. Between 1977 and 1981, the number of persons below the poverty level was growing seven times faster than the population.

+ That from 1977 to 1981, per capita disposable income, adjusted for taxes and inflation, increased 2.4 per cent. From 1981 to 1985, the per capita increase was 8.1 per cent and it is now 10 per cent above the level of 1981.

And do I really need to mention the president's achievements in rebuilding our nation's defense and — perhaps most important of all — reviving that traditional American spirit of pride and optimism that was so conspicously lacking before he assumed office.

The president is now eager to resume the forward thrust of his administration and tackle what is probably the most formidable challenge facing our country today — making our business and industry more competitive in the world marketplace. His agenda to achieve this is sound, but he can scarcely be heard amid the mini-riot of hysteria and controversy swirling around the White House.

I say this orgy of president-bashing has gone on long enough. Enough is enough. We have important work to do and it is time for us to get to it.



We all need soil and

to the Editor

To The Editor:

I want to write to express my true appreciation for the planned seminar on family life coming up in Thief River Falls. What an encouragement it would be to those who planned and worked hard for this event to see many families attend with a sincere hope of strengthening themselves individually and encouraging others to become strong and deeply committed to establishing good families.

Our families are indeed the very foundation of this country and any hope we may have that the United States will indeed remain a strong voice for freedom in the world is most directly linked, not to educational institutions or government programs of "help," but as parents take willingly and wholeheartedly their responsibility before God to raise their children — really His children, as they are only gifts entrusted to us — in the way that leaves a strong generation to inherit the coming decades.

At the same time I was deeply saddened to read that included within the list of organizations presenting materials at the family seminar was Planned Parenthood. If I have come to understand anything at all about this organization it is that it promotes anything but family life.

Consider:

Forty-four of Planned Parenthood's 186 affiliates currently perform abortions at over 50 separate locations;

Planned Parenthood affiliates have been doing abortions since 1970 and performed 86,947 abortions in 1984 alone;

Every Planned Parenthood affiliate must pay dues to the national headquarters, which are pooled with other contributions to fund pro-abortion advertising and a lobbying office in Washington, D.C.;

These are only three of the host of convincing facts that prove that Planned Parenthood is, behind any pretentious claims, definitely not on the family's side as we face the future.

Documenting Dance Is Questionable Occupation

by Peggy Langrall
Smithsonian News Service

Dance has been called the child of music and love. If true, can so heady a mix be recorded and preserved?

Dance lives in the mind of the dancer. Its motions can be passed on by demonstration and repetition. But its emotions, they are something else again. The renowned dancer Isadora Duncan put it this way: "If I could tell you what I mean, there would be no point in dancing."

Dancing is rarely done the same way twice. "Some forms of dance have ancient codified and recorded traditions to draw upon; others are unrecorded folk traditions about which little is known," sayd Judith Lynne Hanna, dance research scholar at the University of Maryland in College Park. Trying to document the motions and meanings of dance, as Hanna and other scholars of the art are now determined to do, is raising ticklish technical questions. Can complex written notation and film tell the whole story? The accuracy of future dance archives depends on how well scholars answer that question.

The emotional immediacy of dancing, plus the element of the unexpected always present in a performance, have given the art a varied reputation — from the function of angels to the sport of the devil. Yet the urge to move the rhythm, whether in joy, sorrow or reverence, comes out when the motions of everyday life will not do.

As modern dancers often imitate nature, primitive ones tried to influence it. At winter's outset, our ancestors stomped on the earth to reawaken it, and in every season, danced to implore the gods to send good health, fertility, rain, courage and peace. Dances can be convulsive, prancing, sliding, slapping, whirling — even performed when sitting down. The music can be whatever comes to hand, a hollow log to beat on, dried seeds in a gourd to shake or split bamboo used to blow a tune.

Because dance is so ephemeral, scholars from ancient times on have been divided about how to classify it, Hanna says. Aristotle considered that dancing should serve as moral training. Socrates believed that one should dance for health and pleasure. Plato felt that there were two kinds of dance — noble and ignoble. He condemned the arts in general for arousing passions that might undermine the state. Still, he considered dance an integral part of education, deeming a man uneducated if he could not dance.

In the middle ages, dance was an accepted liturgical art form in spite of the Christian love-hate relationship with the body. People also danced to rid themselves of disease, desperately hoping that the dance of death would fend off the black plague.

When virtusouso techbique came to flower during the Renaissance, professional dancing developed, but it was considered merely a form of light entertainment, a notion reinforced by the coming of industrialization. Victorians viewed the physical as the province of the lower classes, "close to animal life."

In reaction, such enlightened souls as Walt Whitman and Sigmond Freud actually celebrated the human body, and, in this century, its fitness and freedom have found expression in the likes of the Charleston, jitterbug, twist, disco and aerobic dancing.

Despite this rich history, dance even today is listed in many libraries under "sports and recreation." Perhaps this is not surprising considering the differences between dance and other art forms. Music is written down and recorded, paintings and sculpture exist for all to see as do novels and other works of prose and poetry. But dance is by nature spontaneous, and dance choreography for ballet or musicals is usually reinterpreted when restaged. No wonder that the art has gone largely undocumented.

This is now changing. Dance is beginning to be considered an academic discipline, especially by anthropologists, who find it useful for comparing one culture's non-verbal traditions with another's. Dr. Adrienne Kaeppler, chairman of the Anthropology Department at the Smithsonian's National Museum of Natural History, is trying to help graduate students discover what to look for when they go out to do field-work on dance. "As a rule," she says, "athropologists don't pay much attention to dance because they don't know how to analyze it. And yet virtually all cultures include dance."

Kaeppler teaches her students how to analyze dance: how to notate its motions, how to use linguistic analogies to describe it, and how to understand its meaning, symbolism, style and the ways in which it communicates.

By notation, Kaeppler means two incredibly intricate systems known as Laban and Benesh, for their European originators. The schemes — on paper, some look like textile designs — are slowly being adopted by ballet and modern dance schools. But they are so complicated, with about 1,500 symbols each, that few dancers can read them. In the Laban system, a single movement of the fingers, for example, is depicted separately by a patchwork of lines and circles. Ballet companies thus turn to notators to interpret a score for the dancers. And as few choreographers can write notation, the professional notator must write down scores as they are composed, for future reference.

A great leap for dance documentation came with the invention of film. To observe that development, the first conference on the subject of researching dance through film and video was recently held at the Smithsonian Institution. Dance scholars came from around the world to share their feelings.

It soon became apparent to the conference that even film is not fully capable of recording dance. Film represents the viewpoint of the mind behind the lens. Interpretation enters into the process with techniques such as editing, use of wide-angle or zoom lenses and whether the camera is stationary, track-mounted or hand-held. Is the scene shot from a low angle or from a bird's-eye view? If more than one camera is used, will perspective be lost? Much of the dance's total impact can be lost if the camera is trained on one dancer in an attempt to catch the intricacies of footwork. And how does all of this affect the dancers themselves? Do their intentions come across?

A dancer's intentions can be hard to catch on film. But they are the essence of the art form. "Tap has the potential to describe a whole variety of feelings," American dancer Honi Coles has said. It's usually happy and "up," he adds, but it can be deeply solemn. Coles recalled tappers dancing some years ago at dancer Baby Laurence's funeral held at Reverend John Gensel's church in midtown Manhattan. "With no music," he said, "we did a toom-chika-toom-chika-toom right in front of the coffin, and with the echoes of the church and all, it was truly solemn."

For the small percentage of dance pieces that are written down, a novel idea turned up at the Smithsonian film and video conference — to use computers as teaching aids for dance. As described by Australian dance scholar and computer expert Don Herbison-Evans, of the Department of Computer Science at the University of Sydney, the idea was launched in 1971 when a colleague asked this question: "Can the notation for a dance be fed into a computer and an animated figure on a screen do the dance?" If so, a student who couldn't read notation could copy the figure and learn the dance.

Herbison-Evans had worked as a film-animator, but techniques for computer animation were not yet formulated. Getting away from two-dimensional stick figures and creating three-dimensional ones on the computer screen was not easy. But he came up with a couple of rather droll ellipsoid figures, and the incongruous couple — an ape and a ballerina — danced!

"On a computer," Herbison-Evans says, "the movements can in principle be viewed at any speed and from any direction. Complex movement sequences are best learned by viewing a demonstration from behind, so that the demonstrator's left and right are the same as the learner's." Computers are an improvement over videos, he notes, because most videos are taken from the front and require left-right and forward-back inversions in the mind of the dancer that interfere with the learning process.

The university's dance school came to use the system Herbison-Evans and some of his students developed. Dubbed NUDES (for Numeric Utility Displaying Ellipsoid Solids), it worked as a learning tool but made the dancers think analytically instead of intuitively, the system's creator says.

Computer technology, however promising, remains a long way from the minds of dancers. Vaslav Nijinsky, considered one of the world's greatest dancers, once remarked, "I think little and therefore understand everything I feel. . .I am feeling through the flesh and not the intellect. . ." Only a fortunate few saw Nijinsky perform. But with tools such as film, video and computers, today's dancers can dance on for future generations.

Contest Winners Like Life In Rural Areas

Rural America may be viewed by some as a thing of the past, but to the young people who live there it is a vibrant, caring and essential component of their lives — and something worth fighting to retain.

Such were the opinions of the nearly 1,000 students who entered the second annual CENEX student writing contest. This year's theme, "My Hometown," asked students to look at and write about their rural communities.

"It is encouraging to see that these young people realize the contributions rural America has made to their lives," the cooperative's media and community relations coordinator Jill Wheeler said. "Friendship, trust, honesty, determination and cooperation were recurring themes in these essays, as well as pride."

Wheeler said the large number of entries in this year's contest made for some stiff competition. She said CENEX would like to congratulate the winners, as well as thank all the entrants and encourage them to enter again next year.

The full texts of the winning essays have been published in a booklet, "My Hometown: Student Views of Rural America."

"My hometown is more than must a little town of 680 people; it's home. And, home is more than a four-letter word — it's a warm, friendly, secure place where you're known and lived." Dawn Twete, 12th Grade, McVille, ND.

"We learn things like honesty and trust at an early age. In the small rural towns our trust is seldom violated. Most of our families have lived here for many generations and went through difficult times together. This feeling of being a part of one large family is continually handed down from generation to generation." Mary Ellen Durley, 9th Grade, Potosi, WI.

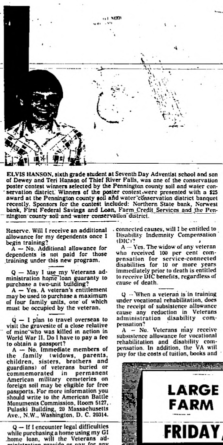
"Many people don't realize how sweet it is to grow up in rural America until they have grown up and moved away from their hometown. Living in the big city may cause a few people to reflect back on their life in their hometown. Granted, there are historical events to remember, like the time the football team won the state championship, but I would venture a guess most people will remember the spirit of their hometown. The friendliness and compassion of its people will remain fixed in their memories, while events and the appearances of old buildings will fade. It's the community spirit I will remember most about my hometown — and that's the best memory I think anyone could ask for." Dana Christensen, 11th Grade, Lennox, SD.

"I consider myself extremely lucky to have grown up in the Nezperce environment. As a teenager, I feel even luckier. Sure I've said, 'There's nothing to do,' but we are not pressured by drugs and there are no social groups to fit into since everybody is part of one big group....I wouldn't trade this little town or the people and their ways for anything." Beth Mosman, 11th Grade, Nezperce, ID.

"My hometown is a typical rural community that struggles to stay alive due to hard economic times, with people who refuse to give up on what is so special to them....The people in my hometown seem to be a different breed than others. They all stick together with the good and the bad. They care for everyone even if it does not apply to them directly." Greg Rasset, 11th Grade, Ortonville, MN.

"My hometown is like many towns today, showing signs of a depressed economy. As we drive down Main Street, we notice signs of 'Quitting Business' and empty store fronts with 'For Rent' signs. Businesses come and go, start up and die out. It is sad to see friends lose the family business, but they do not give up....People here believe in our town and with such faith it will survive." Dianne Struiksma, 12th Grade, Grandview, WA.

"In a big city, if there is a car accident of the fender-bender variety down on the corner, people tend to get angry and slam their doors. They first want to blame the other person. In Adams, almost the whole town would come to the scene to see if they could help. Both parties would smile and say they were sorry and walk away hand on shoulder." Neil Wingate, 7th Grade, Adams, NE.



ELVIS HANSON, sixth grade student at Seventh Day Adventist school and son of Dewey and Teri Hanson of Thief River Falls, was one of the conservation poster contest winners selected by the Pennington county soil and water conservation district. Winners of the poster contest were presented with a $25 award at the Pennington county soil and water conservation district banquet recently. Sponsors for the contest included: Northern State bank, Norwest bank, First Federal Savings and Loan, Farm Credit Services and the Pennington county soil and water conservation district.

A — Yes. The widow of any veteran who received 100 per cent compensation for service-connected disabilities for 10 or more years immediately prior to death is entitled to receive DIC benefits, regardless of cause of death.

Q — When a veteran is in training under vocational rehabilitation, does the receipt of subsistence allowance cause any reduction in Veterans administration disability compensation?

A — No. Veterans may receive subsistence allowance for vocational rehabilitation and disability compensation. In addition, the VA will pay for the costs of tuition, books and fees involved in the rehabilitation program.

Q — Is it true that husbands of female veterans are eligible for the same Veterans administration benefits as wives and widows of male veterans?

A — Yes. A husband or widower has the same status as a wife or widow of a male veteran and is eligible to receive the same benefits if otherwise entitled.

UMC Professors Get NW Minnesota Initiative Funds

Two University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) faculty have received funding from the Northwest Minnesota Initiative fund.

Bruce Brorson, assistant professor in the business division, received $25,000 for development of the Northwest marketing research center. Wendell Johnson, associate professor in the arts and sciences division, received $11,895 for the Biomass fiber cash crop nursery establishment program.

The proposed research center will do primary research on new products for area entrepreneurs and will do labor studies, consumer research, and other projects requested by communities or economic development boards.

Secondary market research which is available from a variety of sources will be provided for a number of new business start-ups, and could also help existing businesses in their marketing needs.

The fiber fuel project money will fund a portion of salary of a senior plot research technician, Scott Erickson, who will provide information directly to growers in the establishment of short rotation biomass nurseries.

Through the project UMC is attempting to determine whether growing hybrid poplars for fiber fuel could be an alternative cash crop and a means for reducing erosion on marginal soils.

"Both of these projects funded by the Northwest Minnesota Initiative fund tie into our institutional plan of extending research in areas that are needed in northwestern Minnesota," said Chancellor Donald Sargeant.

The Northwest Minnesota Initiative fund awarded $272,077 in grant money to 16 organizations who have developed projects that strengthen the economic base, according to Liz Fedor, program associate.

"Cities, counties, post-secondary institutions, and regional organizations will receive the grants that range in size from $4,000 to $29,197."

The Initiative Fund Board, comprised of eight residents from northwest Minnesota, made the award selection. Awards were made in a 12-county area in northwest Minnesota.

MINNESOTA ARMY NATIONAL GUARD recruits Shawn Wagner, left, and Kent Tormanen, Thief River Falls, got to experience life in the military first hand recently when they attended a two-day Basic Training Orientation Course (BTOC) at Camp Ripley. Wagner and Tormanen, as part of a group of approximately 250 recruits headed for basic training later this year, spent the weekend of March 21 and 22 becoming familiar with national guard equipment and the army way of doing things. The BTOC program, operated by the Minnesota Military Academy, is designed to help recruits know what to expect when they reach the real thing. Since the program began in the mid-70's, the Minnesota Army National Guard's recruit drop-out rate in basic training has decreased sharply. Minnesota National Guard photo by Sgt. Gary Heil.

MN Motorcyclist Fatalities Show Decrease In 1986

Morotcyclist fatalities fell 14 per cent last year, according to preliminary statistics compiled by the Minnesota department of public safety.

In 1985, 77 motorcyclists died in traffic accidents, but in 1986 the number killed dropped to 66, the second lowest in a decade.

"Minnesota is making great strides in increasing motorcycle safety, but we still have a long way to go, especially in the areas of alcohol and helmet use," said Paul Tschida, public safety commissioner.

Alcohol involvement in fatal motorcycle accidents remained high in 1986. Sixty-four per cent of those killed and tested for alcohol had been drinking and 53 per cent were legally intoxicated. In 1985, 65 per cent had been drinking and 48 per cent were intoxicated.

Helmet use among accident victims increased slightly in 1986. Of those killed in 1985, 21 per cent were wearing a helmet, while in 1986, 29 per cent wore a helmet.

Morotcyclists were also found to be at fault in the accidents more often then were other drivers. Although 42 per cent of the fatal motorcycle accidents involved another motor vehicle, the other drivers were found to be at fault in only 23 per cent of the accidents. Failure to yield the right of way was the most common contributing factor cited for other vehicle drivers, while illegal or unsafe speed was the most commonly cited factor for motorcyclists.

Other factors in fatal motorcycle crashes that remained relatively constant in 1986 are:

— Over one-third fatal crashes happened between midnight and 3 a.m.

— Over one-third of those killed were between 20 and 24 years old. The youngest killed was 13, the oldest, 59.

— Over one-third occurred on a weekend.

— About 10 per cent of those killed were passengers.

—Fifty-five per cent of the crashes were overturns and collisions with fixed objects.

— Only 28 per cent happened in Hennepin and Ramsey counties.

ARC Urges Perpich To Address Care, Treatment Question

Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC) Minnesota has urged Governor Rudy Perpich, Human Services Commissioner Sandra Gardebring, and the Minnesota legislature to address the serious questions of adequate care and treatment and access to community services for persons with mental retardation in Minnesota's state hospitals.

The statement, issued at a news conference during the ARC Minnesota' day at the Capitol March 5, expressed concern that the state will not be in compliance with the Welsch consent decree when it expires this year. The decree sets forth requirements for institutional reforms, a reduction in population in the state hospitals, and development of appropriate community-based services. Although the state has met some requirements of the decree, the ARC stated, issues unlikely be resolved by this year include inadequate care and treatment, inadequate physical therapy services, lack of positive programming, and inadequate community placement of persons with severe and multiple handicaps.

The ARC urged the state to deal with the remaining issues by "redirecting the hundreds of millions of dollars spent on institutional care in order to fund community services, training programs, case management services, and a quality assurance system."

Hearing On Gatzke School Closing Draws Large Crowd

by David Hill
Times Reporter

Declining enrollments in rural schools have caused some drastic cuts to be made in education. The Grygla-Gatzke-Skime school district, one of the many schools affected by a poor farm economy, is on the verge of closing an elementary school for first through third grades in Gatzke.

A public hearing on the topic Thursday drew a crowd estimated between 250 and 300. Many were opposed to having the school closed. During the two-hour meeting about 30 people gave testimony, many against the closing.

On April 14 the school board will decide whether to close the school because of declining enrollment and budget problems.

There is no question that economic problems for farmers have caused an exodus from rural areas to urban areas. This exodus has serious repercussions for struggling rural schools. Each school receives only so much money per student to operate a school. When costs exceed the ability to provide, changes need to be made, whether in personnel, materials or buildings.

It cost the school district $43,800 to run the Gatzke school this year and will cost about $65,700 for the 1987-88 school year because the state will require the school district to hire a half-time principal for the school, said Sal Hoffert, school district superintendent. The additional requirement for a half-time principal only made the change more necessary, he said.

State funding is based on enrollment figures. Next year the estimated aid per student will be about $1,700, according to Hoffert.

Enrollment in kindergarten through grade 12 in the district dropped from 381 in 1976-77 to 287 for the current school year. The projected enrollment for 1992 is 239.

Grygla and Gatzke consolidated in 1974. At that time there were somewhere around 380 students in the district and not enough room to house all of the students in one school in Grygla. It was decided at that time to put grades one through three in the school in Gatzke, which has three

Investigation Of Elk Shooting Is Still Continuing

Investigation continues into the shooting of three elk on a state wildlife management area north of Grygle, according to conservation officer Mike O'Brien of the Minnesota department of natural resources.

Two adult male elk were found in the area Sunday, March 29, by O'Brien and another a day later by Gerald Maertens, manager of the Thief Lake wildlife management area. Antlers and teeth had been taken from the first two elk found and teeth taken from the third animal, a young bull with spike antlers. None of the meat had been harvested.

A reward of $1,000 had been offered by the Turn In Poachers (TIP) organization for information leading to the arrest of the person or persons who killed the first elk found. That amount was raised to $2,000 when the third elk was discovered.

"The $2,000 reward is still available," O'Brien said. "Persons who have information may call me at 681-2055 or the TIP number toll-free at 1-800-652-9093."

Krohn Herd Leads Pennington DHIA During February

Duane Krohn herd at Viking led the Pennington county Dairy Herd Improvement assiciation (DHIA) testing during February with an average of 57.1 pounds of milk an 1.87 pounds of butterfat in his 40-cow herd, according to Jerry Hamre, DHIA supervisor.

Other herds among the top 10 were Arden Lundeen, 56.3 pounds of milk and 1.84 pounds of butterfat; Mark Hanson, 55.8 and 1.89; Gene Nelson, 55.4 and 1.96; Mylo Carlson, 55.2 and 2.50; DKG Lundeen 53.2 and 1.87; Walter Brothers, 52.3 and 1.87; Leland and Dale Nelson, 50.5 and 1.83; Lyle Swanson, 49.6 and 1.97; and Pearson Bros., 49.3 and 1.64.

Herd averages are computed by using all cows in the herd to give members of the DHIA a record of their herd's monthly earning power. As a result, number of dry cows will reduce the average even if cows in milk are high producers.

Hamre said there were 29 DHIA and two owner-sampler herd on test with the association during February.

Red Lake Electric Posts Record Margin At Annual Meeting

Red Lake Electric cooperative has posted a record year for margins which will enable the cooperative to hold rates down in 1987 even though sales were down considerably this winter and wholesale power rates have increased.

The news was presented to the cooperative's members at its annual meeting in Thief River Falls Wednesday. The meeting included not only business reports, an election and award presentations, but entertainment and a meal.

Ron Kennedy, manager, said it was the best year in a lot of respects" for the cooperative. He said the news and planned events at the 49th annual meeting drew a record crowd of 613 registered members.

Kennedy said $84,000 in capital credit checks have either been picked up or mailed to members who received electric service from the cooperative in 1969 and 1970. The checks were available until 11 a.m. for members at the meeting.

The business session was called to order by board chairman Verner Arveson. Year-end reports were given by Arveson, Kennedy and the auditor's representative.

According to the report, which was distributed at the meeting, the cooperative reported $4,871,194 in 1986 revenue compared to $4,891,587 for 1985. Total operating expenses dropped for the year. In 1986 expenses were $3,840,677 compared to $3,934,024 in 1985.

Arveson also reported that the equity position of the cooperative was strong. At the end of 1986, member equity was 37.4 per cent of assets, a level which has increased in recent years due to a slowdown in new construction and no need to borrow

AUCTION-O-SELL
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MN 56701

BENEFIT AUCTION to raise funds for an outdoor swimming pool in Thief River Falls raised about $4,500 through items sold and a $1 admission Saturday at the sports arena in Thief River Falls. Proceeds from the lunch served by 4-H club members had not been counted and are not included in the $4,500 total, according to Charlie Oakes, chairman of the swimming pool committee. Pam Kolden and Maryel Anderson of Auction-2-Sell donated their auctioneering services. Rotary club members assisted with set-up and Knights of Columbus members helped with clean-up. Oakes said he considered the event a success and the sale raises funds on hand to about $56,000. The auction started at 10 a.m. and continued to about 3 p.m. with 185 bidders registered and about 300 people attending, Oakes said.

CRP Sign-up Active For 5 Northwestern Counties

Enrollment in the conservation reserve program (CRP) was extremely active in northwestern Minnesota counties during the February sign-up period, according to Allan Gustafson, district conservationist with the Pennington county soil and water conservation district.

"The corn bonus, change in land eligibility and approaching of the 25 per cent limit on cropland enrolled in some counties were added incentives for landowners to enroll in the 10-year land retirement program during the February sign-up period," Gustafson said.

About three-fourths of the allowable acreage in the five northwestern Minnesota counties of Marshall, Roseau, Red Lake, Pennington and Kittson was enrolled in the CRP as a result of all sign-up periods held to date. A summary of sign-ups indicates that approximately 396,000 acres in the five counties were enrolled out of 525,000 acres allowable.

Under the federal program, no county could have more than 25 per cent of its cropland acres enrolled in the program. The accompanying chart shows that Marshall, Red Lake and Pennington counties equaled or nearly reached that limit.

Marshall county, with about 150,000 acres allowable, had sign-up of 77,000 acres in February and 66,000 acres previously for a total of 143,000 acres.

Pennington county had about 74,000 acres allowable and had sign-up of 29,000 acres in February and 44,000 acres previously for a total of 73,000 acres.

Red Lake county had only 49,000 acres allowable but had 59,000 acres signed up with 28,000 in Feburary and 31,000 previously.

Roseau county sign-up of 38,000 acres in February and 21,000 acres previously for a total of 59,000 acres was about 40 per cent of the allowable 140,000 acres.

Kittson county sign-up of 21,000 acres in February and 41,000 acres previously for a total of 62,000 acres was well over half of the 112,000 acres allowable.

"Marshall, Roseau and Red Lake counties do not have completed soil surveys," Gustafson said, "so many acres will need to be field checked to see if the land is eligible for the conservation reserve program. The final result may be a lot fewer acres accepted in these three counties than were offered under the CRP sign-up.

"The new eligibility rules for CRP which went into effect for the 1988 crop year are quite restrictive and very few acres will qualify," Gustafson added. "This would indicate that the program has about run its course for this area of Minnesota."

Gustafson also noted that there have been changes in seed mixtures and that notices have been sent to area seed dealers and elevators. He said he hoped there would be enough grass seed available for all the acreage that will need to be seeded under the CRP program this summer.

St. Hilaire Co-op Elevator, which supplies grass seed throughout much of a three-county area, said that prices on certain grass seeds have climbed but that allowable mixtures for planting have been changed somewhat to better equalize the costs.

On about 80 per cent of the land in this area a mixture of five pounds of birdsfoot trefoil, three pounds of

Cook's Choice

Lowfat Spaghetti Sauce

- 1 pound ground turkey or extra lean ground beef
- 2 garlic cloves, pressed or minced
- 2—15 ounce cans Italian tomato sauce
- 5 teaspoons instant beef bouillion cubes
- 1 cup V-8 juice
- 5 tablespoons Worchestershire sauce

Brown ground turkey in a sauce pan, adding pressed garlic during browning. When browned, add remaining ingredients and simmer over low heat for one hour, stirring constantly. Serve over cooked spaghetti. This recipe yields 6 moderate sized portions with 4 grams fat and 170 calories per serving.

Spaghetti is the most popular form of pasta in this country, and an excellent source of the complex carbohydrates that should make up between 55 and 70 per cent of the average person's daily caloric intake. Spaghetti provides protein and a variety of vitamins, especially the B vitamins, and minerals including iron, phosphorus and magnesium. This excellent food, low in fat and sodium, can also be a good way to get more fiber in your diet, if you use spaghetti made with whole grain flour. Each person in the United States eats an average of 10 pounds of pasta each year.

Survey Shows Support For Buying U.S. Foods

Vast majority of Americans would buy domestically grown foods rather than their imported counterparts if they were labeled as such, according to a survey conducted by CENEX, regional agricultural supply cooperative.

More than 200 rural and urban residents representing 14 states responded to the survey. Ninety-six per cent said they would buy American-grown fruits, vegetables and meats over imported if the foods were labeled; 94 per cent said they would buy processed foods labeled as American over imported processed foods; and 87 per cent said they would continue buying American even if it meant paying slightly more.

"We found that consumers do care where their food comes from," stated Jill Wheeler, CENEX media and community relations coordinator. "Many said they felt it was important to buy American, and they were often frustrated that many foods, especially fresh fruits, vegetables and meats, were not labeled as to origin.

"We also found relatively little difference in the responses of urban residents compared to rural residents," she added. "Seventy-seven per cent of the urban respondents said they would buy American fruits, vegetables and meats over imported, compared with 88 per cent rural, and 63 per cent urban and 87 per cent rural said they would buy American processed foods over imported. The major difference was that only 40 per cent of the urban respondents said they would buy American even if it meant paying slightly more, compared with 82 per cent of the rural respondents."

Wheeler said the survey was conducted to guage response to a national system of food labeling. A number of farm groups and concerned consumers are exploring the possibility of a labeling system to ensure that consumers have the opportunity to choose American goods at the grocery store.

Another section of the survey measured perceptions of American fruits and vegetables, meats and processed foods, versus their imported counterparts. The results showed that American products are overwhelmingly perceived in a better light.

"It became obvious that consumers feel American-produced foods are of a higher quality," Wheeler said. "Many of the respondents said they trusted domestic foods over imported because they knew American producers have to adhere to tougher regulations and controls. They expressed concern over the production of imported foods, especially in terms of the chemicals and types of feed used."

Seventy-seven per cent of the respondents said they felt American fruits and vegetables were superior in quality to imported products. Eight-six per cent found American beef to be superior, as well as 79 per cent for American pork. American poultry was the choice of 86 per cent of the respondents, with 79 per cent of them showing a preference for American processed foods.

Wheeler said the survey also pointed to some specific differences between urban and rural respondents.

"The background of our respondents also came into play in their answers," she said. "Naturally, many of the rural respondents were more familiar with American quality controls as they were themselves producers. They tended to buy American for loyalty reasons. Urban residents were more likely to buy American for reasons of quality."

The INSIDE SCOOP

by GAYLE BORCHERT

Well, only 40-some days of school left, but for many people, especially the administrators, it is not too soon to be thinking ahead to next year. The student senate also has been planning ahead. There are two really exciting things happening.

The first of these doesn't have an official title yet, so I'll label it "Student Activities" night. It is an exciting concept that the student senate with the help of Jane Mackenroth and Community Education presented to the school board. What it will consist of is a fun-filled night of activities at Franklin middle school for high school students. Activities will include dancing, volleyball, or basketball, and events in the pool.

The senior high will get the first and third Friday of every month through the summer. The junior high nights will be held on the second and fourth Friday of each month. The senior high night will kick-off on May 15, with the junior high to follow the next week.

A membership will be offered to any student in Franklin or Lincoln. The membership will cost $15 for the high school and $10 for the middle school students. An out of town guest card can be purchased, but a request form must be filled out. At the time of purchase, a set of rules will be handed out. Anyone caught breaking any of these rules will forfeit his membership card.

The other exciting event is that the Thief River Falls school district is going smokeless. A committee is currently in the process of doing something about the student population that smokes. The school district, law enforcement center and court system will all be working together to help clean up our streets and improve our school image.

All the students involved in the musical should be congratulated for a job well done. All those long hours of rehearsal really paid off. Reports from all sources have been favorable.

Tickets for the prom have gone on sale. The cost is $20 per couple, $15 for single. Prom will be held April 25 with senior banquet to follow on April 27.

Another major event coming up is the annual pride committee's talent show. The first was held last year and was a great success.

Events Schedule

April 7 — Boys' tennis at Grand Forks tennis center vs. Crookston;

April 9 — Boys' and girls' track at Northwest indoor, Crookston; Boys' tennis at East Grand Forks.

FARM FAMILY OF THE YEAR award was received by Mr. and Mrs. Dave Rodahl of rural Thief River Falls at ceremonies held March 19 at the University of Minnesota in St. Paul. The award recognizes the family's contributions to production agriculture and leadership in agricultural and civic organizations. Selected under direction of county extension directors, the recipients are honored by the university's institute of agriculture, forestry and home economics. Dave and Barbara have two children, Mandy, 9 and Michael, 5. They farm 1,495 acres northeast of Thief River Falls where they raise wheat, barley, hay, corn and some beef cattle. Dave is also Pennington county's King Agassiz. Shown with the Rodahls in the above photo are Dick Sauer (left), vice president of agriculture, forestry and home economics at the university; and Deborah Zak (right), Pennington county extension director.

Timothy and one pound of alsike clover is the required mixture and the seed cost currently is about $16.50 per acre.

Highest cost mixture is intended for planting on sandy soils and consists of six pounds of alfalfa, four pounds of brome, two pounds of timothy and one pound of sweetclover at a per-acre cost of $27.80. Also generally allowable on most of such lands is a mixture of six pounds of alfalfa, three pounds of brome, two pounds of orchard grass and two pounds of timothy which reduces the per-acre cost to about $26.60.

On peat lands a mixture of five pounds of timothy, two pounds of redtop and three pounds of alsike is allowable and the cost per acre is about $15.25.

The St. Hilaire elevator seed spokesman said that he had ordered grass seed supplies in advance in sufficient quantities to cover expected need for this area and therefore was able to keep per-acre costs quite similar to those plantings of a year ago. If supplies of seed on hand are exhausted and need to be replenished, it may be expected that increased demand will create higher prices.

"While we realize every year won't be as successful as 1986, we are confident about the future of the cooperative. The board of directors, management staff and employees enjoy a good working relationship which will enable us to keep your confidence in the Red Lake Electric cooperative as your best energy supplier," Arveson said.

In addition to business reports, several awards were also presented. Safe worker awards were presented to Bev Schmitz of Red Lake Falls, an employee who has had 20 years of employment with the cooperative without an accident; Shirley Bregler of Red Lake Falls who is an employee who has not had an accident in 15 years; and Mike Wavra of Red Lake Falls who as an employee has not had an accident in five years of employment with the cooperative.

Three retirees were honored at the meeting. Lanic Karel, director for 21 years, Harry Ford, former employee, and Maurice LaCoursiere, former employee, were all recognized for their contributions to the cooperative.

Cooperative members elected Norman Dufault of Gentilly, Mike Bachand of Brooks and Millard Dailey of Red Lake Falls to the board of directors during the meeting Wednesday.

Kennedy complimented guest speaker Boyd Christianson, television personality from Fargo, who he said "really did a good job." Kennedy said everyone seemed pleased with the way the meeting went and he hopes next year — the 50th year of the cooperative will also be a good year.

Entertainment was provided by the "Ridge Road Sisters" of Viking. Free door prizes were awarded and lunch was served following the meeting.

Hearing On Gatzke School Closing Draws Crowd

rooms and a gym.

Since 1974 enrollment has dropped by more than 100 students in the school district. There is enough room for the 65 students presently at Gatzke to attend school in Grygla, Hoffert said.

Hoffert said the 65 students currently enrolled at the school would be bused to Grygla. Presently the students are bused to Grygla and then bused to Gatzke. The elimination of the school in Gatzke would mean fewer hours on the bus for all except the students who live in Gatzke.

Some of the people at the meeting thought that the closing of the school in Gatzke would have a detrimental effect on the community of Gatzke. Hoffert argues it would not have much affect on the town. The three regular teachers and one special education teacher at the Gatzke school do not live in Gatzke, he said.

Muriel Larson at the Gatzke grocery store disagrees. She believes closing the school would have a definite impact on her business. She said she often sees parents and family members of students visit the town and stop by the store to pick up what they might need. "In a town where they are struggling to make ends meet why would we want to see the school close?" she said.

When the school board lists its financial reasons for closing the school, she said, they fail to point out that the Gatzke school has 25 per cent of the total enrollment in the school district. Not only that, she said, Gatzke school expenses comprise only four to four and one-half per cent of the school district budget.

Larson argues there are other ways around current financial difficulties which are being ignored by the school board. She believes looking at cuts in personnel and other areas should be examined first before deciding to close down a school.

Also, she said, the state requirement for a half-time principal in the school could be fulfilled by Supt. Hoffert and the school wouldn't have to spend an extra $20,000.

Larson said she would concede that the school might in the near future, be closed if current declining enrollments continue along with more financial problems. But closing a school should be the last step taken, she insists.

Linda Engelstad, Gatzke, also opposes the closure of the Gatzke school. The school, she said, is in good shape. It has three classrooms and a gym. It provides a good educational environment for the children because it is separated from the distractions and problems that undoubtedly develop when they are placed with older children in the same school.

Larson and Engelstad believe closing the school should be the last option taken. At the present time they don't believe the school board has made plans on how it would handle the influx of students to one school and even where the different classrooms would be located.

Larson and Engelstad are not alone in their sentiments. A petition currently being circulated, which opposes the closure, had over 90 names on it as of Thursday night. Larson and Engelstad believe that the petition will contain many more names on it before the April 14 meeting.

While residents opposing the closing are giving testimony and signing the petition, they have not created a formal organization nor hired an attorney. As of last Friday, they hadn't made any plans for meetings or organized events before April 14.

Law Enforcement Takes Handgun Stunt Seriously

Marshall county sheriff's department, Pennington county sheriff's department, Thief River Falls police department and Minnesota state highway patrol officers responded to a call from Marshall county March 28 to locate and stop a vehicle carrying an individual who waved a pistol at another vehicle.

Marshall county sheriff's department said the incident would probably turn out to be a very costly prank for Dale Hanson, 22, Lancaster, who was arrested just inside the Pennington county line.

Marshall county officials said they received a call at about 7:45 p.m. March 28 from a Strandquist resident that a passenger in an orange car pointed a handgun at his vehicle while it was passing him. The incident took place about one-and-a-half miles north of Newfolden on highway 59.

Hanson was arrested without incident. He has been charged in Marshall county with assault in the fifth degree and possesson of a dangerous weapon in a motor vehicle. The driver of the vehicle, Carl Swenson of Thief River Falls was not charged with any violation. The recovered weapon was not loaded.

Workshop On Key Employee Coverage Set For April 15

Thief River Falls AVTI and Gumphrey Learning centers are co-sponsoring a six-hour continuing education program in insurance on Wednesday, April 15.

The program will be held at the Thief River Falls AVTI, meeting from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. "Key Employee Coverage" is the topic, and will take an in-depth look at the different applications of key employee insurance. It clearly explains the income and estate taxation of benefits paid at an employee's death.

The format makes learning easy and totally flexible. Any business can suffer from the sudden loss of a key employee. There is, therefore, a great need for life insurance coverage of key employees and the contributions they make to their firms; whether the employee is a sole proprietorship, partnership or a close corporation.

The fee of $60 includes noon meal and program materials. Preregistration is required by contacting Adult Extension, Thief River Falls AVTI, Highway One East, Thief River Falls, MN 56701; (218) 681-5424 or in Minnesota Toll-Free 1-800-222-AVTI.

Libraries Serve 15.5 Million In An Average Week

If April 5-11 is an average week, America's libraries will serve 15.5 million people. The libraries will provide consumer information, tax forms, resources for career improvement, vacation planning, homemaking ideas and answers to questions. Public libraries will loan over 22 million items — not only books, but videocassettes, records and tapes, magazines, paperbacks, even computer software.

But April 5-11 is not just an average week, it's National Library Week. Libraries throughout the country are joining forces to remind Americans to "Take Time to Read."

Research shows that children who have been exposed to books and reading at an early age have a better chance to succeed in school. Libraries aim to help fight America's growing illiteracy problem by emphasizing family reading activities to give children a head start. Local libraries offer story hours and other programs for children and families year round, plus a variety of special events during the summer months to keep children reading and learning when school's out.

Many libraries are helping functionally illiterate adults learn to read by providing basic reading materials and tutoring assistance.

For millions of Americans, reading is a way of life and the library is a primary resource for education, information and recreation. That's why congress has proclaimed 1987 "The Year of the Reader." Your local library invites you to visit during National Library Week, April 5-11, and to take time to read all year long.

ARC Suggests Ways To Avoid Exposure To Lead Poisoning

Lead-based paint, car batteries, and leaded gasoline — common elements in many homes and communities — can lead to mental retardation and other disabilities in young children.

Lead poisoning is one of the preventable causes of mental retardation, according to the Association for Retarded Citizens (ARC) Minnesota. It gradually affects the health and development of children who were born without disabilities, particularly children under the age of five.

The ARC recommends several ways to reduce exposure to lead:

1) Encourage people to use unleaded gasoline.

2) Scrape or strip areas or items that have been painted with lead-based paint, because young children may chew on loose chips of paint or put items in their mouths.

3) Remove old car batteries from areas where children play.

4) Teach young children to wash their hands frequently, especially before eating.

5) Don't allow children to eat dirt, snow, or icicles.

March has bee proclaimed by Governor Perpich and President Reagan as Mental Retardation month. For information about other ways to prevent mental retardation, call or write the ARC Minnesota, 3225 Lyndale Avenue South, Minneapolis, MN 55408, (612) 827-5641 or Toll Free 1-800-582-5256.

Case Dismissed

Bemidji — Judge William Kalar dismissed a case in the midst of a jury trial April 1, maintaining that the state had failed to prove crucial evidence in its prosecution of Charlene Lois Kingbird. Kingbird, 20 of Bemidji, had been charged with third-degree burglary in connection with an October, 1985, incident at the E-Z Shop store in Bemidji. Assistant county attorney Tim Faver, prosecutor, said clothing Kingbird was wearing at the time of her arrest apparently was bagged with clothing belonging to another defendant in the case who has already pleaded guilty. Police officers preparing two or three weeks ago for an anticipated move to the new law enforcement center, reportedly disposed of the clothing, believing it to belong to Kingbird's co-defendant. Without the clothing, Kalar felt the jury would have insufficient evidence to decide the matter. Public defender Paul Kief represented Kingbird.

As a member of the U.S. Indoor team, Tricia could participate in both. ### Quite A Parade!

Red Lake Falls — A chase near Oklee March 24 involving sheriff's deputies and three Redby residents resulted in the arrest of Kathleen L. Strong, 30, the driver of the vehicle, Abraham Smith, Jr., 50, and Gerald Strong, 40. Sheriff's deputies stopped the 1971 sedan just north of Oklee on Red Lake county road 5 because of erratic driving. As the driver, Kathleen Strong, was being questioned, Smith slid into the driver's seat and drove the vehicle away. The car was pursued north by four Red Lake county sheriff's vehicles, as well as one from the Pennington county sheriff's department and one from the Minnesota State Highway Patrol. After entering Pennington county, Smith turned onto an unmarked gravel road and then into a field approach where the vehicle became mired in a muddy field. He and passenger Gerald Strong were then taken into custody. At March 25 court appearances, Kathleen Strong pleaded guilty to driving under the influence of alcohol, driving after revocation, and allowing an open container of alcohol in a vehicle, and was sentenced to 45 days in the Northwest Regional Correction Center in Crookston; Gerald Strong pleaded guilty to obstructing legal process and was sentenced to 20 days or $100 fine; and Abraham Smith pleaded innocent to driving under the influence of alcohol, driving after revocation, and fleeing an officer.
